Investing involves the assumption of many risks including conflicts of interest of the advisor and broker selected. MAC Wealth Management Inc. was setup with these in mind.

MAC Wealth Management Inc. is an Independent Registered Investment Advisory firm that manages assets for investors on an assets-under-management fee-based platform. MAC Wealth Management Inc. is independent and does not engage in commissions based investment activities, does not hold client assets, or report on assets client's own. These separate functions are performed by third parties that clients select for those purposes.

If the advisor is employed by the same firm that holds the assets, executes the trades, reports the trades and performance, and the advisor is compensated by that firm especially with commissions that vary by product and activity, then conflicts exist in each step of the process. As an Independent RIA without commissions compensation and without affiliation to or compensation from any Broker Dealers and without Custody of Client Assets or Reporting on them, which is the separate and independent responsibility of the Broker-Dealer Custodian chosen by the Client, and with all of these functions designed to be done separately and independently to eliminate conflicts of interest and create the highest level of objectivity for client protection purposes, the oversight practices otherwise required are reduced in these areas. Traditionally, a registered representative for a Brokerage firm is subject to many internal pressures and incentives that may be in the firm's interest and potentially contrary to the client's interest. The adviser must attempt to resolve these conflicts and sort through the potential misinformation. The advisor's supervisor additionally has an offset responsibility to counterbalance these and other conflicts exerted upon or affecting them and/or the advisor. MAC Wealth Management Inc. chose to be an Independent Fee-Based Advisor primarily to eliminate these conflicts.

Fee-based compensation better aligns investor and advisor objectives and eliminates the conflicts from commissions based investing.

Independence is designed to reduce/eliminate broker-dealer pressures and incentives.

Third Party (Broker/Custodian) custody and reporting creates objectivity and eliminates risks associated with potential mishandling of client assets as in cases of fraud like in the Madoff scandal.

The Independent RIA fee-based platform with independent Third Party custody, execution, and reporting best addresses the issues of: Safeguarding of Client Assets, Valuation of Client Holdings, Pricing of Portfolio Securities, Performance Reporting, Misaligned Incentives, and potentially biased Asset Selection.

In order to ensure Best Execution, MAC Wealth Mgt. Inc. monitors the execution practices and compliance procedures followed by the Broker Custodians used and reserves the right to place trades through another third party if deemed necessary and agreed to. More details on Best Execution are discussed in the Firm Brochure and ADV Part II and are also available upon request by contacting Randall McCuen.

Additional supervision activities relate to risks associated with the advisor potentially investing in the same or similar securities. Executions are monitored to ensure that client's interests come first. Also, Privacy Policies are strictly followed.

Finally, client account asset allocation (diversification), portfolio management, trading practices, and performance are monitored at least quarterly relative to client objectives. MAC Wealth Mgt. Inc. manages money for investors in their individual separate accounts based on the investors individual objectives and allows for reasonable flexibility in regards to cash balances, timing of withdrawals and deposits, restrictions on holdings to be held or not, tax exposure preferences, net transactions costs effects, account size investment alternatives issues, and other investor preferences. We use a Balanced Portfolio approach and allocate among the general categories of Cash, Fixed Income, Stocks, and Commodity ETFs, Currency ETFs, and Hedging ETFs, as well as Options Strategies for investors with preferences for each of these areas. Assets are also generally managed on a household basis which means different accounts with the same overall objectives may have different results as the primary focus will be on the household results. Investment opportunities are allocated among individual client accounts relative to their objectives as/when they are deemed appropriate. The nature of tailored portfolios and individual separate accounts asset management leads to resultant holdings of different securities with differing allocations for different investors and thus different performance. This investment management style naturally results in different results for each investor account. As such, accounts are regularly reviewed from this perspective, at least quarterly, in regards to relative performance and asset allocation relative to their objectives. Flexibility, the benefits and the commensurate risks, and the related Performance issues are discussed with clients, noted here, and re-discussed as individual preferences remain.
