Item 4 – Advisory Business

Oberon Asset Management LLC (“Oberon”), a Delaware limited liability company with its principal place of business in New York, was established in February 2002. Oberon has been registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) since April 19, 2010. Daniel Baldini, a CFA Charterholder, is our owner and serves as Managing Member and Chief Compliance Officer.

We provide investment advisory services on a discretionary basis (meaning investment decisions are made without prior approval) to our clients which include individuals, trusts and retirement accounts with separately managed accounts, and a pooled investment vehicle – Oberon I, L.P. (“Oberon I”). We do not participate in any wrap fee program.

Oberon manages accounts in accordance with its overall investment strategy, which primarily involves a long-term, value-oriented approach to investing in publicly traded securities of issuers identified through fundamental analysis. Typical investments are equity securities of U.S. and non-U.S. issuers but may also include debt securities, mutual funds, exchange-traded funds, registered investment company shares, U.S. and foreign government securities, derivatives and other securities.

Our advisory services are provided based on the investment objective of the client and are governed by restrictions that are contained in the client’s investment management agreement or, in the case of Oberon I, the governing documents.

As of December 31, 2014, Oberon managed approximately $98.2 million on a discretionary basis and $0 on a non-discretionary basis.

Item 5 – Fees and Compensation

Oberon charges each client an investment advisory fee based on the market value of the client’s assets under management. For separately managed account clients, the specific manner in which fees are charged is established in a client’s investment management agreement. Generally, fees are charged on a quarterly basis, in arrears, at the rate of .25% (equal to 1% annually) of average assets. In most instances, the calculation of the value of the account assets excludes mutual fund investments and cash. The initial and final quarterly fees are prorated for any period that is less than a full quarter. We reserve the right to determine the annual rate or basis of payment with any managed account client or prospective managed account client. As a result, fees may be negotiable under certain circumstances or for certain managed account clients. Clients may elect to be billed for fees or to authorize us to deduct fees from their accounts through our independent custodian.

With respect to Oberon I, Oberon is paid a quarterly management fee, in arrears, at the rate of .125% (equal to 0.5% annually) of the average balance in the capital account of each limited partner. The initial and final quarterly fees are prorated for any period that is less than a full quarter. In addition, OAM GP I LLC ("OAM GP"), the general partner of Oberon I and an affiliate of Oberon with common ownership, receives an annual performance allocation equal to 12.5% of the aggregate net profits (realized and unrealized) allocated to each limited partner's capital account during such year. The performance allocation is made at the end of each calendar year and when an investor withdraws from Oberon I. The performance allocation of net profits from each investor's capital account is subject to a loss carryforward limitation such that no performance allocation is made until prior net losses allocated to such investor are recouped. The performance allocation is adjusted to take into account distributions to and withdrawals by an investor.

Client assets may be invested in money market mutual funds, exchange-traded funds or other registered investment companies. In these cases the client bears its pro rata share of the investment management fee and other fees of the fund in which the assets are invested. The management and other fees of the fund in which assets are invested are described in the fund's offering documents and, in some cases, are in addition to the advisory fee paid to Oberon. In no instance do we receive any portion of these management and other fees. Clients will also incur brokerage and other transaction costs. Item 12 describes the factors that Oberon considers in selecting brokers for client transactions and determining the reasonableness of their compensation (e.g., commissions).

We do not accept any commission or other compensation for the purchase or sale of securities or other investment products.

Item 6 – Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

Oberon provides investment management services to both separately managed accounts and Oberon I. The managed accounts pay a higher investment management fee, however, Oberon I additionally pays performance-based compensation, as described in Item 5. This performance-based compensation has the potential to materially exceed the differential in management fees. Side-by-side management of these accounts creates a conflict of interest as there is an incentive for Oberon to favor the account for which we receive a performance-based fee in the allocation of investment opportunities. Additionally, a performance-based fee may create an incentive for us to make riskier or more speculative investments than we would otherwise make.

To mitigate these conflicts, our policies and procedures provide that investment personnel make decisions based on the best interests of clients and in accordance with their investment objectives without consideration of Oberon's financial interests. We have adopted trade allocation and order aggregation policies that seek to allocate investments to client accounts in a fair and equitable manner.

Item 7 – Types of Clients

Oberon provides portfolio management services to individuals, trusts, pension and profit sharing plans and pooled investment vehicles.

We require a minimum investment of $1 million to open an account. This requirement may be waived in certain cases.

Item 8 – Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

We typically manage client accounts in accordance with our overall investment strategy, which involves a long-term, value-oriented approach to investing in publicly traded securities of issuers identified through fundamental analysis. A value-oriented strategy involves identifying securities that we believe are undervalued by the market. Fundamental analysis involves analyzing financial statements, management, products or services, competitors, markets and outlooks. During the course of our analysis we review publicly available information, including information provided by an issuer as well as research provided by third parties, meet with company management and interview competitors, suppliers and customers.

Depending on the investment, we will derive estimates of value using net present value or internal rate of return calculations, as well as break-up or liquidation value analysis, conservatively calculated. We consider cash flow, earnings, book value and replacement cost in valuing investments, shifting emphasis by industry and situation. We aim to invest at a substantial discount to a conservatively estimated range of underlying values.

Oberon's managed accounts invest primarily in equity securities and, to a lesser extent, debt securities. Oberon I invests in equity and debt securities and, occasionally, derivatives such as options, warrants and futures. Derivatives are used as a form of hedging, in order to maintain flexibility and for profit. The equity and debt securities in which Oberon invests include securities of domestic and foreign issuers which may be listed or traded on domestic or foreign exchanges or traded in domestic or foreign over-the-counter ("OTC") markets.

Our investment strategy involves risk of loss and clients must be prepared to bear the loss of their entire investment.

The material risks relating to our investment strategy and methods of analysis include the following:

- Market risk: Investments in publicly traded securities may be sensitive to movements in the equity and debt markets generally. The prices of securities in client portfolios may decline, perhaps severely, over short or long periods.
- Investment manager risk: Our investment decisions may cause our strategy to underperform broad market indices. We may be incorrect in assessing a particular industry or a company, including the anticipated earnings growth of a company. Our estimates of underlying value may prove optimistic. We may not buy chosen securities at the lowest possible prices or sell securities at the highest possible prices.

- Small-to-medium sized companies risk: We often invest in equity securities of small-to-medium sized companies that we believe have potential for capital appreciation significantly greater than that of the market averages. Such companies may have limited product lines, markets, or financial resources and may be dependent on a limited management group. Securities of small-to-medium sized companies may be traded in the OTC markets. While OTC markets have grown rapidly in recent years, many OTC securities trade less frequently and in smaller volumes than exchange-listed securities. The values of these securities may fluctuate more sharply than exchange-listed securities and we may experience some difficulty in acquiring or disposing of positions in these securities at prevailing market prices.
- Liquidity risk: Pursuant to our investment strategy, we periodically invest in securities that are thinly traded. This may be because the issuer has a relatively small market capitalization, the issuer's ownership is concentrated, or (for example, in the case of a bond) the issue is relatively small. Thinly traded securities are less liquid. This means that these securities could be subject to larger than average price swings and may be difficult to sell at reasonable prices in a short timeframe.
- Value-oriented strategy risk: Our value-oriented approach involves investing in securities that appear undervalued by the market. There is a risk that the market may continue to undervalue these investments and that they may fail to appreciate, or even decline, contrary to our expectations.

Oberon invests primarily in equity and debt securities of U.S. and non-U.S. issuers. In connection with managing Oberon I, we may also invest in other securities and instruments, including derivatives. The material risks relating to the types of securities include the following:

- Equity securities: The value of equity securities fluctuates in response to issuer-specific, market, economic and geo-political developments. Fluctuations can be dramatic over the short- as well as long-term and individual equity securities can react differently to these developments. Issuer, political or economic developments can affect a single issuer, issuers within an industry or economic sector or geographic region, or the market as a whole.
- Debt securities: The value of debt securities also fluctuates in response to issuer-specific, market, economic and geo-political developments and fluctuations can be dramatic. Debt securities are particularly prone to interest rate risk, which is the risk that interest rates will rise, causing the value of fixed-rate debt securities to fall. In the case of municipal bonds there is the risk that the issuer may not be able to make interest or principal payments in periods of economic difficulty as well as the risk that changes in the tax code could affect the after-tax value of interest income.

Debt securities in which Oberon invests may or may not be rated by rating agencies such as Moody's Investor Service, Inc. ("Moody's") or Standard & Poor's Ratings Services ("S&P"), and, if rated, such rating may range from the very highest to the very lowest. Securities rated below investment grade normally provide a yield or yield to maturity that is significantly higher than that of investment-grade issues, but are predominately speculative with respect to capacity to pay interest and repay principal. The market prices of lower-rated securities (including unrated securities of comparable quality) generally fluctuate more than those of higher-rated securities, although they may be less sensitive to interest rate changes. In addition, the lower rating reflects a greater possibility that the financial condition of the issuer, or adverse changes in general economic conditions, or both, or an unanticipated rise in interest rates, may impair the ability of the issuer to make payments of principal and interest. The inability (or perceived inability) of issuers to make timely payment of interest and principal would likely make the market prices of fixed-income securities held by Oberon more volatile and could limit our ability to sell them at prices approximating our estimates of their values.

- Non-U.S. securities: Securities traded in foreign markets and securities traded in U.S. markets of issuers with substantial foreign operations can involve additional risks relating to political, economic or regulatory conditions in foreign countries. Foreign securities are normally denominated and traded in foreign currencies and the value of these securities may be affected favorably or unfavorably by currency exchange rates. There may be less information publicly available about a foreign company than about a U.S. company and foreign companies are not generally subject to accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards and practices comparable to those in the U.S. The securities of some foreign companies are less liquid and at times more volatile than securities of comparable U.S. companies. Foreign brokerage commissions and other fees can be higher than in the U.S. Foreign settlement procedures and trade regulations may involve certain risks and expenses not present in the settlement of domestic investments.
- Mutual funds, exchange-traded funds ("ETF") and registered investment companies: The risk of owning these securities generally reflects the risk of owning the underlying assets. Funds holding, for example, primarily commodities (such as gold) or a specific type of security (such as bonds) will have the risks associated with the commodity or type of security. Some ETFs and registered investment companies have leverage and their risks may be amplified by price movements in either the underlying assets or in the relevant overall market. Finally, all of these securities face management risk. That is, if the manager does a poor job, it could adversely affect the value of the fund, ETF or investment company.
- Derivative instruments: Derivative instruments in which Oberon I may invest, such as options, warrants and futures, can be highly volatile. The prices of derivative instruments and the investments underlying the derivative instruments may fluctuate rapidly and over wide ranges and may reflect unforeseeable events or changes in conditions, none of which can be controlled by Oberon. Investors in Oberon I should carefully review the Private Placement Memorandum for a detailed description of the associated risks.

Item 9 – Disciplinary Information

Neither Oberon nor its principals have been the subject of any disciplinary events.

Item 10 – Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

Daniel Baldini, the owner of Oberon, is the managing partner and principal owner of OAM GP, the general partner of Oberon I, which has entered into an investment management agreement with Oberon. As noted in Item 5, OAM GP receives a performance fee from Oberon I. Although the investment management fees paid by Oberon I are lower than those paid by other clients, the performance fee could result in Oberon and its owner earning a higher overall level of fees from Oberon I than from other clients. This fee arrangement creates an incentive to favor Oberon I over other clients in the allocation of investment opportunities. As noted in Item 6, we have policies and procedures designed and implemented to ensure that all clients are treated fairly and Oberon's Code of Ethics requires employees to always act in the best interests of clients.

Item 11 – Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

Oberon maintains a Code of Ethics which, among other things: (i) sets forth the standards of conduct which Oberon requires all employees to adhere to in accordance with our fiduciary obligations; (ii) addresses appropriate behavior when a conflict or potential conflict of interest arises; (iii) sets out duties of confidentiality; (iv) prohibits insider trading; (v) governs the personal securities transactions of employees; (vi) limits the giving and receipt of gifts and entertainment; and, (vii) requires employees to report any violations to the Chief Compliance Officer. Each employee is required to sign a statement that he/she has reviewed, understands and will adhere to our Code of Ethics. Failure to comply with the Code of Ethics will result in disciplinary action, up to and including termination of employment. We will provide a copy of the Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

Our Code of Ethics encompasses the following principles:

- Act with integrity, competence, diligence, respect and in an ethical manner when dealing with the public, clients, prospective clients and fellow employees.
- Act in the best interests of clients.
- Act and encourage others to act in a professional and ethical manner that will favorably reflect on themselves and Oberon.

- Make independent, non-biased investment decisions based on Oberon's research, reasonably deemed to be in-line with clients' investment objectives.
- Refrain from engaging in outside investment-related business activities.
- Maintain the confidentiality of client, investment and employee information.
- Comply with Oberon's Code of Ethics, policies and procedures and all federal securities laws.
- Abstain from trading in securities where the decision to trade is based on material nonpublic information.
- Safeguard material nonpublic information.
- Conduct personal investment activities in a manner that is not detrimental to clients.
- Do not accept gifts, favors, entertainment or other things of material value that could influence decision making.
- Report violations of the Code of Ethics or policies and procedures to the Chief Compliance Officer.

From time to time and particularly in the case of thinly-traded securities, attractive purchase and sale prices are available for only short periods of time and in limited quantities. This creates an incentive to allocate trades in these securities to accounts which pay higher fees or to employee accounts. As noted in Item 6 we have trade allocation policies and procedures which ensure that all accounts are treated equitably. We also have, as part of our Code of Ethics, policies and procedures regarding employee purchases and sales of securities recommended to clients. Notably, while employees may invest in the same securities which have been recommended to clients:

- Employees must obtain written approval from Oberon's Chief Compliance Officer before placing a personal securities transaction.
- Employees are prohibited from executing a transaction in a security which is recommended to clients until at least one day after all client orders for that security have been filled or withdrawn.
- Employees are required to disclose their securities transactions and holdings on a monthly basis.

Oberon's employees may purchase securities for their own accounts which are not recommended to clients even though such securities may be suitable for clients.

Item 12 – Brokerage Practices

We recognize that any amounts paid to brokers, whether in the form of commissions, spreads or undisclosed mark-ups, are paid out of client assets. We have a fiduciary duty with respect to these assets and therefore, in selecting brokers and negotiating commissions or spreads, we must endeavor to act in our clients' best interests.

Oberon has an arrangement with National Financial Services LLC and Fidelity Brokerage Services LLC (collectively, "Fidelity") through which Fidelity provides Oberon with "institutional platform services." These services include brokerage, custody and other related services such as software and other technology that: (i) provide access to client account data (such as trade confirmations and account statements); (ii) facilitate trade execution and allocate aggregated trade orders for multiple client accounts; (iii) provide research, pricing and other market data; (iv) facilitate payment of fees from client accounts; and, (v) assist with back-office functions, recordkeeping and client reporting. Fidelity is compensated for these services through commissions on trades in client accounts. These institutional platform services are essential to the operation of Oberon and we periodically evaluate institutional platform services offered by other firms. We also believe the commissions are reasonable and fair compared to commissions charged by other firms offering comparable services.

In instances where Fidelity does not serve as broker, portfolio transactions are effected through brokers selected based on a variety of criteria, including: the overall reputation, experience and financial stability of the broker; the quality of the broker's proprietary research, investment ideas and relationship with Oberon; access to conferences and management meetings; the broker's trading expertise including the ability to minimize total trading costs and to trade without impacting the market; and, the belief that the broker charges a fair and reasonable fee for each trade.

We periodically receive investment research and other services beyond trade execution (often referred to as "soft dollar benefits") from brokers (other than Fidelity) in connection with client securities transactions. In almost all cases, the commissions we pay these brokers are higher than would otherwise be available from Fidelity. In the past year the soft dollar benefits Oberon received consisted of proprietary investment research and invitations to conferences and meetings with company management.

In instances where we use brokers other than Fidelity and agree to pay a higher commission than would otherwise be available from Fidelity in order to obtain soft dollar benefits we benefit because we use client commissions to obtain services for which we would otherwise have to pay. We may therefore have an incentive to use brokers other than Fidelity and cause clients to pay commissions higher than those charged by Fidelity. For this reason we minimize the use of brokers other than Fidelity and only use them when we believe their trade execution would be superior to Fidelity's or when we believe their soft dollar benefits would provide lawful and direct assistance to our investment decision making process. We only agree to commissions that we have determined in good faith are reasonable in relation to any soft dollar benefits provided. We do not attempt to allocate among clients the relative costs or benefits of services obtained, believing that the services, in the aggregate, assist us in fulfilling our overall duty to clients.

We do not solicit or receive client referrals from brokers. We do not recommend, request, require or permit clients to direct portfolio transactions to selected brokers.

Oberon will generally aggregate buy or sell orders for two or more clients for execution. In most instances, such aggregating will result in a more favorable net price or more efficient execution than separately placing each client's order. We are not obligated to place all transactions on an aggregated basis and there may be instances (for example, with thinly traded securities) in which order aggregation results in a less favorable net price than a particular client would have obtained by trading separately. Each client participating in an aggregated order will participate at the same price as all other participants and all transaction costs on the order will be allocated pro rata to all participating clients.

Item 13 – Review of Accounts

Oberon's Managing Member and Chief Compliance Officer reviews client accounts on a continuous basis. Accounts are reviewed to determine if cash is available for investment and to ensure the proper allocation between equities, debt, other securities and cash. All transactions in client accounts are reviewed on a daily basis.

Separately Managed Account Reports

Fidelity, the custodian, sends monthly account statements directly to clients and makes them available online for clients. Oberon sends written quarterly reports to clients that consist of account positions, investing commentary and performance computations. Oberon also sends a statement of average invested assets at the end of each billing period and the resulting advisory fee.

Oberon I Reports

Oberon I distributes audited financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) to all limited partners within 120 days of the partnership's fiscal year end. Unaudited performance information, account statements and written reports with investing commentary are provided at least quarterly. Oberon I also provides each limited Partner with a Schedule K-1 for tax purposes.

Item 14 – Client Referrals and Other Compensation

Oberon does not compensate any person for client referrals, nor do we accept compensation for referring clients or prospective clients to others.

Item 15 – Custody

Under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the "Advisers Act"), Oberon is deemed to have custody of client funds or securities in any circumstance where: (i) we actually possess funds or securities; (ii) we are authorized to withdraw funds or securities from a client's account; or (iii) we or a related person serves in a legal capacity which affords Oberon access to funds or securities.

Separately Managed Accounts

All client assets in separately managed accounts are held by an independent qualified custodian (Fidelity). Oberon has the ability to access funds for the purpose of debiting advisory fees and therefore under the Advisers Act we are considered to have custody of client assets. The custodian sends monthly account statements directly to clients and we urge clients to carefully review their monthly account statements. Clients also receive quarterly account statements from Oberon. We recommend that clients check these against the account statements which they receive from the custodian to ensure consistency.

Oberon I

Under the Advisers Act, Oberon is deemed to have custody of the assets of Oberon I because an affiliate of Oberon is the General Partner of Oberon I. However, all of the assets of Oberon I are held by a qualified custodian. Oberon has engaged an independent administrator to maintain the books of the partnership and provide investors with account statements. Additionally, Oberon has engaged a PCAOB-registered independent accounting firm to perform an annual audit and prepare audited financial statements in accordance with GAAP.

Item 16 – Investment Discretion

At the time an account is established, a client will enter into an investment management agreement with Oberon. This agreement provides Oberon with full discretionary authority to manage the account. Oberon is authorized to sell, purchase, exchange, or generally to invest and reinvest all assets at any time held in a client's account. At the time of entering into the investment management agreement and at any time thereafter, clients are provided the opportunity to impose limitations on this authority. Clients may request that Oberon avoid investments in certain industries or companies due to legal or special concerns. Should Oberon agree to a client-requested mandate or restriction of an account, Oberon will manage the account accordingly.

Item 17 – Voting Client Securities

Oberon has sole authority to vote client securities and we adhere to proxy voting policies and procedures pursuant to SEC Rule 206(4)-6. It is not possible for clients to direct their vote in a particular solicitation.

Our procedures are designed to ensure that we vote proxies in a manner that seeks to maximize the long-term economic interests of clients. The procedures also require that we determine whether a conflict of interest exists in voting a proxy (e.g., whether an employee of Oberon may personally benefit if the proxy is voted in a certain manner). If a material conflict of interest exists, Oberon will determine whether voting in accordance with the procedures is in the best interest of clients or take some other appropriate action (e.g., retain an independent third party to vote the proxy).

We generally vote in favor of routine corporate housekeeping proposals. For all other proposals, we will determine whether it is in the best interest of clients and may take into account the following factors, among others: (i) whether the proposal was recommended by management and our opinion of management; (ii) whether the proposal acts to entrench management; and (iii) whether the proposal fairly compensates management for past and future performance.

Our procedures and records of how we voted clients proxies are available upon request.

Item 18 – Financial Information

Oberon does not have any financial condition that would impair its ability to meet contractual commitments to clients. Oberon does not require or solicit prepayment of any fees and therefore does not incur any financial commitments to clients.
