Advisory Business

We are an investment adviser registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"). We are registered with the SEC even though we have less than $100 million in assets under management, because we are headquartered in Wyoming, and Wyoming does not regulate investment advisers at the state level. We provide investment advisory services primarily to individuals and their trusts, estates, and charitable organizations. We also provide advice to businesses as well as to pension and profit sharing plans. Advice and recommendations are tailored to the individual needs of our clients. Clients may impose restrictions on investing in certain securities, industries, and counties, pursuant to certain Full Discretionary Trading Authorizations signed by each client.

As of January 31, 2014, we had approximately $21,000,000 under management on a discretionary basis and $14,000,000 under management on a non-discretionary basis.

We were formed in January 2007 and are privately owned by David A. Nagler.

Fees and Compensation

The basic fee schedule, which is negotiable, is:

Assets under Management per Household	Fee Rate
Less than $500,000	1.50%
$500,001 - $1,000,000	1.25%
$1,000,001 and above	1.00%

Fees quoted are annual and charged quarterly in advance. We also typically charge a minimum annual fee of $10,000, though this minimum may also be negotiable at our discretion. At inception, an initial partial calendar quarter and at the next full calendar quarter fees will be charged. After the first full quarter's fees are paid, subsequent quarterly fees may reflect a proportional amount of the $10,000 minimum annual fee.

For services rendered in connection with advising clients on matters not involving securities and furnishing investment advice through consultants not included in managing the investment advisory accounts, we charge $250 per hour plus expenses, if any, with a minimum retainer of six hours per quarter.

A client may terminate the advisory relationship at any time by submitting written notice. If we receive notice of termination within five (5) business days of the signing of the advisory agreement, services will be terminated without penalty (i.e., no fees are due and any fees already paid will be returned to the client). Termination of services will not affect the liabilities or obligations of the parties arising out of transactions initiated prior to termination. All written notices of termination under the advisory agreement shall be delivered by hand, first class mail, e-mail, facsimile transmission, or by certified mail to the addresses set forth in the advisory agreement.

We shall never have custody, except for authorized fees, of any client funds or securities, as the services of a qualified and independent custodian will be used for these asset management services. In addition to our fees, clients' assets may be subject to custodial fees, transaction fees, and mutual funds fees such as "12b-1" fees. We do not share in any portion of the brokerage fees/transaction charges imposed by the custodian. Clients may at their option purchase investment products through other brokers or agents that are not affiliated with us.

Performance Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

We do not charge performance-based fees, which are fees based on a share of capital gains on or capital appreciation of client assets.

Types of Clients

We provide investment advisory services primarily to individuals and their trusts, estates, and charitable organizations. We also provide advice to businesses as well as to pension and profit sharing plans. We have a minimum investment per household of $1 million. This may, however, be negotiated at our discretion.

Method of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

We employ a number of different security analysis methods including fundamental, charting, and technical and cyclical analysis. Our main sources of information include research materials prepared by others and financial publications. We use corporate rating and timing services, and we also may review Annual Reports, prospectuses, SEC filings, and company press releases. We may review companies' financial statements, management, competitors and markets. We also consider the industry, economy, political and competitive advantages of investments. We advise on a number of types of investments including exchange-listed securities, over-the-counter securities, foreign issuer securities, warrants, corporate debt securities, commercial paper, certificates of deposit, municipal securities, variable life insurance, variable annuities, mutual fund shares, U.S. government securities, options, partnership interests in real estate and oil and gas, Rule 144 transactions, and 10b5-1 plans. We may advise clients on any other type of investment deemed appropriate based on the client's stated goals and objectives.

Our investment strategies are based upon each client's stated objectives. We may use any of the following investment approaches to implement our investment advice: long-term purchases (securities held at least a year), short-term purchases (securities sold within a year), trading (securities sold within 30 days), and short sales. We also conduct option trading and engage in margin transactions for appropriate clients.

All investments bear risk. Therefore, clients must understand that investing involves the risk of reduction in value of their portfolio, including the possible loss of principal. The actual total return and principal value will fluctuate so that the account values, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. We do not generally structure portfolios to avoid short-term losses in net assets due to short-term fluctuations in the financial markets. We do not and cannot control markets nor can we prevent short-term fluctuations in security values.

Option trading involves a risk of losing an entire investment in a short amount of time so is not appropriate for all investors. Clients should be aware that short term purchases and frequent trading may result in increased brokerage fees and increased trading costs and taxes. Short sales also have the risk of large losses. Investing in any security involves risk that clients must be prepared to bear.

Disciplinary Information

Investment advisors are required to disclose legal or disciplinary events material to a client's evaluation. In 2007, the National Association of Securities Dealers initiated a regulatory action against David Nagler alleging that Mr. Nagler borrowed $3,000 from a friend and client without permission of his employer at the time, Citigroup (Smith Barney) and Morgan Stanley. Mr. Nagler was not aware at the time of the loan that it was against firm policy to borrow money from clients, and the loan was repaid with interest, in less than thirty days, to the satisfaction of the client. It was also alleged that Mr. Nagler misrepresented the reason for termination, but Mr. Nagler disputes this allegation. These matters were settled without an admission or denial of the allegations, and Mr. Nagler was suspended for 20 days and fined $10,000, the imposition of which were suspended until such time as Mr. Nagler seeks reassociation with a Financial Industry Regulatory Authority Member firm.

In 2002, Mark Boutote, Sr. was the subject of a censure issued by the New York Stock Exchange Division of Enforcement dated October 24, 2002. It was determined that Mr. Boutote had violated a rule by compensating an employee of another organization in excess of $200 per year for services rendered without the prior written consent of the other employee's firm. The unanimous hearing panel expressly noted that the other organization was aware of the arrangement, and that Mr. Boutote had received oral permission to compensate the employee. Mr. Boutote was unaware at the time that any further consent was required beyond the oral consent of the other firm.

Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

We are not and individuals associated with us do not have any material relationship or arrangement with any broker-dealer or any other financial industry entity.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

We have adopted a code of ethics that sets forth standards of conduct and required compliance with securities laws. A copy of our code of ethics is available to any client or prospective client upon request.

We may buy or sell securities that we also recommend to clients. That creates a conflict of interest. In such case, client transactions are always made first. We have a duty to clients to exercise our authority and responsibility for the benefit of our clients, to place client interests first, and to refrain from having outside interests that conflict with client interests. We must avoid any circumstances that might adversely affect or appear to affect our duty of complete loyalty to our clients.

We have a policy of periodically reviewing personal securities transactions to ensure that our policies are followed and client interests are placed first.

Brokerage Practices

We may suggest the broker or dealer to be used for transactions, custody and most clearing. From time to time, we may affect transactions at brokerage firms other than a client's principal custodian, through a prime broker service. We suggest brokerage firms based on their platform's size, capacity, name recognition, and commission rates that are beneficial to clients. Moreover, we consider which firms provide the best execution and service for client transactions. "Best execution" is determined on a trade-by-trade basis, and should result in the best qualitative execution, not necessarily the lowest possible commission cost. In determining which broker-dealers provide clients the best service, we consider the full range and quality of a broker-dealer's services, including, but not limited to, execution capability, the value of research provided, commission rates, financial responsibility and resources, and responsiveness to us and effectiveness in clearing and settling trades.

We receive various services, research, and products from various firms, including trading platforms, which allow us to provide services to our clients. This may create an incentive for us to recommend a firm and is a conflict of interest. We have a fiduciary duty to our clients and put our clients' interests first.

Clients have the final authority of where their assets are to be held. Clients may direct us to use one or more particular brokers for the transactions in their accounts. Clients who want to use a particular broker should understand that this may impact cost. This arrangement may also prevent us from obtaining the most favorable net price and execution. Therefore, when directing brokerage business, clients should consider whether the commission expenses and execution, clearance and settlement capabilities that they will obtain through their broker are adequately favorable in comparison to those that we would otherwise obtain for our clients.

We may aggregate multiple orders of the same security. This is commonly known as “block trading”. Typically, we will decide to block trade when doing so will reduce the costs of the transaction for our clients. Each client participating in the block trade receives the same price per share, which is the average price per share, and pays a proportionate share of the transaction costs. Accounts owned by us or individuals associated with our firm may participate in block trading with client accounts; however, they will not be given preferential treatment. Moreover, our policy forbids New Line Capital or any of its employees from purchasing or selling any given security within two business days before any client.

Review of Accounts

David Nagler reviews all client accounts under our management no less than monthly, and more typically, weekly. Reviews assess gains and losses in individual positions and the portfolio, and security and sector concentration. Reviews are triggered by any purchase or sale of a holding as well as events likely to materially influence markets or upon request.

The custodian of the clients’ accounts will send statements to clients at least monthly. Clients may also at their option review their accounts on-line.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

We do not receive any economic benefits (other than normal compensation) from any person for providing our services. We do not receive fees from other professionals for referrals we may provide.

Custody

We do not have custody of client assets except to the extent that clients may authorize us to debit fees directly from their accounts. In that case, the client must provide written authorization permitting the custodian to debit our fees from the client’s account. The custodian will send monthly statements to clients.

Investment Discretion

We are authorized to purchase and sell securities consistent with the client's stated investment objectives and risk tolerance pursuant to the Investment Advisory Agreement. We obtain Full Discretionary Trading Authorizations from all clients before assuming authority to trade client accounts. Certain investments require additional written client consent.

Voting Proxies on Client Securities

If a client chooses to have us vote the proxies, we will do so in the client's best interest, without regard to our interests. Generally, we vote proxies on a case-by-case basis, and, as a general rule, we vote proxies with management unless there are strong compelling reasons not to do so. Clients should contact us for a complete copy of our proxy voting policies and procedures.

Clients may contact us in writing to direct how we should vote their proxies. Clients may obtain information on how their proxies were voted by making a written request to us.

Financial Information

We are not required to provide further financial information because we: (i) do not solicit pre-payment of more than $1,200 in fees per client, six months in advance; and (ii) have not been the subject of a bankruptcy petition at any time during the past 10 years. We do not have any financial condition that is likely to impair our ability to meet our contractual commitments to our clients.
