Huff CM has served as the investment adviser for an issuer of collateralized bond obligations (the “CBO”), and may in the future serve as investment adviser for other issuers of collateralized bond obligations or other accounts.

The Firm provides its clients with discretionary investment advisory services. The Firm may provide clients with advisory services on a wide array of investments, including but not limited to corporate debt securities of any kind, equity and equity-related securities, bank debt, commercial paper, United States or other government securities, credit default swaps, interests in master limited partnerships, bankers acceptances, certificates of deposit, and repurchase agreements. The Firm provides investment advisory services utilizing a fundamental approach which includes both qualitative and quantitative analyses in evaluating potential investments. We do not provide custodian services nor do we issue any publications or reports for fee or subscription.

The Firm is generally granted broad investment authority with respect to the management of the accounts of its clients. The Firm provides investment advisory services based on the investment objectives, risk profile, financial situation and cash flow needs of each client, as reflected in the investment management agreement and/or other documents that apply to each client. These documents may contain investment guidelines or restrictions with respect to the types or amounts of securities or other financial instruments that may be purchased or sold for the client’s account. The Firm may pursue different investment strategies for different clients.

The Firm may in the future provide advisory services, either on a discretionary or non-discretionary basis, to other managed accounts and/or private investment funds or other investment vehicles.

The Firm does not participate in any wrap fee programs.

WRH Partners II is a limited liability company founded in 2000 by William R. Huff. Mr. Huff and JJWA Asset Partners, L.P. are the principal owners of WRH Partners II. WRH Partners II is the general partner and investment manager for The Huff Alternative Fund, L.P. (“The Alternative Fund”) and The Huff Alternative Parallel Fund, L.P. (“The Parallel Fund”), each of which are private funds (the “Partnerships”). WRH Partners II is generally granted broad investment authority with respect to the management of the Partnerships, in accordance with the governing documents of each of the private funds. WRH Partners II may, in the future, serve as investment manager for other private funds.

The Partnerships seek to invest principally in private equity, mezzanine and below investment grade private placements of debt, and in restructuring situations. WRH Partners II acts as investment manager to the Partnerships. The Alternative Fund's limited partners are exclusively tax-exempt institutional investors. The Parallel Fund's limited partners are sophisticated taxable persons and entities. The Partnerships' limited partner interests have been privately placed pursuant to available exemptions from registration, and the Partnerships are not required to register as an investment company.

WRH Partners II manages the Partnerships in accordance with the terms and conditions of each private fund's limited partnership agreement. As of December 31, 2014, the amount of assets WRH Partners II managed on a discretionary basis was about $356,550,840.

Item 5 Fees and Compensation

W.R. Huff CM generally charges a fee of 0.5% of net asset value per annum. Fees are based on net asset value of the accounts at the end of each calendar quarter. Fees are billed to clients and are payable at the end of each calendar quarter for services rendered during such calendar quarter. As required by certain of its institutional clients, fees may be based on an agreed upon formula measuring performance or capital appreciation of accounts in compliance with Rule 205-3 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended. Contracts may be terminated by either party upon specified written notice to the other party.

Performance-based compensation arrangements in general may have the potential to create an incentive for an investment manager to favor those accounts for which a performance-based fee is received. The Firm believes that its team approach to portfolio management (see Item 13) and its policies and procedures, including allocation policies and procedures which seek to ensure that allocations are fair among clients over time, reasonably address any potential conflict of interest created by performance-based compensation arrangements.

Accounts for individual persons are subject to negotiation.

WRH Partners II generally charges an annual management fee to the private funds that it manages. The fee has ranged between 0.5% and 1% of the limited partners' aggregate commitments, depending upon where in time the Partnerships are in their respective terms. Once the terms of the Partnerships were extended beyond the tenth anniversary of the final closing, the annual management fee became 0.75% of the most recent appraised value of the remaining assets until termination of the Partnerships.

In addition, WRH Partners II may earn performance-based compensation. Under the terms of the applicable limited partnership agreements, WRH Partners II may realize a carried interest allocation as specified in the applicable limited partnership agreements, after the partners have been allocated net realized capital gains and income equal to a specified hurdle rate on their capital contributions. Once the hurdle rate has been met, net realized capital gains and income will be allocated 50% to the general partner and 50% to all partners in proportion to their respective commitments until the general partner has received a cumulative 10% incentive allocation of the aggregate net realized capital gains and income. Thereafter, net realized capital gains and income will be allocated 90% to all partners in proportion to their respective commitments and 10% to the general partner. Further information may be found in the applicable governing documents for each private fund.

The Partnerships generally bear certain other fees, expenses and costs which are related to the maintenance of the private funds or related to the acquisition, carrying and disposition of investments, including but not limited to expenses related to the acquisition, holding, sale or other disposition of any investment (to the extent not reimbursed by portfolio companies), legal, consulting, insurance, accounting, appraisal, audit and tax preparation costs, and finder's fees and similar costs, as well as other expenses principally incurred in connection with unconsummated transactions for which the Partnerships are not reimbursed by the prospective portfolio companies and litigation-related and indemnification expenses. Further information may be found in the applicable governing documents for each private fund.

Item 6 Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

See Item 5.

Item 7 Types of Clients

The Firm may provide advisory services to pensions and profit sharing plans, state, municipal, and other government entities, endowments and foundations, trusts, corporations and other types of businesses, and individuals (including high net worth individuals).

Item 8 Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

The Firm provides investment advisory services utilizing a fundamental approach which includes both qualitative and quantitative analyses in evaluating potential investments. Research is one of the most important elements in the Firm's investment process. One of the most significant risks in investing in high yield and other credit investments is credit risk. The Firm seeks to minimize this risk by employing a fundamental, detailed research effort.

WRH Partners II focuses on opportunistic investments, seeking risk-adjusted returns from capital gains and income, principally from private equity investments, but which may range from private debt and equity to public securities, from late stage venture capital/early stage growth to bank loan participations to distressed securities, and from domestic to international opportunities.

Material Risks

The task of identifying investment opportunities and managing such investments is challenging. There can be no assurance that the Firm will be able to choose any particular investment that will be able to generate positive returns. Clients should be prepared to bear a risk of loss and should carefully consider, among other factors, the following material risks involved with the Firm's investment strategies.

Investment and Trading Risks in General. All investments risk the loss of capital. No guarantee or representation is made that investment portfolios managed by the Firm will be successful, and investment results may vary substantially over time.

Fixed Income Investments. The Firm's investment strategy focuses primarily on high yield bonds, loans and other fixed-income securities and instruments, including, without limitation, second lien loans, mezzanine debt, unsecured debt, and other "higher yielding" (and, therefore, higher risk) debt securities and instruments. Such securities and instruments are primarily below "investment grade" or non-rated, and may face ongoing uncertainties and exposure to adverse business, financial, or economic conditions which could lead to the obligor's inability to meet timely interest and principal payments. The market prices, if any, of such investments are also subject to abrupt and erratic market movements and changes in liquidity and above-average price volatility, and the spread between the bid and asked prices of such investments may be greater than those prevailing in other more liquid markets.

Credit Risk. Risks applicable to investments made by the Firm include the possibilities that an obligor may be unable to meet its debt service obligations and/or may experience declining creditworthiness and potential for insolvency during periods of rising interest rates and economic downturn. Further economic downturn could disrupt the market for high yield bonds or leveraged loans and adversely affect the value thereof and the ability of the obligor thereunder to repay principal and interest.

Prepayments. The frequency at which prepayments (including voluntary prepayments and accelerations due to defaults) occur on bonds and loans will be affected by a variety of factors including the prevailing level of interest rates and spreads as well as economic, demographic, tax, social, legal, and other factors. The upside potential of an investment repayable at par may be limited.

Interest Rates. As interest rates rise, the value of fixed income securities may decline. Prices of fixed income securities with longer effective maturities are more sensitive to interest rate changes than those with shorter effective maturities. Accordingly, the yield of the client portfolios can be expected to be somewhat more volatile in response to changes in interest rates than shorter-term investment vehicles.

Extension Risk. Fixed income securities and loans are also subject to the risk that payment on the loans held in client portfolios will be made more slowly when interest rates are rising. This could cause the market value of the securities to decline.

Concentration. The Firm may concentrate portfolios' investments in particular sectors, industries and companies. Losses incurred in the portfolios' more concentrated positions could have a material adverse effect on the portfolios' overall financial condition. In addition, if the price of any of the portfolios' investments decreases and the Firm is unable for any reason to liquidate the position quickly or at a relatively advantageous price, the effect of such decrease on clients' portfolios would be greater than if the portfolio had not concentrated its assets in such a position.

Macroeconomic Factors. The performance of client portfolios' investments could be adversely affected by macroeconomic factors, including general economic conditions affecting capital markets and participants therein (such as the obligations on or issuers of the client portfolios' investments). Such macroeconomic factors include the recent economic downturn and continuing uncertainties affecting economies and capital markets worldwide; incidents of terrorism, political or social unrest and similar events; concerns about financial performance, accounting and other issues relating to various companies; and recent and proposed changes to laws and regulations affecting the financial industry, including banking, credit default swaps and other derivatives, mortgage lending, accounting and reporting standards.

Highly-Leveraged Borrowers. The issuers of debt in which the Firm may invest are likely to be highly leveraged. A borrower's leverage may adversely impact the client portfolio in a number of ways, such as creating a greater possibility of default or bankruptcy of the borrower. It is also possible that the pledging of collateral (if any) to secure the debt could be found to constitute a fraudulent conveyance or preferential transfer which would be nullified or subordinated to the rights of other creditors of the borrower under applicable law.

Illiquid Assets. Certain investment positions in client portfolios may be illiquid. The Firm may invest in "restricted" or non-publicly traded securities and securities traded on foreign exchanges. The Firm may not be readily able to dispose of such non-publicly traded securities, and in some cases, may be contractually prohibited from disposing of such securities for a specified period of time. An exchange or regulatory authority may suspend trading in a particular security or contract, order immediate liquidation and settlement of a particular contract, or order that trading in a particular contract be conducted for liquidation only.

Equity Securities. The Firm may acquire long or short positions in common stocks, preferred stocks and convertible securities of U.S. and foreign issuers. Equity securities fluctuate in value, often based on factors unrelated to the value of the issuer of the securities. The market price of equity securities may be affected by general economic and market conditions, such as a broad decline in stock market prices, or by conditions affecting specific issuers, such as changes in earnings forecasts.

Foreign Securities Risk. Non-U.S. companies may be adversely affected by political, social and/or economic developments abroad and differences between U.S. and foreign regulatory requirements and market practices. Securities denominated in foreign currencies are subject to the risk that the value of the foreign currency will decline in relation to the U.S. dollar and transaction expenses related to foreign securities, including custody fees, are generally more costly than transaction expenses for domestic securities. Additionally, risks associated with foreign investments may be intensified in the case of investments in emerging market countries, whose political, legal, and economic systems are less developed and less stable than those of more developed nations.

Loans. Loans include fixed and floating rate loans arranged through private negotiations between one or more financial institutions and an obligor. Although loans are traded among certain financial institutions, some of the loans the Firm may invest in will be considered illiquid.

Investment in Reorganizations. The Firm may make investments in companies that are experiencing or are expected to experience severe financial difficulties, including companies undergoing reorganization. These severe financial difficulties may never be overcome and may cause such companies to become subject to bankruptcy proceedings. In such situations, the portfolio investment may be subject to the risk that a bankruptcy filing may adversely and permanently impact the value of a company and that high administrative costs may impair the value of the company. Such investments could subject client portfolios to certain additional potential liabilities that may exceed the value of the portfolios' original investment therein. Investments in distressed companies may be adversely affected by statutes relating to, among other things, fraudulent conveyances, voidable preferences, lender liability and the bankruptcy court's discretionary power to disallow, subordinate or disenfranchise particular claims.

Having a "blocking position" in a security that is subject to a plan of reorganization entails significant risks if the Firm's evaluation of the anticipated outcome of the investment situation should prove incorrect. An investment in a company involved in a reorganization proceeding entails significant risks and may be adversely impacted if the Firm's evaluation of the anticipated outcome of the investment situation should prove incorrect.

Some of the investments the Firm may make may require active monitoring and representation on official and unofficial creditors' committees for a company involved in a reorganization proceeding. Accordingly, the Firm may seek representation on such committees from time to time if the Firm, in its discretion, determines that such representation is necessary or advisable to protect or further the client portfolio's interests. Serving on an official or unofficial committee increases the possibility that the Firm will be deemed an "insider" or a "fiduciary" of the company it has so assisted and may restrict the Firm's trading of its investments in such company and exposes the person serving on the committee to litigation risks. Should such assistance be provided before a company enters bankruptcy proceedings, the bankruptcy court, under certain conditions such as a finding of fraud or inequitable conduct, may invoke the doctrine of "equitable subordination" with respect to any claim or equity interest held by client portfolios in such company and subordinate any such claim or equity interest in whole or in part to other claims or equity interests in such company. Claims of equitable subordination may also arise outside of the context of the Firm's committee activities. In addition, if representation of a creditors' committee of a company causes the Firm to be deemed an affiliate of the company, the securities of such company held by client portfolios may become restricted securities, which are not freely tradable.

Valuation Risks. Due to concentrations in particular markets and the maturities of positions that may be held by the Firm from time to time, the ultimate realizable values of client portfolio's securities and other investments may differ significantly from the interim valuations of such investments. Such differences may also be affected by the time frames within which such realization occurs. Third party pricing information of particular securities or investments in client portfolios may at times not be available. Valuations of portfolio securities and other investments, which will affect the amount of fees received by the Firm, may involve uncertainties and require judgmental determinations. If such valuations should prove incorrect, the net value of the assets of client portfolios could be adversely affected.

Reliance on the Firm. The Firm has complete discretion, subject to any investment guidelines agreed with each client, in investing the portfolio assets of each client. The success of each client's portfolio will depend, to a great extent, on the ability of the Firm to identify successful investments and strategies. The death, disability, or withdrawal of William R. Huff could have a material adverse effect on the investment results of a client portfolio.

In addition to the foregoing, the following are material risks associated with an investment in private funds managed by WRH Partners II:

Speculative Nature of Investments. Investments made by WRH Partners II are speculative. An investment in the private funds managed by WRH Partners II will involve a very high degree of risk. For example, portfolio companies may have high leverage, be in an early stage of development or have little or no operating history, operate at a loss or with substantial variations in operating results from period to period, or be insolvent or operating under bankruptcy protection. Portfolio companies may need substantial additional capital to expand or achieve a competitive position. Investments in workouts, restructurings and distressed companies have risks associated with state, federal and foreign laws relating to fraudulent conveyances, voidable preferences, lender liability and the courts' discretionary power to disallow, subordinate or disenfranchise particular claims.

Lack of Liquidity of Investments. Many investments will have no public market. WRH Partners II generally will not be able to sell investments publicly unless their sale is registered under applicable federal and state securities laws, or unless an exemption from registration is available. In some cases there may be a prohibition by contract from selling investments for a substantial period of time.

Long Term Investment Focus. While some investments may generate current income from interest or dividends, the return of capital and the realization of gains or losses will occur only on the partial or complete disposition of an investment. It is anticipated that investments may be held for many years before disposing of them. WRH Partners II may not be able to control the timing and extent of such dispositions, and can offer no assurance that they will occur at opportune times or advantageous prices.

Competitive Market for Investments. The business of identifying and structuring investments is extremely competitive, and may become even more competitive in the future. This process involves a high degree of uncertainty. WRH Partners II may compete for investment opportunities with entities that have greater resources or which may be willing to accept greater risks than the private funds. This competition may reduce the number of suitable investment opportunities available. There can be no assurance that the private funds will be able to locate and complete attractive investments that it will be able to invest all of the commitments or that WRH Partners II will identify suitable investments which satisfy the private funds' return and other objectives.

Reliance on the WRH Partners II. Only WRH Partners II manages the private funds. Limited partners will make no decisions. While WRH Partners II will use its best judgment in making decisions for the private funds, it can provide no assurance that it will make correct decisions with respect to any specific investment.

ERISA Risks. Where appropriate and applicable, WRH Partners II will seek to conduct the operations of private funds that it manages so as to qualify as VCOCs under the U.S. Department of Labor's Plan Assets Regulation. In so doing, those private funds may be precluded from making some investments that might otherwise be suitable. In addition, these private funds must maintain a mix of assets that lets them keep their status as VCOCs. This means the private funds may not be able to dispose of investments at a time that WRH Partners II otherwise would prefer. If the private funds were not to qualify as operating companies, the assets would constitute "plan assets" for ERISA purposes. In that situation, WRH Partners II may need to take certain actions to comply with ERISA, and which may result in losses or lower returns than otherwise might have been achieved.

Focus of Investments. WRH Partners II focuses principally on privately placed equity investments. Even with its broad investment charter, WRH Partners II does not expect that the private equity funds will have an inordinately large number of investments and the private funds will not, by themselves, constitute diversified portfolios. A loss on any one investment may substantially impact the aggregate return. Accordingly, it should be expected that the private funds will be more concentrated than other private investment funds. In addition, since WRH Partners II generally will consider only what it views as the best opportunities within a select number of sectors, the private funds may be adversely affected by problems in the underlying industries, and the decline in value of an investment may have a greater impact on overall performance than a similar-sized portfolio which contains a larger number of investments.

Leverage. Portfolio Companies may have highly leveraged capital structures. This may magnify the exposure of such investments to adverse economic factors like rising interest rates, downturns in the economy or deteriorations in the condition of a portfolio company or its industry. A portfolio company's inability to generate sufficient cash flow to service its debt could significantly reduce or even eliminate the value of the private funds' investment. Moreover, if portfolio companies are highly leveraged, they may be subject to restrictive financial and operating covenants under various credit agreements. These covenants may impair their ability to operate or finance future capital requirements and limit their flexibility in responding to changing conditions.

Lack of Control; Undivided Ownership Interest. Limited partners will not have any vote or other control or influence over the management of private investment funds managed by WRH Partners II. WRH Partners II will perform its responsibilities in accordance with the governing documents. Limited partners may remove WRH Partners in only very narrow circumstances. Further, a limited partner has no ownership interest in any particular asset of the private fund. Limited partners may not insist on an investment in, or liquidation of, any given security. They may not insist on a distribution either in-kind or in cash. WRH Partners II will have the sole right to vote proxies and grant or withhold consents with respect to investments.

Risks of Derivatives. Transactions in options, swaps, structured securities, currency transactions and other derivatives involve many risks, including a possible lack of correlation between changes in the value of such instruments and the portfolio assets (if any) being hedged, the potential illiquidity of the markets for derivative instruments, the risks arising from margin requirements and related leverage factors associated with such transactions. The private funds have a risk of loss if WRH Partners II is incorrect in its expectation of fluctuations in securities prices, interest rates, currency prices and other factors.

Distressed Investments. WRH Partners II may invest in debt and/or equity interests of companies that are highly leveraged or otherwise financially stressed. Distressed investments involve a high degree of financial risk. Distressed investments often have undesirable credit characteristics and a greater than normal risk of collectability. Issuers may be in bankruptcy or in situations where bankruptcy is anticipated. Other distressed investments may be restructured or may be anticipated to require restructuring. In a restructuring, the private funds may become obligated to commit additional capital in addition to the original commitments. Returns may, in part, depend on the ability to generate cash flows through the collection, sale, operation, restructuring and other realization of distressed investments. WRH Partners can offer no assurance with respect to the amount of cash flow that the private funds may receive from any distressed investment. Furthermore, a private fund's distressed investments may not demonstrate positive returns for an extended period, if at all. Additionally, distressed investments may not bear interest or may pay interest in the form of additional securities, not cash, for a number of years.

Disposition of Assets. As is the case with all private equity funds, the Fund has been established for a finite term. There always exists the potential that at end of the term, if the Limited Partners do not extend the term, the Fund might be forced to sell its assets, rather than being able to continue to manage them and then sell them in an orderly manner. If that occurs, as could happen with any private equity fund, the Fund might not realize full fair market value for these assets.

Item 11 Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

The Firm may, on occasion, furnish investment advice concerning, and effect transactions for clients in, securities or issuers in which one or more of our employees or related persons may have a position or interest. The Firm maintains a Code of Ethics/Personal Securities Transaction Policy (the “Policy”). Under the Policy, all personal securities transactions (for both public and private securities) are subject to an internal review and approval procedure, with the exception of certain classes of securities and transactions (such as automatic dividend reinvestment programs). In addition, each employee must, in connection with any trade subject to the Policy, annually reaffirm compliance with the Policy. A copy of the Policy will be made available to clients or prospective clients upon request.

The Firm or its affiliates may, on occasion, provide consulting and similar services to issuers in which our clients are invested. The services may include, but are not limited to, providing management or business turnaround consulting services. The issuers may compensate and/or reimburse us or our affiliates for such services. The compensation and/or reimbursement may or may not be substantial. Should a conflict arise out of any of these situations, we will seek outside counsel’s guidance to address the issue. Furthermore, in connection with the provision of services to issuers, personnel of the Firm or its affiliates may receive material, non-public (“inside”) information regarding an issuer. In accordance with applicable law, the Firm will not effect and/or recommend transactions for clients on the basis of any inside information that may come into its possession. Should the Firm come into possession of material non-public information, it will abide by applicable law and regulations concerning such information in connection with the performance of its activities.

Item 12 Brokerage Practices

In effecting portfolio transactions for the Firm's clients, the Firm seeks to obtain best execution under the circumstances. Accordingly, the Firm will select and evaluate dealers and brokers based on a variety of factors. Relevant considerations may include the full range and quality of broker-dealer services, such as the value of research, investment ideas, execution capability, level of mark-up or commission, financial responsibility, and responsiveness to and history with us. The determinative factor is the best qualitative execution for the client account. Both the level of mark-up or commissions and the quality of services provided by dealers or brokers will be monitored to ensure that fees are reasonable and that we are receiving service in the best interests of the Firm's clients. Investment analysis, statistical data, and quotation services are some of the ancillary services that the Firm may request from a dealer or broker. These services will, in general, be used in servicing all accounts. It should be noted, however, that not all information and services received may necessarily prove useful in managing any particular account or any particular transaction.

On occasion, for a variety of reasons, the Firm may sell a security held by one client and buy it for the account of one or more other clients. In this situation, the Firm will, in good faith, effect the trade based on available information, including, among other factors, liquidity, transaction size, quotes from one or more broker-dealers which may make a market in the security, past transactions, and the reliability of the broker-dealer(s). This may result in the client paying a small spread to the dealer or broker effecting the transaction. The Firm will not affect such transactions on behalf of any client whose account is, according to federal law, governed by the provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

Transactions between client accounts will be affected through broker-dealers, and the Firm will seek to minimize transaction costs while ensuring reliable execution. Accordingly, the broker-dealer that effects the transaction may or may not be the one from which the Firm obtains price quotes. Broker-dealers with which the Firm deals are independently responsible for quoting and verifying price and complying with applicable regulations governing such transactions.

Generally, client orders will be aggregated. No client will be favored by the Firm over any other client and each client who participates in an aggregated order will participate at the average price with all transaction costs, if any, shared on a pro rata basis.

There may be times when, in the Firm's opinion, in order to achieve overall best execution when trading securities, the Firm may effect trades on an agency basis which would entail a mark-up or commission being paid that would not be paid if we went directly to a market maker. The Firm believes that, in many cases, trading through many broker dealers (including on an agency basis) helps preserve its anonymity and may disguise its overall position and strategy from market participants. This is part of an overall trading strategy aimed at achieving the best execution for all of the securities being traded over periods of time.

Item 13 Review of Accounts

An investment review of each account is conducted on a weekly basis by the portfolio managers. Reviews are held to confirm portfolios are being managed in accordance with their guidelines, goals, and objectives. Meetings are held at other times if the market or company circumstances indicate a review is necessary. All portfolios are managed using a team approach. No individual manager is assigned specific portfolios.

Every month each client receives an updated account statement. That report indicates the securities held and their market value, yield, and projected annual income. As requested by clients, portfolio managers report to clients by phone and conduct periodic meetings with clients to review investment performance and other related matters. When requested by a client, the Firm provides periodic reports concerning adherence to investment objectives and client portfolio guidelines.

WRH Partners II manages the Partnerships on a day-to-day basis. Audited financial statements are prepared for each of the Partnerships following the end of each fiscal year, and unaudited financial statements are prepared for each of the Partnerships following the end of the first three fiscal quarters, in each case in accordance with the terms of the Partnerships' limited partnership agreements.

Item 14 Client Referrals and Other Compensation

The Firm does not have any arrangements under which it compensates others for client referrals, nor does it accept economic benefits from non-clients for providing advisory services to clients.

Item 15 Custody

As General Partner of the Partnerships, WRH Partners II has access to the cash and securities of the Partnerships. Consequently, under the SEC Custody Rule WRH Partners II has custody over the cash and securities in the Partnerships. WRH Partners II intends to comply with the custody rule by distributing audited financial statements to the Partnerships' investors within 120 days of the end of the Partnerships' respective fiscal years.

Item 16 Investment Discretion

The Firm has discretionary authority to determine the type, amount, and price of securities and investments to be bought and sold on behalf of each client account, including the selection of, and commissions paid to, broker-dealers, subject to any investment objectives, policies and guidelines that may be requested by a client. W.R. Huff CM generally enters into a written investment management agreement with each client granting such discretionary authority. WRH Partners II enters into a limited partnership agreement which grants such discretionary authority over each private fund that it manages.

Item 17 Voting Client Securities

The Firm has adopted policies and procedures in accordance with Rule 206(4)-6 and Rule 204-2(c) (2) under the Advisers Act. Pursuant to these policies and procedures, the firm will act on proxies in a manner that is consistent with the best interests of the client.

The Firm monitors the performance, activities, and events related to the issuers in which its clients are invested. When exercising its voting authority over client securities, the Firm considers such information, and evaluates other issues that could have an impact on the value of the security. The Firm analyzes proxy issues and votes proxies in the best interests of the client and consistent with the Firm's duties of loyalty and care as the client's fiduciary. The interest of the client is the sole consideration in determining how proxies can be voted. While there may be limited circumstances in which it is in the best interests of the client to refrain from voting proxies, the Firm in each instance will give careful consideration to the issues upon which proxy votes are sought. Generally, clients do not have the ability to direct the vote in a particular solicitation.

The Firm's compliance officer is responsible for identifying potential conflicts of interest concerning the proxy voting process, and evaluates the circumstances on a case-by-case basis. In cases where it is determined that a potential conflict exists, the compliance officer will disclose the nature of the conflict to the affected client(s), disclose the specific matter under proposal to the shareholders, and obtain the client(s) consent before voting.

Clients may obtain a copy of the Firm's proxy voting policies and procedures upon request.
