Item 4. Advisory Business

The Adviser is an investment adviser with its principal place of business in Ketchum, Idaho. The Adviser commenced operations as an investment adviser on December 21, 1998 and has been registered with the SEC since February 22, 1999. Prior to that time, the Adviser had conducted its business as a corporation under the name Sun Valley Gold Company since January 1992, and had been registered with the SEC since April 1992. Peter F. Palmedo and Palmedo Holdings LLLP (a Nevada limited liability limited partnership controlled by Mr. Palmedo) are the principal owners and managing members of the Adviser.

The Adviser provides investment advisory services on a discretionary basis to its clients (the "Advisory Clients"), which include institutions with separately managed accounts (the "Managed Accounts") and pooled investment vehicles intended for sophisticated investors and institutional investors (the "Funds").

The Adviser is dedicated to managing investments in the precious metals asset class.

The Adviser does not generally tailor its advisory services to the individual needs of investors in the Funds and does not accept Fund investor-imposed investment restrictions.

When deemed appropriate, the Adviser has established, and may in the future establish, Managed Accounts for particular Advisory Clients. These Managed Accounts are subject to investment objectives, guidelines and restrictions, and fee arrangements and other terms that are individually negotiated with each such Advisory Client.

As of December 31, 2017, the Adviser had approximately $746,093,299 Advisory Clients' regulatory assets under management. As of that date, the Adviser managed $746,093,299 on a discretionary basis and $0 on a non-discretionary basis.

Item 5. Fees and Compensation

The Adviser receives management fees based on net assets under management of up to 2.0% annually (the "Management Fees") and an incentive allocation of up to 20% of the annual profit, subject to a high-water mark (the "Incentive Compensation").

With respect to the Funds, Management Fees are paid quarterly in arrears, based on the value of the net assets of a Fund on the last day of each quarter as calculated by the Fund Administrator. Incentive Compensation, if any, is calculated annually in arrears. Fees are adjusted for interim capital flows. These calculations are reviewed and approved by the Adviser and deducted from the Fund.

With respect to the Managed Accounts, Management Fees are paid quarterly in arrears or in advance, as individually negotiated with each Managed Account, based on the net assets of the Managed Account on the last day of each quarter as calculated by the Adviser. Incentive Compensation, if any, is calculated annually in arrears. Fees are adjusted for interim capital flows. These calculations are reviewed and approved by the Advisory Client, and the Advisory Client pays the Adviser.

Some Fund investors may pay more or less than other Fund investors for the same management services, depending, for example, on when a Fund investor made an initial subscription, a longer redemption schedule, the number of related investment accounts or the total client assets under management with the Adviser. In this regard, the Adviser may waive or modify fees for Fund investors who are principals or employees of the Adviser or its affiliates, relatives of such persons, for certain large or strategic investors, and for investors who invested in a fund prior to October 1, 1999 and prior to July 1, 2007. Fee arrangements with the Managed Accounts are individually negotiated.

In addition to paying investment management fees and performance-based fees or other compensation, Advisory Clients' accounts will also be subject to other investment expenses such as custodial charges, brokerage fees, transaction costs, commissions and related costs; costs of insurance (other than fire and theft insurance); interest expenses; taxes, duties and other governmental charges; other portfolio expenses; and costs, expenses and fees (including investment advisory and other fees charged by investment advisers in which the Advisory Client's account invests) associated with products or services that may be necessary or incidental to such investments or accounts. Advisory Clients' assets may be invested in a master-feeder structure. Feeder funds bear a pro rata share of the expenses associated with the related master fund. Please refer to Item 12 of this Firm Brochure for a discussion of the Adviser's brokerage practices.

Item 6. Performance-Based Fees and Side-by-Side Management

The Adviser provides investment management services to multiple portfolios for multiple Advisory Clients. The Adviser is paid performance-based compensation by the Funds and certain other Managed Accounts. The Adviser's personnel (its "Employees") are typically compensated on a basis that includes a discretionary performance-based component. In addition, certain Advisory Clients' accounts may have higher asset-based fees or more favorable performance-based compensation arrangements than other accounts, which creates the potential for one Advisory Client's account to be favored over another Advisory Client's account. The Adviser has a greater incentive to favor those accounts that pay higher fees.

The Adviser has adopted and implemented policies and procedures intended to address conflicts of interest relating to the management of multiple accounts and the allocation of investment opportunities. The Adviser reviews investment decisions for the purpose of ensuring that all accounts are treated equitably. To the extent a particular investment (including limited opportunities such as initial public offerings and private placements) is determined by the Adviser to be suitable for more than one Advisory Client, such investment will be allocated between the accounts in a manner that the Adviser determines is fair and equitable under the circumstances to all Advisory Clients. The Adviser's policy is to aggregate client transactions where possible and when advantageous to Advisory Clients. In these instances, Advisory Clients participating in any aggregated transactions will receive an average share price and transaction costs will be shared equally and on a pro-rata basis. The performance of all accounts is also regularly analyzed to determine whether there are any unexplained significant discrepancies. These areas are monitored by the Adviser's Chief Investment Officer and/or other designated officer.

Item 7. Types of Clients

As previously described in Item 4, the Adviser's Advisory Clients consist of pooled investment vehicles and separately managed accounts for other institutional or sophisticated investors. With respect to the Funds, any initial and additional subscription minimums are disclosed in the relevant offering documents. With respect to the Managed Accounts, the Adviser determines the minimum investment amounts on a case-by-case basis with each Advisory Client. In general, such Managed Accounts involve significant minimum investments.

Item 8. Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

The Adviser generally invests in gold, precious metals, mining securities, rights, warrants, and options relating to gold and precious metals, and engages in all activities incidental and related thereto. Its primary investment process is security selection in the precious metals asset class on a global basis.

These investments involve risk of loss to Advisory Clients and Advisory Clients must be prepared to bear the loss of their entire contribution/investment.

Fundamental Value. The Adviser engages in a fundamental value investment strategy wherein the Adviser attempts to invest in asset-oriented securities that the Adviser believes are undervalued by the market. The Adviser employs seasoned analysts with experience in geology, mine engineering and mining finance and accounting. The research analysts maintain the Adviser's proprietary fundamental valuation database, using information from due diligence visits to resource properties and companies throughout the world, the application of economic parameters, and the construction of zero-based models to determine fair value. The fundamental valuation database consists of company models with the following components: (i) a geological component, (ii) an operational component, (iii) a financial component and (iv) a corporate finance component.

Hedging. There can be no assurances that a particular hedge is appropriate, or that certain risk is measured properly. Further, while the Adviser may enter into hedging transactions to seek to reduce risk, such transactions may result in poorer overall performance and increased risk for the Adviser's investment portfolios than if the Adviser did not engage in any such hedging transactions.

Issuer-Specific Changes. Changes in the financial condition of an issuer or counterparty, changes in specific economic or political conditions that affect a particular type of security or issuer, and changes in general economic or political conditions can increase the risk of default by an issuer or counterparty, which can affect a security's or instrument's value. The value of securities of smaller, less well-known issuers can be more volatile than that of larger issuers. Smaller issuers can have more limited product lines, markets, or financial resources.

Lack of Diversification. The Advisory Clients' accounts are generally not diversified and, accordingly, the accounts may be subject to more rapid changes in value than would be the case if the accounts were required to maintain a wide diversification among investment areas, securities and types of securities.

Leverage. Performance may be more volatile if an Advisory Client's account employs leverage.

Short Selling Risk. The Adviser's investment program includes short selling. Short sales can, in certain circumstances, substantially increase the impact of adverse price movements on the Advisory Clients' accounts. A short sale involves the risk of a theoretically unlimited increase in the market price of the particular investment sold short, which could result in an inability to cover the short position and a theoretically unlimited loss. There can be no assurance that securities necessary to cover a short position will be available for purchase.

Metals and Minerals. Trading in base and precious metals and minerals is a speculative activity. Prices of metals and minerals are affected by factors such as cyclical economic conditions, political events, and monetary policies of various countries. Therefore, prices of gold and other precious or base metals and minerals may fluctuate sharply over short periods of time due to changes in inflation or expectations regarding inflation in various countries; the availability of supplies of metals and minerals; changes in industrial and commercial demand; metal and mineral sales by governments, central banks and international agencies; investment speculation; monetary and other economic policies of various governments; and government restrictions on private ownership of certain metals and minerals. The volatility in the price of metals and minerals has a direct effect on companies that mine and process metals and minerals, including companies that provide services to such companies, as the prices of their securities will be affected by the volatility of the prices of metals and minerals.

Commodity Futures and Options. Commodity futures markets are highly volatile and are influenced by factors such as changing supply and demand relationships, governmental programs and policies, national and international political and economic events and changes in interest rates. In addition, because of the low margin deposits normally required in commodity futures trading, a high degree of leverage may be typical of a pooled investment vehicle engaging in commodity futures trading. As a result, a relatively small price movement in a commodity futures contract may result in substantial losses to such a pooled investment vehicle. Commodity options, like commodity futures contracts, are speculative, and their use involves risk. Specific market movements of the cash commodity or futures contract underlying an option cannot be predicted, and no assurance can be given that a liquid offset market will exist for any particular futures option at any particular time.

Derivatives. Swaps, and certain options and other custom derivative or synthetic instruments are subject to the risk of nonperformance by the counterparty to such instrument, including risks relating to the financial soundness and creditworthiness of the counterparty. In addition, investments in derivative instruments require a high degree of leverage, meaning the overall contract value (and, accordingly, the potential for profits or losses in that value) is much greater than the modest deposit used to buy the position in the derivative contract. Derivative securities can also be highly volatile. The prices of derivative instruments and the investments underlying the derivative instruments may fluctuate rapidly and over wide ranges and may reflect unforeseeable events or changes in conditions, none of which can be controlled by the Advisory Client or the Adviser. Further, transactions in derivative instruments are not undertaken on recognized exchanges, and will expose the Advisory Client's account to greater risks than regulated exchange transactions that provide greater liquidity and more accurate valuation of securities.

Equity Securities. The value of equity securities fluctuates in response to issuer, political, market, and economic developments. Fluctuations can be dramatic over the short as well as long term, and different parts of the market and different types of equity securities can react differently to these developments. For example, large cap stocks can react differently from small cap stocks, and "growth" stocks can react differently from "value" stocks. Issuer, political, or economic developments can affect a single issuer, issuers within an industry or economic sector or geographic region, or the market as a whole. Changes in the financial condition of a single issuer can impact the market as a whole. Terrorism and related geopolitical risks have led, and may in the future lead, to increased short-term market volatility and may have adverse long-term effects on world economies and markets generally.

Non-U.S. Securities. Investing in securities of non-U.S. governments and companies and utilization of non-U.S. currency forward contracts and options on such currencies involve certain considerations comprising both risks and opportunities not typically associated with investing in securities of the U.S. Government or U.S. companies. These considerations include changes in exchange rates and exchange control regulations, political and social instability, expropriation, imposition of foreign taxes, less liquid markets and less available information than are generally the case in the U.S., higher transaction costs, less government supervision of exchanges, brokers and issuers, difficulty in enforcing contractual obligations, lack of uniform accounting and auditing standards and greater price volatility.

Additional risk factors may be disclosed in the relevant offering documents.

Item 9. Disciplinary Information

This Item is not applicable.

Item 10. Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

The Adviser serves as the investment manager of one or more Funds. In this capacity, the Adviser may enter into agreements, or “side letters,” with Fund investors that have terms and conditions more advantageous than those described in the offering memorandum. For example:

- Special rights to make future investments in the same or another Fund, or a Managed Account.
- Special redemption rights, relating to frequency or notice.
- A waiver or rebate in fees or redemption penalties to be paid by the Fund investor and/or other terms.
- Rights to receive reports from the Adviser on a more frequent basis or that include information not provided to other Fund investors (including, without limitation, more detailed information regarding portfolio positions).
- Such other rights as may be negotiated by the Adviser and such Fund investors.

The modifications are solely at the discretion of the Adviser and may, among other things, be based on the size of an investment, an agreement by the investor to maintain such investment in the fund for a significant period of time, or other similar commitment.

Item 11. Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

The Adviser has adopted a Code of Ethics and Employee Trading Policy (together, the “Code”) that obligates the Adviser and its Employees to always put the interests of Advisory Clients before their own interests, and to act honestly and in good faith in all dealings with Advisory Clients. Employees are also required to comply with applicable federal securities laws.

The Code contains the Adviser’s policies regarding the personal securities transactions of its Employees. In general, it is the responsibility of each Employee to ensure that a particular securities transaction being considered for his or her personal account is not subject to a restriction contained in the Code or otherwise prohibited by law. An Employee must obtain the prior written approval (“Preclearance”) of the Compliance Officer or other designated officer (together, the “Compliance Team”) before engaging in a transaction in his or her personal account involving an initial public offering, private placement or other limited offering. All Employees are required to provide broker account statements and trade confirmations through an electronic feed or an approved alternative method, and are required to certify his or her securities accounts, holdings and certain other information on a quarterly basis.

Some Employees may have access to nonpublic information regarding the portfolio transactions of Advisory Clients (“Access Persons”). Personal securities transactions for an Access Person are therefore subject to additional restrictions since he or she may not buy or sell a security that the Adviser is considering buying or selling or is in the process of buying or selling for an Advisory Client. An Access Person must obtain Preclearance from a member of the Compliance Team before engaging in any precious metals securities transaction in his or her personal account. A request for Preclearance is made by submitting a completed preclearance form to the Compliance Team in advance of the contemplated transaction. The Compliance Team may approve the precious metal securities transaction if it concludes that the transaction complies with the provisions of the Code and that it is unlikely to have an adverse economic impact on Advisory Clients. The Compliance Team may deny the request if there is an actual or potential conflict of interest. Any approval given will generally remain in effect for 24 hours, and any such transaction is generally subject to a seven-day blackout period.

The Adviser, in the course of its investment management and other activities, may come into possession of confidential or material nonpublic information about issuers, including issuers in which the Adviser has invested or seeks to invest on behalf of Advisory Clients. Such information, if disclosed, might influence a decision to buy, sell or hold a security, and the Adviser is prohibited from improperly disclosing or using such information for its own benefit or for the benefit of any other person, regardless of whether such other person is an Advisory Client. In such circumstances, the Adviser will have no responsibility or liability to the Advisory Client for not disclosing such information (or the fact that the Adviser possesses such information) to the Advisory Client, and/or for not using such information for the Advisory Client’s benefit. The Code prohibits the communication of such information to persons who do not have a legitimate need to know, and its policies and procedures are designed to ensure that the Adviser is meeting its obligations to Advisory Clients and that it remains in compliance with applicable laws.

The Adviser or its Employees may buy or sell securities to or from the Funds as a principal (a “principal transaction”). The Adviser will only complete such a transaction in accordance with the requirements of Section 206(3) of the Advisers Act.

The Adviser does not engage in cross transactions between discretionary Advisory Client accounts.

The Adviser and its Employees may have conflicts in allocating their time and services among the Advisory Clients. The Adviser will devote as much time to each Advisory Client as it deems appropriate to perform its duties in accordance with its investment management agreements. In addition, the Adviser, its affiliates, and its Employees may conduct outside business activities.

The Adviser and/or its Employees may invest in the same securities (or related securities such as warrants, options or futures) that the Adviser invests in on behalf of its Advisory Clients. As discussed above, the Adviser has adopted the Code, which contains policies and procedures designed to minimize any actual or potential conflicts.

The Code is available upon request to any Advisory Client or prospective client by contacting Linda Kish, Chief Compliance Officer, by email at linda@svgold.com or by telephone at (208) 726-2399.

Item 12. Brokerage Practices

The Adviser considers a number of factors in selecting a broker-dealer to execute transactions (or series of transactions) and determining the reasonableness of the broker-dealer's compensation. Such factors include the financial stability and reputation of the brokerage firm; the overall quality of the research, brokerage or other services provided by such firm; natural flow; block trades; confidentiality; and the broker's involvement with the particular security or market. In selecting broker-dealers to execute transactions, the Adviser need not solicit competitive bids and does not have an obligation to seek the lowest available commission cost. It is not the Adviser's practice to negotiate "execution only" commission rates, thus an Advisory Client may be deemed to be paying for research, brokerage or other services provided by a broker-dealer which are included in the commission rate.

The Adviser may receive research or other products or services other than execution from a broker-dealer and/or a third party in connection with client securities transactions. This is known as a "soft dollar" relationship. The Adviser will limit the use of "soft dollars" to obtain research and brokerage services to services that constitute research and brokerage within the meaning of Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Section 28(e)"). Research services within Section 28(e) may include, but are not limited to, research reports (including market research); certain financial newsletters and trade journals; software providing analysis of securities portfolios; corporate governance research and rating services; attendance at certain seminars and conferences; discussions with research analysts; meetings with corporate executives; consultants' advice on portfolio strategy; data services (including services providing market data, company financial data and economic data); advice from broker-dealers on order execution; and certain proxy services. Brokerage services within Section 28(e) may include, but are not limited to, services related to the execution, clearing and settlement of securities transactions and functions incidental thereto (i.e., connectivity services between an adviser and a broker-dealer and other relevant parties such as custodians); trading software operated by a broker-dealer to route orders; software that provides trade analytics and trading strategies; software used to transmit orders; clearance and settlement in connection with a trade; electronic communication of allocation instructions; routing settlement instructions; post trade matching of trade information; and services required by the SEC or a self regulatory organization such as comparison services, electronic confirms or trade affirmations.

In some instances, the Adviser may receive a product or service that may be used only partially for functions within Section 28(e) (e.g. an order management system, trade analytical software or proxy services). In such instances, the Adviser will make a good faith effort to determine the relative proportion of the product or service used to assist the Adviser in carrying out its investment decision-making responsibilities and the relative proportion used for administrative or other purposes outside Section 28(e). The proportion of the product or service attributable to assisting the Adviser in carrying out its investment decision-making responsibilities will be paid through brokerage commissions generated by client transactions and the proportion attributable to administrative or other purposes outside Section 28(e) will be paid for by the Adviser from its own resources.

Research and brokerage services obtained by the use of commissions arising from the Partnership's portfolio transactions may be used by the Adviser in its other investment activities and thus, the Partnership may not necessarily, in any particular instance, be the direct or indirect beneficiary of the research or brokerage services provided.

Although the Adviser will make a good faith determination that the amount of commissions paid is reasonable in light of the products or services provided by a broker, commission rates are generally negotiable and thus, selecting brokers on the basis of considerations that are not limited to the applicable commission rates may result in higher transaction costs than would otherwise be obtainable. The receipt of such products or services and the determination of the appropriate allocation in the case of "mixed use" products or services create a potential conflict of interest between the Adviser and its clients.

In selecting brokers and negotiating commission rates, the Adviser will take into account the financial stability and reputation of brokerage firms, and the research, brokerage or other services provided by such brokers. The Adviser may place transactions with a broker or dealer that (i) provides the Adviser (or an affiliate) with the opportunity to participate in capital introduction events sponsored by the broker-dealer or (ii) refers investors to the Partnership or other products advised by the Adviser (or an affiliate), if otherwise consistent with seeking best execution; provided the Adviser is not selecting the broker-dealer in recognition of the opportunity to participate in such capital introduction events or the referral of investors.

When appropriate, the Adviser may, but is not required to, aggregate client orders to achieve more efficient execution or to provide for equitable treatment among accounts. Clients participating in aggregated trades will be allocated securities based on the average price achieved for such trades.

Item 13. Review of Accounts

Each Advisory Client account is reviewed by Peter Palmedo, a managing member of the Adviser, on an ongoing basis to determine whether securities positions should be maintained or adjusted in view of current market or other conditions. Matters considered include trading activity, adherence to investment guidelines, significant corporate developments, and significant market events, among others.

Investors in the Funds are provided with reports pursuant to the terms of each Fund's offering documents. These reports generally include a quarterly performance report, annual audited financial statements within 120 days after the financial year-end, and annual tax reports.

Each Managed Account will receive reports in accordance with the Managed Account's agreement with the Adviser.

Item 14. Client Referrals and Other Compensation

The Adviser receives certain research or other products or services from broker-dealers through “soft-dollar” arrangements. These “soft-dollar” arrangements may create an incentive for the Adviser to select or recommend broker-dealers based on the Adviser’s interest in receiving the research or other products or services, which may result in the selection of a broker-dealer on the basis of considerations that are not limited to the lowest commission rates. This may result in higher transaction costs than would otherwise be obtainable by the Adviser on behalf of its Advisory Clients. Please see Item 12 for further information on the Adviser’s “soft-dollar” practices, including the Adviser’s procedures for addressing conflicts of interest that arise from such practices.

Item 15. Custody

Advisory Clients will receive account statements from a broker-dealer, bank or other qualified custodian, and Advisory Clients should carefully review those statements.

Item 16. Investment Discretion

The Adviser provides investment advisory services on a discretionary basis to its Advisory Clients. Please see Item 4 for a description of any limitations that Advisory Clients may place on the Adviser's discretionary authority.

Prior to assuming discretionary authority to manage a securities account on behalf of an Advisory Client, the Adviser enters into an investment management agreement or other agreement that sets forth the scope of the Adviser's discretion.

Unless otherwise instructed or directed by a discretionary client, the Adviser has the authority to determine (i) the securities to be purchased and sold for the Advisory Client's account (subject to restrictions on its activities set forth in the applicable investment management agreement and any written investment guidelines), and (ii) the amount of securities to be purchased or sold for the Advisory Client's account.

Because of the differences in Advisory Clients' investment objectives and strategies, risk tolerances, tax status and other criteria, there may be differences among Advisory Clients in invested positions and securities held. The Adviser may consider the following factors, among others, in allocating securities among Advisory Clients: (i) client investment objectives and strategies; (ii) client risk profiles; (iii) tax status and restrictions placed on a client's portfolio by the client or by applicable law; (iv) size of the client account; (v) nature and liquidity of the security to be allocated; (vi) size of available position; (vii) current market conditions; and (viii) account liquidity, account requirements for liquidity and timing of cash flows. These factors may lead the Adviser to allocate securities to Advisory Clients' accounts in varying amounts.

The Adviser will determine each Advisory Client's eligibility to participate in initial public offerings (IPOs), secondary offerings and limited offerings based on the legal status of the Advisory Client (e.g., "restricted person") and the Advisory Client's investment guidelines. Such securities will be allocated in a manner that the Adviser considers to be fair and equitable to all Advisory Clients under the circumstances. The Adviser may consider the factors mentioned above, among others, in determining such allocations.

The Adviser has the responsibility to effect orders correctly, promptly and in the best interests of its Advisory Clients. In the event any error occurs in the handling of any client transactions, whether due to the Adviser's actions, or inaction, or actions of others, the Adviser's policy is to seek to identify and correct any errors as promptly as possible without disadvantaging the Advisory Client or benefiting the Adviser in any way. The Adviser will not be liable for any losses arising out of trading errors in connection with any activity undertaken (or omitted to be undertaken) in connection with an Advisory Client, unless such liability is caused by the Adviser's gross negligence or willful malfeasance or as otherwise provided by Federal securities laws.

Item 17. Voting Client Securities

To the extent the Adviser has been delegated proxy voting authority on behalf of its Advisory Clients, the Adviser complies with its Proxy Voting Policies and Procedures (the "Procedures") that are designed to ensure that the Adviser votes proxies with respect to client securities in the best interests of its Advisory Clients. The Procedures also require that the Adviser identify any conflicts of interest between the Adviser and its Advisory Clients. If a material conflict exists, the Adviser will determine whether voting the proxy in question is in the best interests of the Advisory Client or whether it should take some other appropriate action.

Because the Adviser provides investment advice to Funds, individual investors in the Funds will not be able to direct the Adviser on how to cast a proxy vote.

Advisory Clients may obtain a copy of the Adviser's proxy voting policies and procedures and information about how the Adviser voted an Advisory Client's proxies by contacting Linda Kish, Chief Compliance Officer, by email at linda@svgold.com or by telephone at (208) 726-2399.
