Item 4 Advisory Business

Vinci Partners USA LLC (“Vinci USA” or the “Firm”), is part of the Vinci Group, which includes its Brazilian parent, Vinci Partners Investimentos Ltda. (“Vinci Partners”). Mr. Gilberto Sayão da Silva holds indirectly more than 25% of Vinci USA and is the controlling shareholder of Vinci Partners.

Funds Advisory Services

Vinci USA’s Funds Advisory Services are focused on and primarily select investments managed by other investment managers, which have in the past and may in the future, include funds advised by Vinci USA and its affiliates. The Firm may also, on a limited basis, select certain individual securities, which may include, but are not limited to ETFs for investment or hedging purposes. These advisory services are provided to certain pooled investment vehicles (“Pooled Funds”), private funds established for a single investor (“Fund-of-One”), and certain accounts that are managed separately (“SMA”) (collectively referred to as “Fund Clients”). Vinci USA’s offerings include (i) discretionary advisory services to the Pooled Funds and certain institutional SMAs, (ii) discretionary and non-discretionary advisory services to institutions, wealthy families and high net-worth individuals, who may create a corporate SMA entity or Fund-of-One structure. The Pooled Funds are advised in accordance with their respective governing documents and are not tailored to the individual needs of investors. Vinci USA will tailor its advisory services to the needs of SMA and Fund-of-One clients, who may also impose certain investment restrictions on Vinci USA.

Real Estate Advisory Service

Vinci USA controls Vinci US Real Estate GP LLC, which serves as the general partner to Vinci US Real Estate Fund I LP (“RE Fund” and collectively with the Fund Clients, “Clients”).

Vinci Partners provides certain services to Vinci USA in the form of legal support; risk management; research; certain back-office services such as data processing and Client accounting, and other general administrative services.

As of June 30, 2018 the Firm managed approximately USD $130,724,214 on a discretionary basis and no assets on a non-discretionary basis.

Item 5 Fees and Compensation

The Firm charges all Clients a management fee and certain Fund Clients a performance-based fee that is calculated as a percentage of the applicable Client's annual profits, including unrealized gains, subject to a "high water mark" provision. The Firm does not have a standard fee schedule as fees are based on various factors. In the case of Pooled Funds, the fees are based primarily on each fund's respective strategy, which is clearly defined in their respective governing documents. In the case of SMAs and Fund-of-One clients, fees are generally negotiable and based on various factors including strategy, a client's liquidity needs, any restrictions the client may have placed on the Firm, etc. Fees are generally not-negotiable in the case of Pooled Funds, although Vinci USA, at its sole discretion, may enter into "side-letters" with certain investors, which grant those investors certain preferential terms including, but not limited to, reduced fees and certain information rights. In the case of the Pooled Funds, Fund-of-One clients and SMA clients, management fees do not exceed 1% of assets per year and, if applicable, a 10% performance fee. In the case of the RE Fund, investors incur a 1% management fee payable semi-annually in arrears and a 20% performance allocation, which is payable after an investor's capital has been returned and investors have recognized a 5% "preferred return" as further described in the RE Fund's governing documents.

Clients pay the Firm's fees in accordance with their respective advisory agreements or similar governing documents, which may be either invoiced by Vinci USA or debited directly from their accounts. The frequency with which fees are deducted may vary according to the type of service provided and Client.

In addition to the Firm's management and performance-based fees, Clients generally bear all expenses related to their investment program, including, but not limited to: brokerage commissions; expenses related to buying and selling securities; fees and expenses related to any custodians; interest and other borrowing expenses. In the case of Pooled Funds and certain Fund-of-One clients, additional expenses will be incurred in accordance with their respective governing documents. These additional expenses will include items such as travel expenses incurred by the Firm to perform research; legal, administrative, accounting, tax and audit expenses; systems expenses (trading and back-office), the cost of which may be spread among all Clients that utilize such services; expenses related to preparing and distributing reports, financial statements and notices to investors; and the cost of periodically updating the offering documents and any supplements or investment management agreements (as applicable). Clients should refer to their investment management or other similar agreements. Investors should refer to their respective fund's governing documents for a detailed discussion of the expenses allocated to and paid by their respective fund.

In the case where the Firm selects and invests Client assets with other investment managers, Clients will incur additional investment management fees and, in certain cases, additional performance-based fees. Such fees are typically similar to those discussed above related to the Pooled Funds. Investors in these funds bear these layered fees and costs directly or indirectly, and the overall cost of investing in a fund-of-funds may be higher than investing directly in the underlying investment funds. In some cases, the underlying funds or strategies may only be available to the client through a fund-of-funds. This layering of fees and costs affects the overall performance of the investment, and is best suited to long-term investors. The Firm may invest Client assets in Pooled Funds advised by Vinci USA or its affiliates and with portfolio managers where the Firm or its affiliates have a direct or indirect ownership, revenue or profit interest or otherwise have an affiliation and accordingly may benefit (monetarily or otherwise) from the investment. Such direct or indirect ownership, revenue or profits interest or affiliation may create an incentive for the Firm to make investments with such portfolio managers that are riskier or more speculative or otherwise not in the best interest of a Client. However, Vinci USA has adopted procedures to address such conflicts, which include a review to ensure such investments are appropriate within each Client's investment mandate.

Item 6 Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

As described in Item 5, Fees and Compensation, certain Clients also pay the Firm an annual performance-based fee, calculated as a percentage of net profits, including unrealized gains, subject to a high-water mark. In such cases, certain conflicts of interest exist as the Firm has a financial incentive to favor Clients paying performance-based fees or Clients paying higher fees by allocating investment opportunities in favor of such Clients.

Performance-based fees also create an incentive for the Firm to (i) make investments that may be considered riskier or more speculative in the hopes of generating greater returns, or (ii) allocate Client assets to affiliated investment advisers.

In order to address the conflicts of interest that exist, Vinci USA has adopted policies and procedures it believes are reasonably designed to mitigate the risks associated with such conflicts of interest. The Firm has a policy not to favor, over time, any strategy or Client advised by it or its affiliates. The Firm also has a policy to ensure adequate disclosure has been made to Clients and investors concerning its conflicts of interest including that the Firm may recommend investments in pooled investment vehicles where an affiliate has an ownership interest or realizes an economic benefit.

Item 7 Type of Clients

As discussed in Item 4, Advisory Business, in addition to the RE Fund and Pooled Funds, Vinci USA's also advises Fund-of-One and SMA clients. Interests in a Pooled Fund are offered on a private placement basis. In the case of the Pooled Funds that are offered in the United States, only investors who are "accredited investors" as such term is defined in Regulation D under the U.S. Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), and to "qualified purchasers" or "knowledgeable employees" as such terms are defined under the U.S. Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "Investment Company Act") are eligible to invest. SMA or Fund-of-One clients are generally institutional and high net worth individuals. The majority of the Firm's Clients and investors in the Pooled Funds are non-US persons.

Vinci USA has not adopted a strict minimum investment requirement.

Item 8 Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

The Firm provides investment advisory services to Clients across numerous strategies and risk profiles, including, but not necessarily limited to macro, fixed income, long-only, long-short and long-biased equity strategies. The Firm primarily focuses on Client investments in private funds of other investment advisers, including affiliates of the Firm in the Pooled Funds with exception of the RE Fund, where Vinci USA's advisory services are focused on developing a single residential building.

Investors and prospective investors in the Pooled Funds should refer to their respective offering documents for a detailed description of the investment strategy. Vinci USA will tailor strategies for SMA and Fund-of-One clients.

The following risk discussion is not a complete list or explanation of the risks associated with an investment with Vinci USA. When determining whether to invest with Vinci USA, a prospective investor/client should carefully consider the following risk factors, among others. For additional risk factors, including risk factors relating to the terms and structure of the relevant Pooled Fund, SMA, Fund-of-One Client and RE Fund, Clients and investors should refer to the relevant governing documents including offering memorandum, limited partnership agreements and investment management agreements (as applicable).

Overall Investment Risk

Investing in securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. There may be increased risk due to the nature of the securities to be purchased and traded by a Client and the investment techniques and strategies used to achieve Clients' investment objectives and the Firm cannot provide any assurance that a Client will not incur losses. Security markets are often adversely affected by unforeseeable events including actions by various governments, agencies and domestic and international political events, may result in significant loss of capital and permanent impairment.

Difficult Market for Investment Opportunities

The activity of identifying, completing and realizing a gain on attractive investments is highly uncertain. There is no assurance that the Firm will be able to locate and complete investments that satisfy Client objectives; nor is there any assurance that a client will be able to fully invest its subscribed capital in a manner consistent with its investment strategy.

Investments in Foreign and Emerging Markets

Investments in foreign securities may be subject to greater risks due to a variety of factors including currency controls and currency exchange rate fluctuations, changes in governmental administration or economic or monetary policy or changed circumstances in dealings between nations. Dividends paid by foreign issuers may be subject to withholding and other foreign taxes that may decrease the net return on these investments. There may be less publicly available information about foreign issuers in certain countries, and such issuers may not be subject to uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards and requirements comparable to those of the Firm or its Clients. Foreign securities markets may also be less liquid, more volatile and subject to lower levels of government supervision. Investment in less developed countries could be affected by other factors not present in more developed countries, including expropriation, confiscatory taxation and potential difficulties in enforcing contractual obligations. Foreign markets are often considered speculative and where brokerage commissions are often higher than in more developed markets with significant custody and clearance risks and delays in settlement.

Brazilian Equity Investments

Investments in Brazilian equity securities may involve certain risk factors not typically associated with investing in the United States or other more established markets, including risks relating to (i) currency exchange rate fluctuations and costs associated with conversion of investment principal and income from one currency into another; (ii) differences between the United States or other established markets and Brazilian securities markets, including the relative illiquidity and volatility of the Brazilian securities markets, the absence of uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards, practices and disclosure requirements and less government supervision and regulation; and (iii) certain economic and political risks, including Brazil's historically high inflation rate, large external debt, political and economic instability and uncertainty, potential exchange control regulations, potential restrictions on foreign investment and repatriation of capital and risks relating to recent developments in Latin America.

In addition to the foregoing, the Brazilian government has exercised and continues to exercise a significant influence over many aspects of the private sector in Brazil. The Firm cannot provide assurance that future developments in the Brazilian economy will not impair its operations or ability to achieve its clients' investment objectives involving investment in Brazil.

Investments in other Investment Funds

Clients may invest in other investment funds managed by an entity of the Vinci Group or third-party investment advisers (such fund, a "Portfolio Fund"). In following such investment strategy, the client will be required to rely on the valuations, choice of broker-dealers, custodians and counterparties, as well as tax and accounting procedures, of the investment adviser of such Portfolio Fund. In addition, the Firm will generally not have access to trade data relating to such Portfolio Fund's positions, but only to overall net asset values.

Clients will bear all direct and indirect costs associated with the investment management services of the various investment advisers of such Portfolio Funds. The clients' ability to adjust their portfolio allocations will be limited by any limitations applicable to a Portfolio Fund and the clients' ability both to invest in and to withdraw capital from such Portfolio Fund.

Misconduct or Bad Judgment of Investment Advisers of other Investment Funds

The Firm may be unable to protect clients from the risk of misrepresentation or material strategy alteration by an investment manager of a Portfolio Fund. Clients as investors in the Portfolio Funds will have no direct dealings or contractual relationships with the investment adviser of the Portfolio Fund.

Limited Liquidity and Limited Availability of Portfolio Funds

Among the principal disadvantages and risks inherent in a fund-of-funds structure are the restrictions imposed on the Firm's asset allocation flexibility and risk control as a result of the limited liquidity of the Portfolio Funds, limited transparency, as well as restrictions on withdrawing investments in Portfolio Funds. Clients could be unable to withdraw their capital from a Portfolio Fund for some months despite having major losses being incurred or after the Firm has determined that the investment adviser of a Portfolio Fund has deviated from its announced trading policies and strategy.

Illiquidity of Underlying Investments

Clients may invest in illiquid instruments. Illiquidity increases risk and may make it impossible for the Firm to close out positions against which the market is moving. In case of a fund-of-fund structure, it may cause a Portfolio Fund to delay the payment of redemption proceeds to the client.

Illiquidity of Shares of Investment Funds

Securities issued by investment funds are usually not transferable without the approval of the funds' directors, and there may be no secondary market for such securities. Consequently, a holder of securities issued by such funds may only be able to dispose of its securities by having the respective fund redeem them, assuming that redemption is available. Even then, investors may receive securities rather than cash and/or the funds may suspend or limit payment of redemptions in certain circumstances. This risk applies to Pooled Funds and Fund-of-One Clients and their underlying Portfolio Funds.

Possible Effect of Substantial Redemptions

If a substantial number of investors in a Client or of a Portfolio Fund redeemed at the same time, the Client or Portfolio Fund may have to liquidate its positions more rapidly than otherwise desired in order to raise the cash necessary to pay for those redemptions and result in losses to the Client.

Limited Rights of Investors in Funds Managed by the Firm

An investment in an investment fund should be regarded as a passive investment. This is because investors usually hold securities that have no right to participate in the day-to-day operations of the fund, nor are they entitled to receive notice of, attend or vote at general meetings of the fund, other than a general meeting to vote on a proposed variation of the rights attaching to their securities. Consequently, investors often have no control over the management of the fund or over the appointment and removal of its directors and service providers.

Side Letters

From time to time, the Firm may enter into agreements (“Side Letters”) with certain prospective or existing investors in funds managed by the Firm, under which those shareholders receive advantages not appearing in the funds’ offering documents. For example, a Side Letter with a prospective or existing investor may give that investor one or more of the following advantages over other investors of the same fund:

- Special rights to make future investments in the fund, other investment vehicles or managed accounts;
- Special redemption rights relating to frequency, period of notice, redemption fees (whether in the form of a reduction or rebate), redemption penalties payable or other terms, or any combination of these;
- Rights to receive reports from the Fund on a more frequent basis or that include information not provided to other investors (including, without limitation, more detailed information regarding portfolio positions); or
- Such other rights as may be negotiated by the fund and that investor.

The terms of any Side Letters are at the sole discretion of the Firm and may be based on various factors, including but not limited to (i) the size of the investor’s investment, (ii) an undertaking by the investor to maintain its investment in the fund for a significant period of time, or (iii) some other similar undertaking by the investor.

Valuation of the Clients’ Investments

Valuation of the clients’ securities and other investments may involve uncertainties and judgmental determinations. If a valuation is incorrect, the net asset value of such Clients may be adversely affected. Independent pricing information about some of the Clients’ securities and other investments may not always be available. However, valuations will be made in good faith in accordance with the Clients’ respective offering documents or investment management agreement.

If the value assigned by Clients to an investment differs from its actual value, the net asset value of the Clients may be either understated or overstated to the extent of that difference. Consequently, if the actual value of some of the Clients' investments is higher than the value assigned to them, an investor who redeems all or part of its shares of a particular Client while they are so undervalued may be paid less than if they were correctly valued. Conversely, if the actual value of some of a Client's investments is lower than the value assigned to them, the investor may, in effect, be overpaid at the expense of remaining investors.

Furthermore, an investment in a Client by a new investor (or an additional investment by an existing investor) may dilute the value of the Client's investments for the other investors if those investments are undervalued. Conversely, a new investor (or an existing investor who makes an additional investment) could pay too much if the underlying investments are overvalued by the Client.

Additionally, as the fees of a number of the Clients' service providers are usually tied to Clients' net asset value, any discrepancy in valuation may result in overpayment or underpayment to those service providers.

In-Kind Distributions

A redeeming investor may, at the discretion of a Client, receive securities owned by the Client in lieu of or in combination with cash. The value of securities distributed may increase or decrease before the securities can be sold, and the investor will incur transaction costs in connection with the sale of those securities. Additionally, securities distributed to an investor in connection with a redemption request may not be readily marketable. In those circumstances, the investor bears the risk of loss and delay in liquidating those securities, with the result that it may ultimately receive less cash than it would otherwise have received if it had been paid in cash alone for its shares on the date of redemption.

Derivative Instruments

The Firm or Portfolio Funds may use various derivative instruments, including futures, options, forward contracts, swaps and other derivatives. These may be volatile and speculative. Certain positions may be subject to wide and sudden fluctuations in market value, with a resulting fluctuation in the amount of profits and losses. Using derivative instruments has various risks. These include the following:

- Tracking

When used for hedging purposes, an imperfect or variable degree of correlation between price movements of the derivative instrument and the underlying investment sought to be hedged may prevent the Firm from achieving the intended hedging effect or may expose the portfolio to the risk of loss.

- Liquidity

Derivative instruments, especially when traded in large amounts, may not always be liquid. Hence in volatile markets, the Firm may not be able to close out a position without incurring a loss. In addition, exchanges on which the Firm conducts its transactions in certain derivative instruments may have daily limits on price fluctuations and speculative positions limits. These limits may prevent the Firm from liquidating positions promptly, thereby subjecting the portfolio to the potential of greater losses.

- Leverage

Trading in derivative instruments can result in large amounts of leverage. The leverage offered by trading in derivative instruments may magnify the gains and losses. This could subject a Client's net asset value to wider fluctuations than would be the case if derivative instruments were not made.

- Over-the-counter trading

Derivative instruments that may be purchased or sold may include instruments not traded on an exchange. Over-the-counter options/instruments, unlike exchange-traded options/instruments, are two-party contracts with price and other terms negotiated by the buyer and seller. The risk of non-performance by the obligor on an over-the-counter instrument may be greater than in the case of an exchange-traded instrument. In addition, significant disparities may exist between “bid” and “asked” prices for derivative instruments that are not traded on an exchange. Derivative instruments not traded on exchanges are also not subject to the same type of government regulation as exchange-traded instruments, and many of the protections afforded to participants in a regulated environment may not be available in connection with those instruments.

Short Sales

Securities sold short create an opportunity to profit when the value of the security sold short declines in value. However, securities sold short also carry unlimited loss potential, as the market price of securities sold short may increase continuously. Under adverse market conditions Clients might have difficulty covering securities sold short and may have to sell other portfolio securities to raise the capital necessary to meet short sale obligations at a time when fundamental investment considerations would not favor such sales.

Short sales are often considered a speculative investment, but often may be used with the intention of hedging against the risk of declines in the market value of a Client’s long portfolio. However, there is no guarantee that such hedging operations would be successful.

Market Risks and Liquidity

Usually, the profitability of a significant portion of a Client’s investment program depends in large measure on the Firm correctly assessing the future course of the price movements of securities and other investments. There is no assurance that the Firm will be able to accurately predict those price movements. Although the Firm may attempt to mitigate market risk through the use of long and short positions or other methods, there is always some and occasionally a significant degree of market risk.

Furthermore, the client may be adversely affected by a decrease in market liquidity for instruments in which it invests, which may impair its ability to adjust its position. The size of a client’s positions may magnify the effect of a decrease in market liquidity for those instruments. Changes in overall market leverage, deleveraging as a consequence of a decision by a prime broker to reduce the level of leverage available, or the liquidation by other market participants of the same or similar positions may also adversely affect the client’s portfolio. Some of the underlying investments of a client may not be actively traded and there may be uncertainties involved in valuing those investments. Potential investors in fund clients and managed account clients are warned that under those circumstances, the value of the fund or account may be adversely affected.

Hedging

Although the Firm on behalf of clients may attempt to hedge their exposure to specific arbitrage positions, it will not always be possible to fully hedge risk from such positions or any other position. In addition, clients may take positions based on the expected future direction of the markets without fully hedging the market risks.

Counterparty and Settlement Risk

Due to the nature of some of the investments that a client may make, the client may rely on the ability of the counterparty to a transaction to perform its obligations. If that party fails to complete its obligations for any reason, the client may suffer losses and therefore be exposed to a credit risk on the counterparties with which it trades. The client will also bear the risk of settlement default by clearing houses and exchanges. A default by a counterparty or a default on settlement could have a material adverse effect on a client.

Borrowing

Clients may be permitted to finance their operations with secured and unsecured borrowing to the maximum extent allowable under applicable credit regulations. Clients may suffer losses if there are adverse changes in the level of market prices of the assets being financed with the borrowings.

More detailed information on risks relating to investments in our products is included in the offering memoranda of applicable Clients and in the investment management agreements of managed account clients.

Risks Relating to Anticipated Fund-of-Funds

The Firm launched a fund-of-funds strategy in 2014, which seeks to identify and invest in a diversified portfolio of emerging hedge fund managers. Such strategy will include numerous risks, including, without limitation, the risks described above, and the following:

- Limited Experience with Respect To Seed Investments

Although part of the Firm's investment team has experience with seed investments, the Firm has limited experience managing a fund whose primary strategy involves making such seed investments. There can be no assurance that the Firm will allocate investments to emerging advisers or emerging adviser funds that are successful, or that the Firm will be able to successfully implement such strategy's investment objective.

- Competitive Nature of Seed Investments

This strategy's business is highly competitive and involves a high degree of uncertainty. Such strategy will be competing for seed investments against other investors, and the Firm may be unable to identify a sufficient number of attractive investment opportunities for such strategy to meet its investment objectives.

- Investments with Emerging Advisers

With respect to such strategy, the Firm intends to allocate assets to emerging advisers, which likely will not have independent track records and/or experience managing an investment advisory business, thereby making it more difficult for the Firm to evaluate the likely performance of the emerging advisers and the emerging adviser funds. Even if the emerging advisers or the emerging adviser funds do have independent track records, past performance records of emerging advisers and emerging adviser funds are not indications of how the emerging advisers or emerging adviser funds (including newly formed emerging adviser funds of established emerging advisers) to which the Firm allocates assets will perform in the future, or whether an emerging adviser will be successful in managing an investment advisory business (regardless of such emerging adviser's trading performance).

Start-up emerging advisers are also likely to have limited or no assets under management prior to such strategy's investment, and the allocation of assets to such emerging advisers may entail additional risks. For example, such emerging advisers may have fewer dedicated resources and less developed infrastructure capabilities as compared to other emerging advisers that are more established. The foregoing may result in greater deficiencies relating to operations, risk management and investment management. Any such infrastructure deficiencies could result in deleterious effects on such strategy's performance.

Further, emerging advisers with limited or no assets under management may be more likely to have smaller portfolio management teams, as compared to managers with higher levels of assets under management.

Therefore, the management and direction of the investment programs of an emerging adviser fund may be more likely to rely on certain key personnel of an emerging adviser. The departure of key personnel of an emerging adviser or the inability of such key personnel to fulfill certain duties may adversely affect the ability of the emerging adviser to effectively implement the investment programs of the emerging adviser funds that it manages and may have a greater adverse impact on such strategy than would the departure of key personnel from an investment fund with a larger portfolio management team. The departure of key personnel of an emerging adviser may occur without notice to the Firm.

- No Operating History

The Firm has limited operating history with respect to such strategy on which prospective investors can base an evaluation of future performance. The past performance of other investment funds or accounts sponsored, managed or advised by the Firm or its affiliates, which have or have had investment objectives similar to or different from that of such strategy, are not necessarily indicative of the results that such strategy may achieve.

General Real Estate Considerations

Real property investments are subject to varying degrees of risk. Real estate values are affected by a number of factors, including changes in the general economic climate, local conditions, the quality and philosophy of management, competition based on rental rates, attractiveness and location of the properties, physical condition of the properties, financial condition of buyers and sellers of properties, quality of maintenance, insurance and management services, and changes in operating costs. If an specific project does not generate sufficient revenues or proceeds to meet its operating expenses, including debt service and capital expenditures, cash flow and ability to pay distributions to the investors will be adversely affected. Certain significant expenditures associated with the equity investment (such as mortgage payments, real estate taxes, lease obligations and insurance and maintenance costs) are generally not reduced when circumstances cause a reduction in income from such investment. Real estate historically has experienced significant fluctuations and cycles in value and the Fund's investment may be made at a less than optimal time. Real estate values are also affected by such factors as government regulations (including those governing usage, improvements, zoning and taxes); interest rate levels; the availability of financing; participation by other investors in the financial markets; potential liability under changing laws; acts of God, including earthquakes, hurricanes and other natural disasters; acts of war and acts of terrorism (any of which may result in uninsured losses).

General Economic Conditions and Investment Environment

General economic conditions may affect the real estate activities. Interest rates, general levels of economic activity, the price of securities and participation by other investors in the financial markets may affect the value of the real estate investments. The U.S. and global market and economic conditions have been, and continue to be, difficult and volatile. In particular, the cost and availability of funding has been and may continue to be adversely affected by the illiquidity and widening credit spreads in the credit markets. Continued turbulence in the U.S. and international markets and economy, as well as changes in market, economic, political, technological, regulatory, social conditions, and/or numerous other factors outside the control of the managers, could materially and adversely affect the liquidity, financial condition, activities and prospects of the real estate vehicles

Investment in Real Estate Development

Projects may constitute of undeveloped real property, which, may not produce income. Therefore, it may be subject to the risks normally associated with such assets and development activities. Such risks include those relating to the availability, expense and timely receipt of zoning and other regulatory approvals, the cost and timely completion of construction (including risks beyond the control of the managers, such as weather or labor conditions or material shortages) and the availability of both construction and permanent financing on favorable terms. These risks could result in substantial, unanticipated delays or expenses and, under certain circumstances, could prevent completion of development activities once undertaken, any of which could have an adverse effect on the financial condition and results of operations of the investment vehicle and on the amount of funds available for distribution to the investors. Additionally, the project may receive little or no cash flow from the date of acquisition through the date of completion of development and may still experience operating deficits well after the date of completion. In addition, market conditions may change during the course of development that make the investment less attractive than at the time it was commenced.

Potential Environmental Liability

The projects will be subject to a variety of U.S. federal, state and local statutes, ordinances, rules and regulations concerning the protection of health and the environment. Environmental laws may result in delays, may cause the investment vehicles to incur substantial compliance and other costs and may prohibit or severely restrict development. Under various environmental laws, an owner of real property may be liable for the costs of removal or remediation of certain hazardous or toxic substances on or in such property (including, without limitation, asbestos, mold, lead, petroleum products and other pollutants). Such enactments often impose such liability without regard to whether the owner knew of, or was responsible for, the presence of such hazardous or toxic substances. For example, the current owner of a parcel of land may be liable for environmental problems at, or emanating from, the parcel of land that were caused by a past owner or current operator of the site. The cost of any required remediation and the owner's liability in respect thereof is generally not limited under such enactments and could exceed the value of the property and/or the aggregate assets of the owner. The presence of such substances, or the failure to properly remediate such substances, may adversely affect the owner's ability to sell the real estate or to borrow using such property as collateral. In addition, remediated property may attract a limited number of potential purchasers because of the property's history of contamination, which might also adversely affect the owner's ability to sell the property. Further, a transfer of property does not relieve from liability a person who owned the property at a time when hazardous or toxic substances were disposed of on, or released from, such property. Also, noncompliance with environmental regulations may allow a governmental authority to order the owner/operator to cease operations at the property or to incur substantial costs and expenses to bring the property into compliance through the implementation of burdensome remediation or prophylactic measures. It is also possible that the owners of properties with significant contamination could be exposed to property damage in personal injury claims by adjoining or nearby landowners or residents. Finally, there can be no assurance that environmental laws relating to real estate transactions will not be amended in the future in ways that could adversely affect the Fund's investment.

Item 9 Disciplinary Information

The Firm does not believe that there have been any legal or disciplinary events that are material to its business. It should be noted however, that Mr. Gilberto Sayão da Silva, the Firm's primary owner was involved in a violation of Brazilian, investment-related regulations. As a result, Mr. Sayão was a party to an administrative proceeding in Brazil brought by the Brazilian Securities Commission ("CVM"). The proceedings involved actions being brought against Mr. Sayão's previous employer, Banco Pactual S.A. for unethical practices related to the creation of artificial demand conditions and fraud concerning options transactions involving an affiliate of Banco Pactual S.A. from 1999 through 2001. Mr. Sayão was named along with two other persons in the proceedings because they were officers of Banco Pactual S.A. at the time of the violations. The proceedings were concluded on September 9, 2010 with Mr. Sayão executing a Brazilian Termo de Compromisso with the CVM in which he was not found guilty nor did Mr. Sayão admit any guilt. In addition, Mr. Jose Garbowsky, a supervised person of the Firm has a pending regulatory matter that was initiated by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Brazil on 2014 relating to a matter when Mr. Garbowsky was an executive officer of a publicly traded company in Brazil. Specifically, Mr. Garbowsky has been accused by CVM of violating 155, §1 OF LEI 6404/76 (Brazilian Corporate Law), which establishes a breach of duty of secrecy by a company's administrators and Article 13 of CVM Instruction 358/2002, which prohibits administrators of a public company to trade the company before publishing of a material fact.

The Firm has also adopted a Code of Ethics as described below in Item 11, Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading. The Firm provides certain administrative services and shares its office space within Vernier Capital Partners, LP, an unaffiliated registered investment adviser. The Firm believes it has adopted reasonable policy and procedures to mitigate the risks associated with the shared office space, which includes procedures to ensure segregation of confidential information such as training, limited access to each firm's physical office space and procedures that prohibit trading based on either entity coming into possession of certain confidential information.

Item 12 Brokerage Practices

Best execution

The Firm selects broker-dealers for client transactions. In selecting and evaluating broker-dealers, the Firm seeks those broker-dealers who can provide best execution of transactions under the circumstances. The principal factors determining this selection may include, but are not limited to: efficient services, credit risk, price, trading expertise, access to particular markets, reliability, reputation and availability of securities to borrow for short sales. Research services provided by such brokers are not taken into consideration when selecting brokers. “Best execution” is not synonymous with lowest brokerage commission. Consequently, in a particular transaction, a client may pay a brokerage commission in excess of that which another broker might have charged for executing the same transaction.

The Firm does not have any formal soft dollar arrangement. However, if it decides to establish any soft dollar relationship, it plans that all soft dollar arrangements will be compliant with Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended. Although research services provided are not taken into consideration when selecting brokers, the Firm does on occasion receive research and services from broker-dealers that it selects. Such research and other services are received by the Firm from the brokers free of charge. The types of research and services received from broker-dealers during the past fiscal year include reports or other information about particular companies or industries, economic analyses, recommendations of specific securities and financial publications, and invitations to meetings, conferences and events.

Aggregation of orders

If the Firm decides to purchase or sell the same securities for more than one client, the Firm may, but is not required to, aggregate or “bunch” orders in a block trade or trades that may facilitate obtaining the best price or transaction cost. Such aggregation will generally only occur within the same product line (e.g., wealth management, macro strategies, and others), and when the account is managed by the same portfolio manager, because the trading is done autonomously by the portfolio managers within each product line without consulting or requiring approval from portfolio managers of other product lines. Under this procedure, transactions will be averaged as to price and transaction costs and will be allocated among the clients in proportion to the purchase and sale order placed for each client on any given day.

If the Firm cannot obtain execution of all the combined orders at prices or for transaction costs that the Firm believes are desirable, the Firm will generally allocate the securities they do buy or sell on a pro rata basis among the client accounts, using daily average prices for the securities purchased or sold, and generally based, for each client, on net asset value of the client, current position size for the securities purchased or sold and target position size for the securities purchased or sold, unless the clients have differing investment strategies that require a different allocation, or the Firm believes in good faith a different allocation is appropriate. For further discussion of the Firm’s trade allocation policy, see Item 6 “Performance-Based Fees and Side-by-Side Management”.

The Vinci Group has established autonomous business units based on type of offering, the portfolio managers involved and/or investment strategy. Each business unit is authorized to effect transactions without consulting or requiring approval from portfolio managers of other product lines. Due to differences that may exist between Clients, such as having different investment objectives or risk profiles, it is not always possible to effect transactions for all Clients at the same time. However, when a specific business unit is effecting transactions on behalf of multiple Clients simultaneously, the business unit will strive to aggregate Client trades and allocate securities pro rata, based on the value of a Client’s account using the average price for the securities purchased or sold, unless the business unit believes in good faith a different allocation is appropriate.

Trade errors

The Firm attempts to minimize trade errors by promptly reconciling confirmations with trade order information, and by reviewing past trade errors to understand if an internal control breakdown caused any error. If the Firm makes an error while placing a trade for a client, the Firm will seek to correct the error promptly in a way that mitigates any losses. The cost of errors, when permitted in a Client's investment advisory agreement, will be borne by such Client unless an error is the result of gross negligence, or willful misconduct by the Firm.

Item 13 Review of Accounts

Each Client portfolio is monitored on a continual basis under the direction of the respective portfolio manager in order to monitor and analyze holdings, exposure, concentration, specific risks and mandates of Client accounts.

Upon request, investors in Fund Clients can receive monthly or quarterly unaudited, written reports that have been reconciled to information provided by their custodian and/or third-party service provider. Audited financial statements are sent to investors annually.

Upon request, SMA Clients can receive monthly or quarterly unaudited, written reports that have been reconciled to information provided by their custodian and/or third-party service provider.

Investors in the RE Fund receive periodic, usually semiannually, written updates concerning the RE Fund and annual, audited financial statements.

See also Item 15 - Custody.

Item 14 Client Referrals and Other Compensation

The Firm does not receive any economic benefit from any party other than Clients for providing advisory services to our Clients. The Firm or its affiliates do not compensate any person for client referrals.

Item 15 Custody

For purposes of the custody rule under the U.S. Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (“Custody Rule”), the Firm may be deemed to have “custody” of certain Client assets, such as when we have the ability to deduct fees from client accounts or the Firm or an affiliate serves as general partner to a Fund Client.

If the Firm is deemed to have custody with respect to cash or securities of a Fund Client, investors in such fund will generally receive annual audited financial statements prepared by an independent accounting firm that is registered with and subject to review by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, and the Firm will comply with all other requirements of the Custody Rule.

The Firm will generally not have custody of cash or securities of SMA Clients. All new investment management agreements for SMA Clients specifically state that the Firm will not have custody and that any power-of-attorney granted to any affiliated person of the Firm will not provide the power to operate or withdraw any funds from Client accounts. If the Firm is deemed to have custody with respect to cash or securities of a SMA, the investor will receive at least quarterly account statements from the account’s qualified custodian (which the client should carefully review), or the Firm will otherwise comply with all other applicable requirements of the Custody Rule, including obtaining a surprise examination in accordance with the Custody Rule. If investors also receive account statements directly from the Firm, such statements shall include an explanation urging the client to compare such statements with account statements received from the qualified custodian.

Item 16 Investment Discretion

The Firm has, with respect to all Clients, discretionary authority to manage the portfolios of Clients, subject to any investment guidelines and other restrictions defined in each Client's governing documents.

Item 17 Voting Client Securities

The Firm has the authority to vote, in its sole discretion, all proxies solicited by or with respect to the issuers of securities held in Client accounts. Whenever any corporate action is required, the Firm shall consider and vote in the best interests of its clients.

Vinci USA will vote proxies relating to Client securities in the best interest of Clients, although it will generally vote client proxies only when the agenda and the size of a position are relevant, as well as when such exercise does not bring excessive costs to Clients. When voting proxies, Vinci USA will review on a case-by-case basis each proposal submitted for vote to determine its impact on the portfolio securities held by Clients. Although Vinci USA will generally vote against proposals that may have a negative impact on Client portfolio securities, it may vote for such a proposal if there exist compelling long-term reasons to do so.

The proxy voting decisions of Vinci USA are made, subject to oversight by assigned members of the investment team who are responsible for monitoring each of Vinci USA investments. To ensure that their respective votes are not the product of a conflict of interest, Vinci USA requires that: (a) anyone involved in the decision-making process disclose to Vinci USA's Chief Compliance Officer any potential conflict that he or she is aware of and any contact that he or she has had with any interested party regarding a proxy vote; and (b) Supervised Persons involved in the decision-making process or vote administration are prohibited from revealing how Vinci USA intends to vote on a proposal in order to reduce any attempted influence from interested parties.

Clients may obtain further information about votes at compliance@vincipartners.com.

Item 18 Financial Information

The Firm is not aware of any financial condition that is reasonably likely to impair its ability to meet contractual commitments to clients.
