Professional Designations Qualifications

- Certified Public Accountant (USA)
- Chartered Professional Accountant: Chartered Accountant (Canada)

A Certified Public Accountant is an accountant certified by a state examining board as having fulfilled the requirements of state law to be a public accountant. Abbreviation: CPA

Each state in the USA has a “State Board of Accountancy” that is responsible for licensing Certified Public Accountants who practice in that state. Each board issues rules that govern what a person must do in order to become a licensed CPA. In general, state boards require the following:

- A total of 150 semester credits from a college or university whose accreditation is accepted by the state
- A minimum of a bachelor’s degree
- A specified number of accounting courses
- A specified number of business courses

Once a state or jurisdiction Board of Accountancy determines that a candidate has met the requirements for sitting for the CPA Exam, the candidate is eligible to complete the examination.

After passing the CPA Exam, applicants must successfully complete an in-depth ethics course of study and successfully complete an ethics examination established by the state board of accountancy.

The experience requirements for obtaining a CPA license are determined by each state's Board of Accountancy. In order to maintain a CPA license, most state boards of accountancy require CPAs to participate in a specific number of continuing professional education hours within a specified period of time. CPA licenses are renewed annually.

A Chartered Professional Accountant: Chartered Accountant designation is earned by accounting professionals in many countries around the world outside of the United States. A Chartered Professional Accountant: Chartered Accountant (CA) designation typically proves the holder has qualifications to audit financial statements and business practices as well as offer financial advisory services to clientele. The equivalent to a CA designation in the USA is the CPA. A Chartered Professional Accountant is a professional designation terminology that replaces the Chartered Accountant designation granted by the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants.
