ITEM 4

Advisory Business

RoundTable Healthcare Management, Inc. ("RoundTable" or the "Firm") was established in February 2001. RoundTable is owned by R. Craig Collister, Pierre Frechette, and Thomas P. Kapfer who serve as its Management Committee. The Management Committee also serves as the management board of the Firm's investment partnerships.

RoundTable provides investment advisory services to a group of operating-oriented private equity funds focused exclusively on the healthcare industry. RoundTable partners with companies that can benefit from our extensive industry relationships and proven operating and transaction expertise.

RoundTable provides investment advice to twelve equity funds (the "Equity Funds") and three subordinated debt funds (the "Debt Funds" and together, the "Funds"). Each Fund's offering documents (as amended and supplemented from time to time, the "Offering Materials") set forth the investment guidelines and/or the types of investments in which the assets of such Fund may be invested. These investment guidelines and restrictions are not tailored to the needs or risk profiles of the investors in the Funds. As of December 31, 2021, RoundTable had approximately $3,449,412,231 in regulatory assets under management.

Fees and Compensation

In consideration for the investment advisory services provided to each Fund, the Firm is generally entitled to receive an annual management fee of 1.5% per annum (in the case of the Debt Funds) or 2.0% per annum (in the case of the Equity Funds) of the Fund's aggregate investor commitments during the Fund's investment period, and afterward, between 1.5% and 1.9% (in the case of the Equity Funds) or between 1.0% and 1.4% (in the case of the Debt Funds) of such Fund's invested capital. Such fees are generally billed to each Fund and collected in advance on an annual or semi-annual basis. In the event that an advisory contract with any Fund is terminated during any period for which the management fee has been pre-paid, the portion of such fee that covers the remaining portion of such period would be refunded to the Fund.

In addition, and as discussed further in Item 6, subject to any reductions or waivers mentioned below, investors in the Funds generally bear a carried interest equal to 20% of the profits, if any, earned from each investment made by the Funds, subject to a preferred return. Carried interest distributions are calculated and made to the General Partner of each Fund out of the proceeds of the relevant investment at the time of realization. Each Fund's fee schedule generally is not negotiable; however, in most cases, RoundTable has the discretion to waive fees with respect to a particular Fund or a particular investor within a Fund.

Each Fund will generally bear its own expenses. In addition to the management fees discussed above, such expenses include, without limitation: (i) organizational and offering expenses; (ii) expenses incurred in connection with investments and prospective investments, and (iii) routine administrative expenses relating to the maintenance of the Fund. The Funds do not generally incur brokerage costs or other fees related to trading as they deal primarily in private transactions. Further, two of the Equity Funds, in recognition of their unique and limited investment program, bear (and other future similar fund clients of the Firm may bear) a reduced carried interest and no management fees.

Additional information about each Fund as well as the fees and expenses charged to investors by such Fund is provided in the Fund's Offering Materials.

Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

As discussed in Item 5, the Funds' investors generally bear a carried interest equal to 20% of the profits, if any, earned from each investment made by the Funds, subject to a preferred return; provided that investors in certain Funds may bear a higher carried interest percentage if certain performance thresholds are achieved, as described in such Fund's Offering Materials, and investors in certain Funds that have unique and limited investment programs may bear a reduced carried interest percentage. Carried interest distributions are calculated and made to the General Partner of each Fund out of the proceeds of the relevant investment at the time of realization. The General Partners of the Funds are related persons of RoundTable. The Firm receives no portion of any such carried interest; however, certain of its supervised persons may be entitled to a portion of any such carried interest paid. Carried interest arrangements may create an incentive for the Firm to recommend investments which may be riskier or more speculative than those which would be recommended under a different arrangement.

ITEM 7

Types of Clients

RoundTable provides advisory services to each of the Funds described in Item 4. Investors in the Funds primarily include individuals, trusts, funds of funds, pension plans and endowments.

Prospective investors in each of the Funds are required to meet certain suitability qualifications to enable the funds to maintain their private placement exemptions under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (the "Securities Act"), and the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "Investment Company Act"). The conditions for becoming an investor in each Fund, including the minimum investment, are set forth in the Offering Materials for such Fund. The minimum investment is generally $5 million for our 3(c)(7) funds and generally $250 thousand for 3(c)(1) funds. RoundTable generally has the discretion to waive such minimums, subject to compliance with applicable law.

ITEM 8

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

Methods of Analysis and Investment Strategies

RoundTable's strategy is to utilize the Firm's extensive healthcare operating and transaction experience to improve the long-term growth and profitability of its Funds' portfolio companies. RoundTable seeks opportunities where the expertise of the RoundTable partners and principals makes the Firm a differentiated, value-added partner. RoundTable believes that making companies strategically stronger enhances their value and is the key to consistently attractive investment returns.

RoundTable's investment process actively involves the Firm's senior operating partners working in tandem with the Firm's transaction team. These senior operating partners and other operating resources bring unique contacts and perspectives to the deal-sourcing and analysis phases of potential investments. Their contributions at these early stages ensure that a potential portfolio company under review can benefit from RoundTable's strategic insight, operating expertise, and industry relationships. The Firm's ability to demonstrate its value-add proposition significantly enhances the Firm's success in closing transactions. Additionally, the operating partners' involvement in the transaction process reduces investment risk through their addition of in-depth market knowledge, thorough due diligence, and access to a strong network of senior managers available to provide leadership to the portfolio companies after the investment is made.

Risk of Loss

An investment in a Fund entails a high degree of risk, including the risk of total loss of capital, and is suitable only for sophisticated investors who fully understand and are capable of bearing the risks of such investment. Prospective investors should carefully consider the following factors, among others, in making their investment decision. The risks associated with investing in a Fund include, but are not limited to, those listed below.

No Assurance of Investment Return

RoundTable cannot provide assurance that it will be able to select, execute and realize investments in any particular company. In particular, a Fund could be unable to find a sufficient number of attractive investment opportunities to meet its investment objectives. There is also significant risk that a Fund will be unable to negotiate and execute such investments on favorable terms and to realize such investments by sale or other disposition at attractive prices. There is no assurance that a Fund will be able to generate returns for its investors or that the returns will meet the projected or targeted level. An investment in a Fund should only be considered by persons who can afford a loss of their entire investment. The past investment performance of predecessor funds should not be construed as an indication of future results of any investment in a Fund. There can be no assurance that a Fund will be able to achieve its investment objective or that investors will receive any return of capital.

Reliance on the General Partner and Principals

A Fund will be managed exclusively by the General Partner, and Limited Partners will not be able to make investment or other decisions regarding a Fund. The General Partner will have considerable latitude in its choice of portfolio companies and the structuring of portfolio investments. Accordingly, the success of a Fund will depend upon the ability of the RoundTable Partners and Principals to source, select, execute and realize appropriate investments. The loss of the services of one or more of the RoundTable Partners and Principals could have an adverse effect on a Fund's ability to realize its investment objectives. There can be no assurance that each of the RoundTable Partners and Principals will continue to be affiliated with the General Partner throughout a Fund's anticipated term.

Concentration Risks

A Fund's portfolio companies will be concentrated in the healthcare sector. Concentration in a single industry is likely to involve risks greater than those generally associated with diversified acquisition funds, including significant fluctuations in returns. Instability, fluctuation or an overall decline within the healthcare sector will not be offset by investments in other industries.

Risks of Investments in Healthcare Industry

Companies in the healthcare sector face rapidly changing market conditions, increasing cost pressures and price competition, and intense competition for development of new products and services. Further, as healthcare costs have risen significantly over the past decade, numerous initiatives and reforms have been initiated by legislators, regulators and third-party payors to streamline these costs and this has resulted in greater pricing and other competitive pressures. Market demand, government regulation, third-party reimbursement policies, consumer behavior and societal pressures will continue to reshape the landscape of the healthcare sector and could exert downward pressure on prices and the business operations of many companies in the healthcare sector. In the event that the healthcare industry as a whole declines, returns to Limited Partners are likely to decrease.

In addition, the healthcare industry is highly regulated by federal, state and local law and regulations and by foreign laws and regulations in non-U.S. jurisdictions. These laws and regulations include, among other things, those governing licensing and certification requirements, facility inspections, reimbursement policies under federal and state medical assistance programs, medical waste disposal, dispensing of controlled substances and workplace health and safety. Changes in laws or new interpretations of existing laws could have a significant impact on the methods and costs of doing business in the healthcare sector.

Changes in U.S. Healthcare Policy and Regulatory Reforms

Legislation reforming the U.S. healthcare system could have a materially adverse effect on the financial condition and operation of certain companies in the healthcare sector. For example, in 2010, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, was enacted (the "Affordable Care Act") with a goal of expanding health insurance coverage and establishing new regulations on health plans, creating insurance-pooling mechanisms and other expanded public health care measures, and imposing new taxes on sales of medical devices and pharmaceuticals. Since its enactment, there have been judicial and congressional challenges to certain aspects of the Affordable Care Act, and there are expected to be additional challenges and amendments to the Affordable Care Act in the future. In addition, the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017, which includes a provision that entered into effect on January 1, 2019, that repeals the tax-based shared responsibility payment imposed by the Affordable Care Act on certain individuals who fail to maintain qualifying health coverage for all or part of a year that is commonly referred to as the “individual mandate.” Since the enactment of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017, there have been additional amendments to certain provisions of the Affordable Care Act, and efforts could continue to seek to modify, repeal, or otherwise invalidate all, or certain provisions of, the Affordable Care Act. Various reform proposals have also emerged at the state level, further adding to the uncertainty facing the healthcare industry.

The uncertainty surrounding the implementation of such proposals adds to the unpredictability in valuing and selecting a Fund’s investment in any particular company, as such proposals could adversely impact such company. It is impossible to predict what healthcare initiatives will be enacted at the federal or state level, or the effect any future legislation or regulation will have on the healthcare industry. An expansion in the government’s role in the U.S. healthcare industry could lower reimbursements for products created or manufactured by a portfolio company, reduce medical procedure volumes and, correspondingly, the need for certain services of a particular portfolio company. Such an expansion might also adversely affect the business and operation of a particular portfolio company directly through the imposition of additional taxes, fees or other obligations.

The Dodd-Frank Act

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (the “Dodd-Frank Act”), which was enacted on July 21, 2010, significantly revised and expanded the rulemaking, supervisory and enforcement authority of federal bank, securities and commodities regulators.

The Dodd-Frank Act includes provisions applicable to both large and small financial institutions, including provisions that affect the lending, deposit, investment, trading and operating activities of banks and their holding companies. It also requires various federal bank and financial regulatory authorities to adopt a broad range of implementing rules and regulations.

The Dodd-Frank Act imposes certain reporting obligations on RoundTable with respect to a Fund. Records and reports relating to a Fund are subject to inspection by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”). and will likely include sensitive information, including with respect to RoundTable, a Fund and a Fund’s investment strategy. No assurance can be given that records or reports disclosed to the SEC or other governmental entities will not have a significant negative impact on a Fund, RoundTable or any individual investor in the event that such information becomes public. In addition, SEC scrutiny of investment advisers and the possibility of SEC audit could increase a Fund’s compliance, administrative and other operational costs. RoundTable is registered as an investment adviser with the SEC and is subject to increased recordkeeping and reporting obligations. Records and reports relating to a Fund that are required to be retained by RoundTable and that are subject to inspection by the SEC include: (i) assets under management and use of leverage (including off-balance-sheet leverage); (ii) counterparty credit risk exposure; (iii) trading and investment positions; (iv) valuation policies and practices of a Fund; (v) type of assets held; (vi) side arrangements or side letters; (vii) trading practices; and (viii) such other information as the SEC, in consultation with the Financial Stability Oversight Council, determines is necessary and appropriate. As noted, no assurance can be given that the mandated disclosure of records or reports to the SEC or other governmental entities will not have a significant negative impact on a Fund, RoundTable, or any individual investor if they become public.

The Dodd-Frank Act also establishes a general framework for systemic regulation. The full scope of such regime, and its application to investment advisers to private funds, will remain unclear until all of the implementing regulations are developed and enacted. There can be no assurance that future regulatory actions authorized by the Dodd-Frank Act will not adversely affect a Fund.

Enhanced Scrutiny and Regulations of the Private Funds and Financial Services Industries

The growth of the private funds industry, and the increasing size and reach of transactions, as well as the increased attention to private funds, has prompted governmental and public attention to the private funds industry and its practices over the last decade. In particular, the Dodd-Frank Act requires registration with the SEC of advisers to private funds whose assets under management exceed $150 million (with certain limited exceptions) and imposes reporting and record-keeping obligations with respect to the private funds they advise. The Dodd-Frank Act also imposes a number of restrictions on the relationship and activities of banking organizations with private equity and hedge funds and other provisions that affect the private funds industry, either directly or indirectly.

In addition, as alternative asset managers have become influential participants in the U.S. and global financial markets and economy generally, the private funds industry has been subject to criticism by some politicians, regulators and market commentators. In Germany, for example, U.S. and UK private equity firms are perceived by some as having been responsible certain high profile bankruptcies as well as for high levels of domestic unemployment. There have been similar concerns expressed in other European countries. Various federal, state and local agencies have examined the role of placement agents, finders and other similar private funds service providers in the context of investments by public pension plans and other similar entities, including investigations and requests for information. Furthermore, elements of organized labor and other representatives of labor unions have targeted private equity firms on a variety of matters of interest to organized labor, including with respect to affording favorable treatment or significant deference to organized labor and labor unions in dealings with portfolio companies. There can be no assurance that the foregoing will not have an adverse impact on a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates or otherwise impede a Fund's activities.

This increased political and regulatory scrutiny of the private funds industry was particularly acute during the global financial crisis. For example, in addition to the U.S. and European legislation described above, other jurisdictions proposed modernizing financial regulations that called for, among other things, increased regulation of and disclosure with respect to, and possibly registration of, hedge funds and private equity funds. There is a risk that regulatory agencies in the United States, Europe or elsewhere could continue to adopt burdensome laws (including tax laws) or regulations, or could implement changes in law or regulation, or could pursue interpretation or the enforcement thereof, which are specifically targeted at the private funds industry.

With respect to interpretation and enforcement in the United States, the SEC stated publicly in recent years that its Division of Examinations (formally known as the Office of Compliance Inspections and Examination) intensified efforts to examine private fund advisers, with a focus on issues of concern identified in the course of presence exams of newly registered advisers that occurred shortly after the enactment of the Dodd-Frank Act. Such issues included, among others, the disclosure and allocation of fees, costs and expenses; marketing practices; portfolio management; conflicts of interest; safety of client assets; and valuation. Consistent with such efforts, the SEC dramatically increased its pursuit of enforcement actions against private fund managers. Such actions alleged a variety of conduct, including undisclosed or unapproved related-party and affiliate transactions, as well as undisclosed fees, costs and expenses, and other undisclosed conflicts of interests. Industry observers generally agree that the enforcement trend is likely to continue.

There can be no assurance that a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates will avoid regulatory examination and possibly enforcement actions. Recent SEC enforcement actions and settlements involving U.S.-based private fund advisers have involved a number of issues including, undisclosed fee sharing arrangements with co-investors; the undisclosed disproportionate allocations of fees, costs and expenses to managed funds for services that benefited the applicable adviser but without cost to the adviser; the undisclosed allocation of transaction fees to co-investors to reduce the magnitude of management fee offsets; engagement in unregistered broker-dealer activities; the undisclosed allocation of the fees, costs and expenses related to unconsummated co-investment transactions (i.e., the allocation of broken deal expenses), undisclosed legal fee arrangements affording the applicable adviser with greater discounts than those afforded to funds advised by such adviser and the undisclosed acceleration of monitoring fees.

In summary, regulation generally as well as regulation more specifically addressed to the private funds industry, including tax laws and regulation, whether in the United States or abroad, could increase the cost of acquiring, holding or divesting a Fund's investments, the profitability of such enterprises and the cost of operating a Fund. Additional regulation could also increase the risk of third-party litigation. The transactional nature of the business of a Fund exposes a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and each of their respective affiliates generally to the risks of third-party litigation.

Enhanced Scrutiny of the Private Equity Industry Specifically

Recently proposed legislation in the United States would impose a number of highly significant restrictions and burdens on private fund managers, the funds that they sponsor and their investors. These proposals would, among other things (a) remove the limited liability status of investors in a private fund that acquires 20% or more of the voting securities of a portfolio company (a "Controlling Interest") and hold the investors jointly and severally liable for debts and obligations of such portfolio company, (b) prohibit indemnification by a portfolio company of a private fund that holds a Controlling Interest in the portfolio company, as well as indemnification of the private fund's manager, its affiliates and their respective employees and (c) prohibit any dividend recapitalization within 24 months of the date that a private fund acquires a Controlling Interest in a portfolio company. If these proposals were to be enacted, even if only in part, they would materially and adversely affect the ability of a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates to engage in the investment activities and other operations that they are intended and expected to engage in. This could result in a Fund being unable to meet its investment objectives, or could require a Fund to make, hold, manage and exit investments and otherwise operate in a manner that involves greater potential liability, risk and expense with lower potential returns for investors, including due to the use of AIVs and/or additional parallel partnerships.

In that regard, prospective investors should note that the outcome of the 2020 U.S. presidential and other elections is widely believed by many observers to be likely to result in higher taxation and tightened regulatory scrutiny on the asset management industry and could increase the likelihood of certain, or all, of the proposed legislation described above being adopted. Such changes could potentially result in an overall shift in the legal, tax or regulatory regimes in which a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates will operate. In addition to increased uncertainty regarding the future of such legal, tax and regulatory regimes, any significant changes in, among other things, economic policy (including with respect to interest rates and foreign trade), the regulation of the asset management industry, tax law, immigration policy and/or government entitlement programs during the existence of a Fund could have a material adverse impact on a Fund and its investments.

The effect of any future regulatory changes on a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates could be substantial and potentially adverse.

Outbreaks of Infectious or Contagious Diseases

Pandemics and other widespread public health emergencies, including outbreaks of infectious diseases such as SARS, H1N1/09 flu, avian flu, ebola and the current outbreak of COVID-19, have and are resulting in market volatility and disruption, and future such emergencies have the potential to materially and adversely impact economic production and activity in ways that are impossible to predict, all of which could result in significant losses to a Fund.

Currently, there is an ongoing outbreak of COVID-19, which has caused a worldwide public health emergency, straining healthcare resources and resulting in extensive and growing numbers of infections, hospitalizations and deaths. In an effort to contain COVID-19, national, regional and local governments, as well as private businesses and other organizations, have taken severely restrictive measures, including instituting local and regional quarantines, restricting travel (including closing certain international borders), prohibiting public activity (including "stay-at-home" and similar orders), and ordering the closure of large numbers of offices, businesses, schools, and other public venues. In many jurisdictions, restrictive measures have been re-imposed to address subsequent waves of infection. As a result, COVID-19 has significantly diminished global economic production and activity of all kinds and has contributed to both volatility and a severe decline in all financial markets. Among other things, these unprecedented developments have resulted in material reductions in demand across most categories of consumers and businesses, dislocation (or in some cases a complete halt) in the credit and capital markets, labor force and operational disruptions, slowing or complete idling of certain supply chains and manufacturing activity, steep increases in unemployment levels in the United States and several other countries, and strain and uncertainty for businesses and households, with a particularly acute impact on industries dependent on travel and public accessibility, such as transportation, hospitality, tourism, retail, sports and entertainment.

The ultimate impact of COVID-19 — and the resulting precipitous decline in economic and commercial activity across nearly all of the world's largest economies — on global economic conditions, and on the operations, financial condition and performance of any particular industry or business, is impossible to predict, although ongoing and potential additional materially adverse effects, including a further global or regional economic downturn (including a recession) of indeterminate duration and severity, are possible. The extent of COVID-19's impact will depend on many factors, including the ultimate duration and scope of the public health emergency and the restrictive countermeasures being undertaken, as well as the effectiveness of other governmental, legislative and financial and monetary policy interventions (including the effectiveness of vaccines and the implementation of vaccination programs) designed to mitigate the crisis and address its negative externalities, all of which are evolving rapidly and could have unpredictable results. Even if and as the spread of the COVID-19 virus itself is substantially contained and economies are able to "re-open," it will be difficult to assess what the longer-term impacts of an extended period of unprecedented economic dislocation and disruption will be on future macro- and micro-economic developments, the health of certain industries and businesses, and commercial and consumer behavior.

The ongoing COVID-19 crisis and any other public health emergency could have a significant adverse impact and result in significant losses to a Fund. The extent of the impact on a Fund and its investments' operational and financial performance will depend on many factors, all of which are highly uncertain and cannot be predicted, and this impact could include significant reductions in revenue and growth, unexpected operational losses and liabilities, impairments to credit quality and reductions in the availability of capital. These same factors could limit the ability of a Fund to source, diligence and execute new investments and to manage, finance and exit investments in the future, and governmental mitigation actions could constrain or alter existing financial, legal and regulatory frameworks in ways that are adverse to the investment strategy a Fund intends to pursue, all of which could adversely affect a Fund's ability to fulfill its investment objectives. They could also impair the ability of portfolio companies of a Fund or their counterparties to perform their respective obligations under debt instruments and other commercial agreements (including their ability to pay obligations as they become due), potentially leading to defaults with uncertain consequences. With respect to any revolving or delayed draw loans made by a Fund to a portfolio company, a portfolio company could be incentivized for liquidity or other reasons to draw on most, if not all, of the unfunded portion of such loan and a Fund may not have the ability under the applicable credit agreement to refuse to fund such draw without being in default and suffering financial penalties.

In addition, the operations of a Fund, its investments and RoundTable could be significantly impacted, or even temporarily or permanently halted, as a result of government quarantine measures, restrictions on travel and movement, remote-working requirements and other factors related to a public health emergency, including its potential adverse impact on the health of any such entity's personnel. These measures could also hinder such entities' ability to conduct their affairs and activities as they normally would, including by impairing usual communication channels and methods, hampering the performance of administrative functions such as processing payments and invoices, and diminishing their ability to make accurate and timely projections of financial performance.

ASC 820 (Formerly FAS 157) and Other Changes in Accounting Rules

For purposes of GAAP-compliant financial reporting, a Fund is required to follow a specific framework for measuring the fair value of its assets and liabilities, and is required to provide certain additional disclosures regarding the use of fair value measurements in its audited financial statements. Many of these requirements are set forth in Statement on Financial Accounting Standards, Accounting Standards Codification 820, Fair Value Measurements and Disclosures ("ASC 820"), which defines and establishes a framework for measuring fair value under GAAP and expands financial statement disclosure requirements relating to fair value measurements. In July 2009, the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) issued the Accounting Standards Codification, including former FAS 157 which was issued by the FASB in September 2006, and applies to all GAAP-compliant financial statements issued for fiscal years beginning after November 15, 2007. Other valuation-related requirements are contained in other provisions of GAAP, and other related FASB Statements and guidance. Additional FASB Statements and guidance, and additional provisions of GAAP, that could be adopted in the future, could also impose additional, different, and/or specific requirements as to the valuation of assets and liabilities for purposes of GAAP-compliant financial reporting.

Illiquid and Long-Term Investments

An investment in a Fund requires a long-term commitment with no certainty of return. The return of capital and the realization of gains, if any, from an investment of a Fund will generally occur only upon the partial or complete disposition of such portfolio investment. It is generally expected that investments of a Fund will not be realized until a number of years after such investments are made.

Limited Number of Investments

A Fund may participate in a limited number of portfolio investments and, as a consequence, the aggregate return of a Fund could be substantially adversely affected by the unfavorable performance of any single portfolio investment.

A Limited Partner's participation in Partnership investments could also be limited by virtue of the General Partner's right to exclude a Limited Partner from participating in any Partnership investment if the General Partner determines in its discretion that such participation might have certain materially adverse effects on a portfolio company, a Fund or the General Partner, including if such participation would be likely to result in violations of law or the imposition of materially burdensome regulatory or other legal requirements, or as a result of certain circumstances relating to the Limited Partner.

Competitive Market for Investment Opportunities

The activity of identifying, completing and realizing attractive private equity investments of the types contemplated by a Fund is competitive and involves a high degree of uncertainty. A Fund may be competing with other investors and corporate buyers for the investments that a Fund will make. As a result, there can be no assurance that a Fund will be able to locate and complete portfolio investments that satisfy a Fund's rate of return objectives or that a Fund will be able to become fully invested for a significant period of time, if at all.

Financial and Business Risk

Investments made by a Fund will generally involve a significant degree of financial and/or business risk. Portfolio companies may be highly leveraged and therefore could be more sensitive to adverse business or financial developments or economic factors. Portfolio companies may face intense competition, changing business or economic conditions or other developments that could adversely affect their performance. Business risks could be more significant in smaller portfolio companies or those that are embarking on a build-up or operating turnaround strategy. If for any of these reasons a portfolio company is unable to generate sufficient cash flow to meet principal or interest payments on its indebtedness or make regular dividend payments, the value of a Fund's investment in such portfolio company could be significantly reduced or even eliminated.

General fluctuations in the market prices of securities could affect the value of the investments held by a Fund. Instability in the securities markets could also increase the risks inherent in a Fund's investments. The ability of portfolio companies to refinance debt securities could depend on their ability to sell new securities in the public high-yield market or otherwise. For example, during the global financial crisis of 2007 to 2008, various sectors of the global financial markets experienced an extended period of adverse conditions following serious disruptions in the U.S. residential mortgage market. Market uncertainty in the United States increased dramatically during this time, and adverse market conditions in the United States expanded to other markets. These conditions resulted in reduced liquidity, greater volatility, general widening of credit spreads and a lack of price transparency. These difficult global credit market conditions adversely affected the market values of equity, fixed-income and other securities, and these circumstances could resume. To the extent that similar marketplace events were to occur in the future, these events could have an adverse impact on a Fund and its investments.

An outbreak of disease or similar public health threat, or fear of such an event, that affects travel demand, travel behavior, or travel restrictions could also have a material adverse impact on a Fund, Portfolio Companies, businesses, financial conditions and operating results. The extent of the impact of a novel coronavirus ("COVID-19") on such companies will depend on future developments, including the duration and spread of the outbreak and related travel advisories and restrictions and the impact of COVID-19, which are highly uncertain and cannot be predicted.

Legal, Tax and Regulatory Risks

Legal, tax and regulatory changes could occur during the term of a Fund that could adversely affect a Fund. The regulatory environment for private funds is evolving, and changes in regulations that impact private funds could adversely affect the value of investments held by a Fund and could affect the ability of a Fund to pursue its investment strategies. In addition, the securities markets are subject to comprehensive statutes and regulations. The SEC, as well as other regulators, self-regulatory organizations and exchanges, have taken various extraordinary actions in connection with market events occurring in recent years and could take additional actions.

Leveraged Investments

In certain cases, a Fund will invest in companies that incur substantial debt to finance acquisitions, for capital expenditures or other expansions. Although a Fund will seek to monitor such leverage, the leveraged capital structure of such portfolio companies will increase their exposure to adverse economic factors such as rising interest rates, downturns in the economy or deterioration in the condition of a portfolio company or its industry. In the event that a portfolio company is unable to generate sufficient cash flow to meet principal and interest payments on its indebtedness, the value of a Fund's equity investment in such portfolio company could be adversely affected.

Interim Financing

A Fund is permitted to make investments in Interim Financing. Such Interim Financing would generally be made on a short-term, unsecured basis in anticipation of a future issuance of equity or long-term debt securities. Such Interim Financing would typically be convertible into a more permanent, long-term security. However, for reasons not always in a Fund's control, such long-term securities may not be issued and such Interim Financing may remain outstanding. In such event, the interest rate on the Interim Financing would not necessarily adequately reflect the risk associated with the unsecured position taken by a Fund.

Co-Investments

A Fund could co-invest in a company with financial, strategic or other third-party investors. Such co-investments could involve additional risks not present in investments where a third-party is not involved, including the possibility that the co-investor could have interests or objectives that are inconsistent with those of a Fund or could be in a position to take action contrary to a Fund's investment objectives. In addition, a Fund could, in certain circumstances, be liable for the actions of its third-party co-investors.

Contingent Liability on Disposition of Investments

Most of a Fund's investments will involve private securities. In connection with the disposition of an investment in private securities, a Fund could be required to make representations about the business and financial affairs of the company typical of those made in connection with the sale of a business. A Fund could also be required to indemnify the purchasers of such investment to the extent that any such representations turn out to be inaccurate. These arrangements could incur contingent liabilities that ultimately could yield funding obligations that must be satisfied by the Limited Partners to the extent of their Commitments.

Follow-On Investments

A Fund could be called upon to provide follow-on funding for its portfolio companies or could have the opportunity to increase its investment in such portfolio companies. There can be no assurance that a Fund will wish to make follow-on investments or that it will have sufficient funds to do so. Any decision by a Fund not to make follow-on investments or its inability to make them could have a substantial negative impact on a portfolio company in need of such an investment or could diminish a Fund's ability to influence the portfolio company's future development.

Investments through Partnerships, Joint Ventures and Other Similar Structures

A Fund expects to make investments through partnerships, joint ventures or other jointly-owned investment structures. Such investments could involve risks not present in direct investments, including, for example, the possibility that a joint venture partner of a Fund could at any time have financial difficulties or become bankrupt, have economic or business interests or goals which are inconsistent with those of a Fund or be in a position to take action contrary to a Fund's objectives. In addition, a Fund could in certain circumstances be liable for actions of its joint venture partners. Furthermore, if a joint venture partner defaults on its funding obligations, a Fund could be required to make up the shortfall. While the General Partner will review the qualifications and previous experience of joint venture partners, it does not expect to obtain financial information from, or to undertake private investigations with respect to, prospective joint venture partners.

Side Letters

The General Partner expects from time to time enter into letter agreements or other similar arrangements (collectively, "Side Letters") with one or more limited partners that have the effect of establishing rights under, or altering or supplementing the terms of, a Fund Agreement or any subscription agreement of a Fund. As a result of such Side Letters, certain limited partners will receive additional benefits that other limited partners will not receive, including, without limitation, with respect to the right to make additional capital commitments to a Fund or other funds affiliated with RoundTable, the right to receive reports from a Fund on a more frequent basis or to receive reports that include information not provided to other limited partners (including valuation and other information relating to the investments of a Fund), the right to bear a reduced, or no, carried interest and/or Management Fee, the right to receive a rebate of a portion of any carried interest and/or Management Fee, the calculation of the General Partner's clawback amount, the right to receive a share of the revenues and/or carried interest, accommodations of regulatory, legal or tax considerations, which could include the right to withdraw from a Fund under certain circumstances and the restriction of voting rights with respect to "Key Person Event" votes and otherwise, and such other more favorable terms as could be negotiated between a Fund and such limited partner. The other limited partners will have no recourse against a Fund or any of its affiliates in the event that certain limited partners receive additional or different rights or terms as a result of such Side Letters.

Investments in Restructurings

A Fund could make investments in restructurings that involve portfolio companies that are experiencing or are expected to experience severe financial difficulties, which could never be overcome. Such investments could, in certain circumstances, subject a Fund to certain additional potential liabilities, which could exceed the value of a Fund's original investments therein. For example, under certain circumstances, a lender who has inappropriately exercised control of the management and policies of a debtor could have its claims subordinated, or disallowed, or could be found liable for damage suffered by parties as a result of such actions. In addition, under certain circumstances, payments to a Fund and distributions by a Fund to the Limited Partners could be reclaimed if any such payment or distribution is later determined to have been a fraudulent conveyance or a preferential payment.

Control Person Liability

A Fund is expected to have controlling interests in some of its portfolio companies. The exercise of control over is likely to impose additional risks of liability for environmental damage, product defects, failure to supervise management, violation of governmental regulations (including securities laws), pension plan underfunding or other types of liability in which the limited liability generally characteristic of business ownership, could be ignored. If these liabilities were to arise, a Fund might suffer a significant loss.

Minority Investments

A Fund is permitted to make minority equity investments in entities where a Fund does not effectively control or influence the business or affairs of such entities. Under such circumstances, there is the possibility that the entity in which a Fund's investments are made could have economic or business interests or goals that are inconsistent with those of a Fund, and a Fund would not be in a position to limit or otherwise protect the value of a Fund's investment in the entity. In addition, although a Fund could seek board representation in connection with its investments, there is no assurance that such representation, if sought, will be obtained.

Recourse to a Fund's Assets

A Fund's assets, including any investments made by a Fund and any capital held by a Fund, are available to satisfy all liabilities and other obligations of a Fund. If a Fund becomes subject to a liability, parties seeking to have the liability satisfied could have recourse to a Fund's assets generally and would not be limited to any particular asset, such as the investment giving rise to the liability. Accordingly, Limited Partners could find their interests in a Fund's assets adversely affected by a liability arising out of an investment in which they did not participate because, for example, they were excluded or excused by the General Partner.

Non-U.S. Investments

A Fund is permitted to make investments in companies located outside the United States. Depending on the country in which a portfolio company is located, there could exist the risk of adverse political developments, including nationalization, expropriation or confiscation without fair compensation, governmental regulation and economic or social instability or diplomatic developments (including war) which could adversely affect the investments in those portfolio companies.

The interests in a Fund are denominated in U.S. dollars and a Fund will accept subscriptions in U.S. dollars. As noted above, a portion of the assets of a Fund could, however, be invested in securities of non-U.S. portfolio companies that could be denominated in currencies other than U.S. dollars. Accordingly, the value of such assets could be affected favorably or unfavorably by fluctuations in currency rates. To the extent unhedged, the value of a Fund's assets will fluctuate with the U.S. dollar exchange rates, as well as the price changes of a Fund's investments in the various local markets and currencies. A Fund could seek to protect the value of its non-U.S. holdings against currency risks by engaging in hedging transactions, including the purchase of forward currency exchange contracts and futures contracts and the purchase or writing of call options on currencies. Where a Fund seeks to engage in such transactions, there can be no assurance that instruments suitable for hedging currency or market shifts will be available (or will be available on acceptable terms), that hedging instruments will offset all losses resulting from currency or market fluctuations or that losses will not occur from such hedging transactions.

In addition, any given portfolio company of a Fund could conduct a significant portion of its business in non-U.S. currencies, even where such company's securities and activities are otherwise denominated in U.S. dollars. This could be the case because, among other things, a portion of such company's sales are made in non-U.S. markets or a portion of such company's supply chain is based in non-U.S. markets. While such company's management could determine to cause the company to engage in hedging transactions to offset the risks of such fluctuations, there can be no assurance that any such company's operating performance will be effectively shielded from such risks. These currency risks could therefore have an adverse effect on one or more of a Fund's portfolio companies and, as a result, on a Fund.

Laws and regulations of other countries could impose restrictions that would not exist in the United States. Investments in non-U.S. corporations or assets could require significant government approvals under corporate, securities, exchange control, foreign investment and other similar laws and could require financing and structuring alternatives that differ significantly from those customarily used in the United States. Such investments could also give rise to taxes in local jurisdictions, which could not give rise to any corresponding credit or tax benefit to a limited partner. In addition, some governments from time to time impose restrictions intended to prevent capital flight, which could for example involve punitive taxation (including high withholding taxes) on certain securities or asset transfers or the imposition of exchange controls making it difficult or impossible to exchange or repatriate the local currency. In addition, this repatriation of currency and other restrictions could make it impracticable for a Fund to distribute the full amount of Limited Partners' capital accounts in U.S. dollars, and therefore a portion of the distribution could be made in non-U.S. securities or currency.

In the United States, the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States ("CFIUS") has the authority, under the Foreign Investment Risk Review Modernization Act ("FIRRMA"), to review any investment that could result in control of a U.S. business by a non-U.S. person or, inter alia, certain "other investments" by a foreign person in a U.S. business, including those that do not necessarily convey potential control, if the U.S. business (i) owns, operates, manufactures, supplies, or services critical infrastructure; (ii) produces, designs, tests, manufactures, fabricates, or develops one or more critical technologies; or (iii) maintains or collects sensitive personal data of United States citizens that could be exploited in a manner that threatens national security. The precise contours of CFIUS's jurisdiction with respect to "other investments" will be defined by the formal regulatory rule-making process. Following the conclusion of the formal regulatory rulemaking process in the next six to twelve months, parties will be required to notify CFIUS at least 45 days before closing of transactions that would result in foreign ownership of a "substantial interest" in a U.S. business where (i) the U.S. business involves critical infrastructure, critical technology, or sensitive personal data of U.S. citizens; and (ii) a foreign government has a "substantial interest" in a foreign party to the transaction. Although FIRRMA includes certain exceptions for U.S. person managed investment funds, FIRRMA could increase the number of transactions involving a Fund and co-investors that would be subject to CFIUS review and investigation and the timing and substantive risks described below. Under the CFIUS regulations, transactions that are submitted for CFIUS review are subject to an initial 45-day review period followed by a 45-day investigation, which could be extended by an additional 15 days in exceptional circumstances, to determine the effects, if any, on national security of the proposed transaction. In determining whether to conclude action on a particular transaction, CFIUS has the authority to impose restrictions as a condition of clearing a transaction, including restrictions on the ownership, management and operation of infrastructure assets or companies by non-U.S. persons. CFIUS could also recommend to the U.S. President that an executive order be issued blocking a proposed transaction.

ERISA Considerations

At present, the General Partner intends to avoid the result that a Fund's assets will be deemed to be plan assets subject to the fiduciary and prohibited transaction provisions of ERISA or the Code (each term as defined below) either by keeping "benefit plan investors" (as defined in Section 3(42) of ERISA) from owning 25% or more of any class of interests in a Fund or by conducting the affairs and operations of a Fund in such a manner that a Fund would qualify as an "venture capital operating company" ("VCOC") within the meaning of regulations promulgated under ERISA. Operating as a VCOC would require that a Fund obtain rights to participate substantially in and to influence substantially the conduct of the management of a Fund's portfolio companies. There can be no assurance that a Fund can obtain such rights from a potential portfolio company. Accordingly, a Fund may be restricted or precluded from making certain investments. If a Fund obtains such rights from a portfolio company, a Fund will typically designate a director to serve on the board of directors of such portfolio company. The designation of directors and other measures contemplated could expose the assets of a Fund to claims by a portfolio company, its security holders and its creditors. While the General Partner intends to manage a Fund to minimize exposure to these risks, the possibility of successful claims cannot be precluded. In addition, it could be necessary for the General Partner to liquidate Partnership investments at a disadvantageous time in order to maintain a Fund's VCOC status and avoid the assets of a Fund being deemed ERISA "plan assets," which could result in lower proceeds to a Fund than might have been the case if a Fund did not need to qualify as a VCOC.

No Market for Limited Partnership Interests; Restrictions on Transfer

The interests in a Fund have not been and are not expected to be registered under the Securities Act, or any state or other securities laws or the laws of any foreign jurisdiction. There is no public market for the interests in a Fund, and none is expected to develop. A Limited Partner will not be permitted to assign, sell, exchange or transfer any of its interest, rights or obligations with respect to its interest in a Fund, without the prior written consent of the General Partner. If the General Partner consents to such transfer, the transferee must be a "qualified purchaser" within the meaning of the Investment Company Act. Voluntary withdrawals from a Fund will not be permitted. Investors must be prepared to bear the risk of owning the interests in a Fund for an extended period of time.

Consequences of Failure to Pay Contributions in Full

If a Limited Partner fails to pay any installment of its capital commitment, the defaulting partner could be required to forfeit all or any portion of future distributions by a Fund. The General Partner could also require a forced sale of the defaulting partner's interest. In addition, the General Partner could pursue any available legal or equitable remedies, with the expenses of collection of the unpaid amount, including attorneys' fees, to be paid by the defaulting Limited Partner.

Other Tax Risks

The tax consequences to investors of an investment in the Partnership are complex. Prospective investors are strongly urged to review the relevant discussion in the offering memorandum and to consult their own professional tax advisors in this regard.

Indemnification

A Fund will be required to indemnify the General Partner, any affiliate of the General Partner, or any director, officer, stockholder, partner, employee, agent, member, advisor or representative of the General Partner, or any member of the Advisory Board for liabilities incurred in connection with the affairs of a Fund. Such liabilities could be material and have an adverse effect on the returns to the Limited Partners. For example, in their capacity as directors of portfolio companies, the members, managers or affiliates of the General Partner could be subject to derivative or other similar claims brought by shareholders of such companies. The indemnification obligation of a Fund would be payable from the assets of a Fund, including the unpaid capital commitments of the Limited Partners. If the assets of a Fund are insufficient, the General Partner could recall certain distributions previously made to the Limited Partners. A Fund's indemnification obligations will not constitute a waiver or limitation of any limited partner's rights under the U.S. federal or state securities laws.

Hedging Policies/Risks

In connection with certain investments, a Fund is permitted to employ hedging techniques designed to reduce the adverse movements in interest rates, credit, securities prices and currency exchange. While such transactions could reduce certain risks, such transactions themselves could entail certain other risks. Thus, while a Fund could benefit from the use of these hedging mechanisms, unanticipated changes in interest rates, credit defaults, securities prices or currency exchange rates could result in a worse overall performance for a Fund than if it had not entered into such hedging transactions. In situations in which a Fund is required to post margin or other collateral with a counterparty, the counterparty could fail to segregate the collateral or could commingle the collateral with the counterparty's own assets. As a result, in the event of the counterparty's bankruptcy or insolvency, a Fund's collateral could be subject to the conflicting claims of the counterparty's creditors, and a Fund could be exposed to the risk of a court's treating a Fund as a general unsecured creditor of the counterparty, rather than as the owner of the collateral. Additionally, such hedging transactions will add to the cost of the investment, could require ongoing cash payments to counterparties, could subject a Fund to the risk that the counterparty defaults on its obligations and could produce different tax consequences to a Fund's limited partners than would apply if a Fund had not entered into such hedging transactions.

Absence of Regulatory Oversight

A Fund is not registered as an investment company under the Investment Company Act, and, accordingly, the protections of the Investment Company Act are not applicable to a Fund. In addition, the interests have not been and will not be registered under the laws of any jurisdiction (including the Securities Act, the laws of any state of the United States or the laws of any non-U.S. jurisdiction), and are being offered in reliance upon applicable exemptions from such laws. These limited partner interests have not been recommended by any U.S. federal or state, or any non-U.S., securities commission or regulatory authority. Furthermore, the foregoing authorities have not confirmed the accuracy or determined the adequacy of this Memorandum.

Risk Control Framework

It is expected that the General Partner and RoundTable have or will implement risk control systems to help manage risk exposure. However, no risk control system is fail-safe, and no assurance can be given that any risk control frameworks will achieve their objectives.

Cybersecurity, Cyberattacks and Other Breaches

Cybersecurity incidents, cyberattacks and other breaches have been occurring globally at a more frequent and severe level and will likely continue to increase in frequency and severity in the future. Cybersecurity risks for investment funds have increased significantly in recent years because of, among other things: the proliferation of Internet and telecommunications technologies to conduct financial transactions; the increased dependence of a Fund's portfolio companies on Internet-connected technologies that are susceptible to disruption from cybersecurity threats; the ability and degree to which investment managers collect and maintain confidential, proprietary, sensitive, personal and other nonpublic information and data, as well as publicly available data that may be organized in a manner that is not publicly available; and the increased sophistication and activities of organized crime, hackers, terrorists and other external parties, including foreign state actors. Accordingly, a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and a Fund's portfolio companies have faced and will face cybersecurity threats to gain unauthorized access to confidential, proprietary, sensitive, personal and other nonpublic information and systems, including, without limitation, information regarding the limited partners and a Fund's investment activities, or to render data or systems unusable, which could result in significant losses. If such events materialize, they could lead to losses of confidential, proprietary, sensitive, personal and other non-public information or capabilities essential to a Fund's, the General Partner's, RoundTable's and a Fund's portfolio companies' operations, and could have a material adverse effect on their reputations, financial positions, results of operations or cash flows, and could lead to financial losses from remedial actions, loss of business, potential liability, exposure to legal claims, regulatory intervention, reputational damage or the disclosure of the limited partners' personal information. RoundTable may have to make a significant investment to fix or replace any inoperable or compromised systems or to modify or enhance their cybersecurity controls, procedures or measures. Similarly, the public perception that a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or a Fund's portfolio companies have been the target of a cybersecurity threat, whether successful or not, could have a material adverse effect on their reputations and could lead to financial losses from loss of business, depending on the nature and severity of the threat.

Cybersecurity attacks are evolving and may be difficult to detect for long periods of time, and include, but are not limited to, computer viruses, malicious or destructive code, phishing attacks, malware, ransomware attacks, social engineering, denial of service or information, attempts to gain unauthorized access to data, improper access by employees or third-party service providers or other electronic security breaches or similar events, including those perpetuated by criminals or nation state actors, that could lead to: disruptions in network access or business operations; unauthorized collection, monitoring, use or release of confidential, proprietary, sensitive, personal or other nonpublic or otherwise protected information; or loss, destruction or corruption of information or data. Although RoundTable has implemented, and its third-party service providers may implement, various measures to manage risks relating to these types of events, such systems could be inadequate and, if compromised, could become inoperable for extended periods of time, cease to function properly or fail to adequately secure confidential, proprietary, sensitive, personal, or other nonpublic or otherwise protected information or data, including personal information relating to limited partners (and the beneficial owners of limited partners) and the intellectual property and trade secrets of RoundTable. A Fund's, the General Partner's, RoundTable's or a portfolio companies' controls and procedures, business continuity systems, and data security systems could prove to be inadequate. These problems could arise in a Fund's, the General Partner's, the RoundTable's or a portfolio company's internally developed systems and the systems of third-party service providers, upon which a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or a portfolio company rely. While a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and a Fund's portfolio companies perform cybersecurity diligence on their key third-party service providers, it is important to note that if a service provider fails to adopt or adhere to adequate cybersecurity procedures, or if despite such procedures its networks or systems are breached, information relating to client transactions or personal information of limited partners or investors may be lost or improperly accessed, used or disclosed. Given the variety and potential severity of cybersecurity threats, a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable, the portfolio companies and the third-party service providers upon which they rely may not have adequate insurance coverage to compensate against all losses.

Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG)

The Firm believes that appropriate consideration of environmental, social, and governance ("ESG") factors when identifying investments and overseeing the management of the Funds' portfolio companies, can contribute positively to investment returns. Prior to committing to an investment, the Firm will review appropriate ESG factors as part of its due diligence process. These may include the following factors: environmental impacts, corporate governance, management structure and compensation, and employee relations. There are no universally agreed upon objective standards for assessing ESG issues for companies, and the Firm's criteria and process for identifying ESG issues may differ from an investor's understanding of which ESG factors should be employed or how the ESG factors should be identified. Further, it may be difficult to consistently apply analysis of ESG issues across time periods or industries.

Data Privacy and Protection Laws and Regulations

The U.S. and international legal and regulatory landscape governing data privacy and protection is in a period of considerable flux. In recent years, state legislatures have passed a number of important new laws, including the California Consumer Privacy Act ("CCPA"), which became effective on January 1, 2020, and the New York SHIELD Act, which took effect in part on October 23, 2019 and in other parts on March 21, 2020. Further, effective starting on January 1, 2023, the California Privacy Rights Act ("CPRA") (which was passed via a ballot initiative as part of the November 2020 election) will significantly modify the CCPA, including by expanding consumers' rights with respect to certain sensitive personal information. The CPRA also creates a new state agency which will be vested with authority to implement and enforce the CCPA and the CPRA. As of November 1, 2021, a number of states (including Colorado and Virginia) had passed, and a number of states (including Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania) were considering proposals for, comprehensive data privacy laws. In addition, laws in all 50 U.S. states require businesses to provide notice under certain circumstances to consumers whose personal information has been disclosed as a result of a data breach.

While the U.S. does not yet have a comprehensive data privacy and protection law, at the federal level the United States Congress has considered various proposals in recent years and is likely to continue to do so. Among currently applicable laws, a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and a Fund's portfolio companies are subject to the rules and regulations promulgated under the authority of the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates unfair or deceptive acts or practices, including with respect to data privacy and protection. Additionally, the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999 (along with its implementing regulations) restricts certain collection, processing, storage, use and disclosure of personal information, requires notice to individuals of privacy practices and provides individuals with certain rights to prevent the use and disclosure of certain nonpublic or otherwise legally protected information. These rules also impose requirements for the safeguarding and proper destruction of personal information through the issuance of cybersecurity standards or guidelines.

Internationally, many jurisdictions have established their own data privacy and protection legal frameworks with which a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable or a Fund's portfolio companies may need to comply, including, but not limited to, the European Union ("EU"). The EU has adopted the General Data Protection Regulation ("GDPR"), which went into effect in May 2018 and contains numerous requirements and changes from previously existing EU law, including more robust obligations on data processors and heavier documentation requirements for data protection compliance programs by companies. Additionally, the U.K. General Data Protection Regulation ("U.K. GDPR") (i.e., a version of the GDPR as implemented into U.K. law) went into effect following Brexit. While the GDPR and the U.K. GDPR are substantially the same, going forward there is increasing risk for divergence in application, interpretation and enforcement of the data privacy and protection laws and regulations as between the EU and the U.K, which may result in greater operational burdens, costs and compliance risks. Additionally, the GDPR and the U.K. GDPR include certain limitations and stringent obligations with respect to the transfer of personal information from the EU and the U.K. to certain third countries (including the United States), and the mechanisms to comply with such obligations are also in considerable flux and may lead to greater operational burdens, costs and compliance risks.

The cumulative effects of the CCPA, the CPRA, the GDPR, the UK GDPR and other recently adopted data privacy and protection laws and regulations include an increased ability of individuals, relative to companies, to control the use of their personal information; increased obligations of companies to maintain the privacy and security of data; and increased exposure to fines, damages or reputational harm for companies that do not afford individuals their specified privacy rights, that experience data breaches or that do not maintain cybersecurity practices at certain required levels. The global data protection landscape is currently unstable, resulting in possible significant operational costs for internal compliance and risk to our business. A Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and a Fund's portfolio companies will endeavor to implement and maintain systems designed to promote compliance with the CCPA, the CPRA, the GDPR, the UK GDPR and these other laws and regulations, both those adopted to date and those that may be adopted in the future, but there can be no assurance that these systems will be effective in mitigating the business impact of individuals' increased privacy rights or in ensuring compliance with the CCPA, the CPRA, the GDPR, the UK GDPR and such other laws and regulations. In the event of fines, damages or reputational harm due to noncompliance with such data privacy and protection laws or regulations, or a data breach, there may be an adverse business impact on a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and a Fund's portfolio companies.

Limited Access to Information

Limited Partners' rights to information regarding a Fund will be specified, and strictly limited, in a Fund Agreement. In particular, it is anticipated that a Fund, the General Partner and RoundTable will obtain certain types of material information from investments that will not be disclosed to Limited Partners because such disclosure is prohibited for contractual, legal or similar obligations outside of the foregoing parties' control. Decisions by a Fund, the General Partner or RoundTable to withhold information could have adverse consequences for Limited Partners in a variety of circumstances. For example, a Limited Partner that seeks to transfer its Interest in a Fund could have difficulty in determining an appropriate price for such Interest. Decisions to withhold information also could make it difficult for Limited Partner to monitor a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and their respective performance. Additionally, it is expected that Limited Partners who designate representatives to participate on the Advisory Board will, by virtue of such participation, have more information about a Fund and investments of a Fund in certain circumstances than other Limited Partners generally and will be disseminated information in advance of communication to other Limited Partners generally.

Additional Risks Relating to Investments in Debt Funds

The Debt Funds invest in subordinated debt instruments. Because these investments represent subordinated financing in a portfolio company's capital structure, there are additional risks involved, which include, but are not limited to, the following:

Credit Risk

One of the fundamental risks associated with the subordinated debt investments is credit risk, which is the risk that an issuer will be unable to make principal and interest payments when due. If a portfolio company is unable to generate sufficient cash flow to meet principal or interest payments on its indebtedness, the value of the Debt Fund's investment in the portfolio company could be significantly reduced or even eliminated, particularly in light of the subordinated position of such investment. Furthermore, the portfolio companies and the securities in which the Debt Fund invests are not expected to be rated by a credit rating agency.

Bankruptcy of Portfolio Companies.

The Debt Funds may make investments in the fixed income securities of portfolio companies that are otherwise experiencing, or are expected to experience, severe financial difficulties, which may never be overcome.

Such investments could, in certain circumstances, subject the Debt Fund to certain additional potential liabilities, which may exceed the value of the Debt Fund's original investments therein. For example, under certain circumstances, a lender who has inappropriately exercised control of the management and policies of a debtor may have its claims subordinated, or disallowed, or may be found liable for damage suffered by parties as a result of such actions. In addition, under certain circumstances, payments to the Debt Fund and distributions by the Debt Fund to its investors may be reclaimed if any such payment or distribution is later determined to have been a fraudulent conveyance or a preferential payment. In addition, because certain the Equity Funds will hold equity securities in the same portfolio companies, if such portfolio company becomes insolvent or bankrupt, the risk of subordination of the Debt Fund's claims is increased. An Equity Fund's exercise of management rights may also lead creditors of the Debt Fund's portfolio or other parties to assert claims against the Debt Fund.

Potential Conflicts of Interest

There may be instances where the interests of the General Partner potentially or actually conflict with the interests of a Fund. For example, because a General Partner's compensation is directly related to the performance of the respective Fund, the General Partner may make riskier or more speculative investments on behalf of such Fund than would be the case in the absence of such a performance-based compensation structure.

Investments Involving Other RoundTable Funds

Under certain circumstances, a Fund could acquire, sell or otherwise transact with investments or portfolio companies in which a predecessor fund has already invested or is expected to participate in the applicable investment opportunity. In connection with such investments, a Fund, on the one hand, and such predecessor fund, on the other hand, could have conflicting interests, particularly if a Fund and the predecessor fund invest in different classes or types of securities of the same portfolio company because there is no assurance that either fund will receive the best price otherwise possible, or that the applicable general partner or any of its respective affiliates will not have an incentive to improve the performance of one Fund by selling underperforming assets to another Fund in order to, for example, avoid losses in the selling Fund or to increase the fees payable by the acquiring Fund.

In connection with such transactions, the General Partner, their respective affiliates and each of their respective officers, directors, managers, partners, members, shareholders, employees, agents, advisors, and personnel will, from time to time, have significant investments, or intentions to invest, in the Fund that is selling and/or acquiring such investments or otherwise have a direct or indirect interest in any such investment (such as through certain other participations in the investment). The General Partner or one or more of their respective affiliates could receive management fees or other fees in connection with their management of the relevant Funds involved in such transaction, and will also be entitled to share in the investment profits (i.e., carried interest) of the relevant Funds.

Accordingly, as they relate to a Fund, such transactions result in conflicts of interest for the General Partner and its respective affiliates by giving rise to conflicting economic or other incentives or interests on different sides of the transaction. However, such transactions will generally be permitted where the General Partner or any such affiliate determines in good faith that their terms are arms'-length and in the best interest of all the RoundTable Funds involved. Such determination could be reached in a number of ways, including, but not limited to, (i) review and consultation with (but not necessarily in all cases, approval by) their respective boards of advisors, (ii) the presence of or participation by unaffiliated third parties to help validate the terms thereof, (iii) employing separate investment teams, separated by "fire walls", or advised by separate legal counsel or financial advisors to represent the applicable RoundTable Fund or to advise their respective general partners, (iv) obtaining a fairness or similar opinion from a third-party valuation firm or investment banker with respect to the terms and conditions of such transaction, including the price, or (v) running an auction process.

Carried Interest

The General Partner's carried interest could create an incentive for the General Partner to make more speculative investments for a Fund than it would otherwise make in the absence of such performance-based arrangements. In addition, the method of calculating the General Partner's carried interest could result in conflicts of interest between the General Partner, on the one hand, and the Limited Partners, on the other hand, with respect to the management and disposition of investments, including the timing and sequence of such dispositions.

Holding Period for Carried Interest

The General Partner is an entity that is treated as a partnership for U.S. federal income tax purposes, and it is expected that the members of a Fund's investment team will hold direct or indirect equity interests in the General Partner. In general, the character of the income allocated to the General Partner by a Fund as carried interest will flow through to the owners of the General Partner. However, while gain from the sale of a capital asset is generally treated as long-term capital gain if the asset has been held for more than one year at the time of disposition, gain that is allocated as carried interest will generally be treated as long-term capital gain only if the relevant asset has been held for more than three years at the time of the disposition. Long-term capital gain recognized by an individual is subject to U.S. federal income tax at rates that are substantially lower than the rates applicable to ordinary income and short-term capital gain.

As a result, conflicts of interest will arise between the interests of the direct and indirect owners of the General Partner, on the one hand, and the interests of the Limited Partners, on the other hand, in connection with the General Partner's investment-related determinations. Specifically, the direct or indirect owners of the General Partner will have an incentive to cause a Fund to hold an investment for more than three years, even if a favorable disposition opportunity arises prior to that time, or to make other decisions intended to mitigate the consequences of the rule applicable to gain that is allocated as carried interest, including decisions with respect to the discovery, development, negotiation, evaluation, acquisition, structuring, restructuring, holding, carrying, monitoring, management, disposition or monetization of investments. Prospective investors should expect that the General Partner's determinations will be influenced, in part, by the tax treatment of capital gain that is allocated as carried interest.

Tax Audits

Under the rules applicable to audits of partnership tax returns, a partnership is required to designate a "partnership representative" and, if the partnership representative is an entity, to appoint an individual to act on behalf of the partnership representative. The partnership representative (and, if applicable, such individual) will have the authority to make all decisions with respect to any tax audit of, or other tax-related administrative or judicial proceeding with respect to, the partnership. Actions taken, and decisions made, by the partnership representative will be binding on the partnership and its investors. The General Partner will designate the partnership representative (which could be the General Partner itself) for the Partnership and, if applicable, the individual to act on behalf of the partnership representative.

It is possible that the person acting as partnership representative for the Partnership, the individual appointed to act on behalf of such partnership representative or one or more of their respective affiliates will have an economic interest in the Partnership and therefore will have an interest in the outcome of any tax audit of, or other tax-related proceeding with respect to, the Partnership. A particular action or decision in the context of a tax audit or other tax-related proceeding could favorably affect the partnership representative, such individual or one or more of their respective affiliates, while adversely affecting all or certain other investors in the Partnership.

Diverse Membership

The Funds' investors are expected to include U.S. taxable and tax-exempt entities and persons from jurisdictions outside of the United States. Such persons could have conflicting investment, tax and other interests with respect to their investments in a Fund. The conflicting interests of individual Limited Partners could relate to or arise from, among other things, the nature of the investments made by a Fund, the structuring of the acquisition of Partnership investments and the timing of disposition of investments. Such structuring of a Fund's investments and other factors could result in different returns being realized by different limited partners. As a consequence, conflicts of interest could arise in connection with decisions made by the General Partner that could be more beneficial for one investor than for another investor, especially with respect to investors' individual tax situations, including with respect to the nature or structuring of investments. In selecting and structuring investments appropriate for a Fund, the General Partner will consider the investment and tax objectives of a Fund and the partners as a whole, and not the investment, tax or other objectives of any Limited Partner of a Fund individually.

Advisory Board and Limited Partner Approvals

The General Partner could in certain situations choose to seek the approval of the members of the Advisory Board with respect to potential conflict-of-interest situations. The General Partner could also choose to seek the approval of the Limited Partners with respect to such situations. Such approval could be sought from Limited Partners having a majority of the aggregate commitments, or from those having a majority of the capital invested in a particular investment, depending upon the circumstances. Any such approval by the Advisory Board or Limited Partners will be binding upon the Fund and all its investors.

Potential Conflicts Between the Equity Funds and the Debt Funds

Because the Debt Funds will make investments only in the fixed income securities of portfolio companies, each of which has been, or is being, provided with equity capital by an Equity Fund, a Debt Fund, on the one hand, and such Equity Fund, on the other hand, will potentially have conflicting interests, particularly because the Debt Fund and the Equity Fund will invest in different classes or types of securities of the same portfolio company. The Debt Fund and such Equity Fund could have conflicting investment objectives, including with respect to the operation of the relevant portfolio company, the targeted returns from the investment and the timeframe for, and method of exiting, the investment, particularly where such Equity Fund has a controlling interest in the portfolio company. In negotiating the terms and conditions of an investment (other than the terms and conditions that are fixed at the initial closing of the Debt Fund) and the nature of the covenants running in favor of the Debt Fund, and in addressing any subsequent amendments or waivers, the Debt Fund will have interests that conflict with the interests of a RoundTable Equity Fund. If an issuer in which a Debt Fund and an Equity Fund hold different classes of securities encounters financial problems, decisions over the terms of any workout will raise conflicts of interest (including conflicts over proposed waivers and amendments to debt covenants). For example, a debt holder could be better served by a liquidation of the issuer in which it will be paid in full, whereas an equity holder might prefer a reorganization that could create value for the equity holders. In the case of such conflicts, the ability of the Debt Fund's general partner to recommend actions in the best interests of the Debt Fund could be impaired.

A Debt Fund's general partner could also face conflicts of interest in connection with any purchase or sale transaction involving an investment by such Debt Fund, whether to or from an Equity Fund, and in connection with the consideration offered by, or the obligations of, an Equity Fund.

Portfolio Company Expenses

The General Partner expects to incur certain out-of-pocket expenses on behalf of, or for the benefit of, portfolio companies and/or the Firm. These expenses could include rent on shared office space, sales support, manufacturing consulting, add-on acquisition consulting, human resource consulting, certain trade group expenses, data services expenses and other services in instances where the General Partner is able to obtain better pricing or access, or where it is otherwise agreed with the portfolio company that the General Partner will obtain such services on its behalf. The portfolio companies reimburse the General Partner for these expenses. These services are provided by third parties and by certain professionals who are employed by the General Partner and whose role is to provide these specialized services to portfolio companies and/or the Firm. The costs associated with the employment of these professionals (i.e., salaries and benefits) are split among the parties receiving such services based on a calculation determined at the discretion of the General Partner.

Co-Investment Opportunities

The General Partner is permitted to in its discretion offer certain opportunities to co-invest with a Fund ("Co-Investment Opportunities") to various third parties including, without limitation, certain limited partners and Other

RoundTable Clients. The allocation of any such Co-Investment Opportunities could or could not be in proportion to the commitments of such investors and could involve different terms and fee structures. In these cases, while the General Partner will seek to act in the best interest of a Fund, it could be argued that a Fund received a smaller allocation in the particular investment than it otherwise would have received if the General Partner had not provided the third party with the Co-Investment Opportunity. Any expenses attributable to a particular investment held by a Fund and any co-investment vehicle established by RoundTable will generally be allocated among a Fund and such co-investment vehicle pro rata in accordance with their respective aggregate invested capital in such investment. Additionally, these Co-Investment Opportunities will require extensive due diligence, legal, and other costs prior to their consummation and will result in a Fund bearing Broken Deal Expenses if they are not consummated. A Fund will pay any fees, costs, and expenses incurred in sourcing, investigating, identifying, researching, evaluating, developing, initiating, negotiating, structuring, making, acquiring, closing, consummating, holding, monitoring, maintaining, financing, refinancing, pledging, restructuring or otherwise disposing of any Co-Investment Opportunities it pursues, whether or not such investments are ultimately consummated. Moreover, it is possible that certain terms and fee structures offered with respect to these Co-Investment Opportunities to third-party co-investors could be more favorable than those offered to limited partners of a Fund. Participation by a limited partner in a co-investment opportunity, whether directly or through a co-investment vehicle, will be entirely the responsibility and investment decision of such limited partner, and none of a Fund, the General Partner or any of its affiliates will assume any risk, responsibility or expense, or be deemed to have provided any investment advice, in connection therewith.

Other Fees

The General Partner, Firm or any of their respective employees or affiliates could receive transaction fees, which will generally offset the annual contribution amount to be contributed by the limited partners for the annual period or periods following the annual period in which such Transaction Fees were received by 100% of such transaction fees. The amount of such transaction fees applied to this offset will be the pro rata portion (based on amount invested) of the underlying fees or amounts received by the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates that is attributable to a Fund and will not include the portion attributable to other investors in the relevant portfolio company. Potential conflicts of interest could arise as a result of the economic benefits RoundTable and its affiliates could receive from the payment of transaction fees. Expenses that are reimbursed by a portfolio company could include certain expenses that would not constitute Fund expenses, but instead would be borne by the General Partner absent such reimbursement. The payment of such fees and expenses by a portfolio company could also be viewed as reducing the value of such portfolio company and accordingly the value of a Fund's investment in such portfolio company.

When a fee is paid to the General Partner or its affiliates arising from a transaction where a Fund has invested, or proposes to invest, alongside other co-investors and/or co-investment vehicles, aggregators and/or other similar vehicles established to co-invest alongside a Fund in connection with such Partnership investment, only the portion that is allocable to a Fund's investment (based on a Fund's investment percentage of the transaction) will reduce the obligations of the limited partners of a Fund to make capital contributions in respect of the Annual Contribution Amount. Accordingly, unless otherwise agreed by the General Partner or such affiliates with such other parties, the General Partner or such affiliates will be entitled to receive or retain the fees that are allocable to the investments made by such other parties alongside a Fund, and the amount of such fees will not reduce the obligations of the limited partners of a Fund to make capital contributions in respect of the Annual Contribution Amount.

The terms of a monitoring agreement could in certain instances provide for an acceleration of fees paid to the General Partner, RoundTable or their respective affiliates upon termination of such arrangements following certain milestones (such as an initial public offering or sale); in such instances, the General Partner, RoundTable or their respective affiliates could be entitled to a lump-sum termination fee with respect to such arrangements. Except as set forth in the partnership agreement limited partners will receive no benefit from such fees. The payment of such fees by a portfolio company could also be viewed as reducing the value of such portfolio company and accordingly the value of a Fund's investment in such portfolio company.

Interpretation of the Partnership Agreement of the Partnership

The partnership agreement of a Fund and related documents are detailed agreements that establish complex arrangements among the limited partners, a Fund, the General Partner, RoundTable and other entities and individuals. Questions will arise from time to time under these agreements regarding the parties' rights and obligations in certain situations, some of which will not have been contemplated at the time of the agreements' drafting and execution. In these instances, the operative provisions of the agreements, if any, could permit more than one reasonable interpretation. At times there will not be a provision directly applicable to the situation. While the relevant agreements will be construed in good faith and in a manner consistent with applicable legal obligations, the interpretations adopted will not necessarily be, and need not be, the interpretations that are the most favorable to a Fund or the limited partners.

Allocation of Expenses

The General Partner, RoundTable, the RoundTable Partners and Principals, RoundTable investment professionals and/or one or more of their respective affiliates will from time to time incur fees, costs and expenses on behalf of a Fund, on the one hand, and other existing or subsequent entities established by the General Partner, RoundTable, the RoundTable Partners and Principals, RoundTable's investment professionals or any of their respective affiliates, on the other hand. Although attempts will be made to allocate such fees, costs and expenses on an equitable basis, such allocations will be determined by the General Partner and/or RoundTable and such matters will not necessarily be brought to the Advisory Board or the limited partners for discussion or consultation.

To address the allocation of fees, costs and expenses, RoundTable has adopted certain processes and procedures intended to allocate expenses in the manner prescribed by the governing documents of the RoundTable funds and RoundTable's internal policies, including procedures to identify and correct misallocations due to error or revised allocation methodologies. However, there is no guaranty that such processes and procedures will identify any or all misallocations. To the extent misallocations are identified and a Fund had already paid such expenses, any reimbursements of incorrectly applied expenses will necessarily be applied at a later date and therefore a Fund could bear incorrect allocations for an unspecified period of time. Reimbursement to a Fund of any misallocated expenses will generally not include any interest on the principal amount of any misallocations. Although attempts will be made to allocate expenses on an equitable basis, such allocations will ultimately be based on the determinations of the General Partner and/or RoundTable. In some instances, such determinations will be subjective and reasonable minds will disagree.

Service Providers

Service providers or affiliates of service providers (including accountants, administrators, bankers, lenders, brokers, attorneys, consultants and investment banking firms) of a Fund will be in a position to provide certain services to the General Partner, RoundTable, other RoundTable funds or RoundTable personnel with respect to non-Fund VI matters, which creates potential conflicts of interest for such service providers insofar as they also perform work for a Fund. For example, a law firm could at the same time act as legal counsel to a Fund, on the one hand, and the General Partner, RoundTable, other RoundTable funds and/or RoundTable personnel, on the other hand. To the extent such service provider relies or depends on the referrals or direction of the General Partner, RoundTable, other RoundTable funds and/or RoundTable personnel for work performed for a Fund, such service provider could be inclined to provide better or more resources to the work of the General Partner, RoundTable, other RoundTable funds and/or RoundTable personnel than to the work of a Fund. RoundTable addresses these conflicts of interest by using reasonable diligence to ascertain whether each service provider (including law firms) provides its service on a "best execution" basis, taking into account factors such as expertise, operational and regulatory controls, availability and quality of service and the competitiveness of compensation rates in comparison with other service providers satisfying RoundTable's service provider selection criteria.

The receipt of services with predecessor fund matters will influence or have the appearance of influencing RoundTable's decisions whether to select such service provider for a Fund. Furthermore, to the extent such service provider relies or depends on RoundTable for such recommendations or selection, such service provider will be conflicted in the course of work that otherwise requires independence or impartiality. In certain circumstances, advisors and other service providers or their affiliates charge rates or establish other terms in respect of advice and services provided to the General Partner, RoundTable, other RoundTable funds and/or RoundTable personnel that are different and more favorable than those established in respect of advice and services provided to a Fund.

In addition, RoundTable will from time to time enter into arrangements with service providers that provide fee discounts for certain services rendered to RoundTable or to a specific RoundTable fund. For example, certain law firms retained by RoundTable could discount their legal fees for non-investment transaction-related legal services, such as legal advice in connection with RoundTable's operational, compliance and related matters. Generally, RoundTable will not permit the General Partner or RoundTable to receive discounts with respect to services that are also provided to a Fund or other RoundTable funds unless a Fund or such RoundTable funds are charged similar rates. Legal fees for investment-related transactions that are not consummated are also typically charged to the applicable RoundTable fund (including a Fund) at a discount, although such law firms will typically charge on a "full-freight" or even on a premium basis for consummated investment-related transactions.

Operating Executives

The General Partner is permitted, in its sole discretion, to retain the services of one or more Operating Executives and unless determined otherwise by the General Partner in its sole discretion, any and all Operating Executive Compensation will be borne or paid by a Fund or the Portfolio Company (or Portfolio Companies) to which the applicable Operating Executive's services relate and not the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates.

Because the fees, costs and expenses associated with the engagement, retainer or employment of an Operating Executive will generally not be borne by the General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates, those entities will have an incentive to engage a prospective employee of General Partner, RoundTable or any of their respective affiliates as an Operating Executive, rather than as a direct employee. This incentive is heightened by the flexibility afforded to the General Partner and RoundTable in connection with how to structure any such engagement, retainer or employment. Although the General Partner and RoundTable intend to make all Operating Executive engagement, retainer or employment decisions in good faith and only to the extent that any such Operating Executive possesses substantial, significant or otherwise relevant experience or expertise to serve as consultants to the General Partner, RoundTable, a Fund or any Portfolio Company, it will not always be readily apparent that such decisions were necessarily made in such fashion and reasonable minds will disagree.

Non-Public Information

It is expected that, in the course of providing investment management or other services to a Fund or other RoundTable funds, RoundTable may come into possession of confidential or material non-public information regarding an investment of a Fund or a potential investment of a Fund. If such information becomes available to RoundTable, a Fund may be precluded (including by applicable law or internal policies or procedures) from pursuing an investment or exit opportunity with respect thereto, or restrictions may be imposed on an investment or exit opportunity with respect to such investment or potential investment of a Fund.

Prospective Consent of the Limited Partners

Pursuant to the terms of a Fund, each limited partner will be required to (a) represent and warrant that such Investor has carefully reviewed and understood the information contained in the memorandum, and (b) acknowledge and agree that the Members, the General Partner and any of its Affiliates may engage, without liability to a Fund or the limited partners except as provided in a Fund agreement, in financial, investment and professional activities consistent with the obligation of each Key Member to devote substantially all of his business time and attention to the affairs of a Fund and its investments pursuant to a Fund agreement, and that no such activity will in and of itself constitute a breach of any duty owed by any indemnified person to the limited partners or a Fund or a material conflict of interest or require the consent of the Advisory Board or the limited partners.

Limited Partner Due Diligence

Prospective investors conduct different levels of due diligence. Some prospective investors will communicate and/or meet with representatives of the General Partner or RoundTable to discuss with, ask questions of and receive answers from such representatives concerning the terms and conditions of the offering of the Interests and to obtain any additional information necessary to verify the information contained herein, to the extent that such representatives possess such information or can acquire it without unreasonable effort or expense. Due to the fact that any one potential investor will ask questions and request information different from other potential investors, the General Partner or RoundTable will provide certain information to one or more potential investors that they do not provide to all of the prospective investors. None of the responses or additional information provided is or will be integrated into this Memorandum, and no prospective investor may rely on any such responses or information in making its decision to subscribe for Interests.

Disciplinary Information

RoundTable has no past or current litigation that could reasonably be expected to result in a material adverse impact on the business, prospects, condition, affairs or operations of the Fund or in any material liability on the part of the Fund or the General Partner.

ITEM 10

Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

New RoundTable Healthcare Management, L.P., RoundTable Healthcare Management II, L.P., RoundTable Healthcare Management III, L.P., RoundTable Healthcare Management IV, L.P., RoundTable Healthcare Management V, L.P., RoundTable Healthcare Capital Management II, L.P., and RoundTable Healthcare Capital Management III, L.P. are each related persons of the Firm and each serve as General Partner of one or more of the Funds. Each General Partner has exclusive management and control over its respective Fund and has delegated investment management authority to the Firm. As described in Item 6, each General Partner receives compensation based on the performance of the respective Fund.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

RoundTable has adopted a Code of Ethics pursuant to Rule 204A-1 under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the “Advisers Act”) for purposes of establishing the standards of business conduct and fostering a culture of honesty and accountability and assisting its employees with complying with the Advisers Act. The Code of Ethics is applicable to all employees of the Firm and generally applies to all of such employees’ personal trading transactions. The Code of Ethics generally prohibits an employee from buying or selling securities in any limited offering or initial public offering without obtaining pre-clearance from the Firm’s Chief Compliance Officer. In addition, the Code of Ethics prohibits an employee from purchasing any security that is currently on the Firm’s “Avoidance List” or any security with respect to which the employee has acquired knowledge of the plans of a Fund to purchase or sell such security or otherwise materially impact the results of the issuer of such security.

In addition, the Code of Ethics requires each employee to submit annual holdings reports detailing his/her current securities holdings, and quarterly transaction reports detailing securities transactions effected in the quarter. RoundTable will provide a copy of its Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client (and any investor or prospective investor in a Fund) upon request.

As in RoundTable’s business generally, RoundTable will consider the implications of identified actual or potential conflicts of interest and will act in accordance with RoundTable’s internal guidelines and procedures.

Brokerage Practices

The Funds, by nature, invest primarily in private companies. Occasionally, a Fund may execute transactions in publicly traded securities, in which cases RoundTable will seek to satisfy its obligation to seek best execution. In choosing brokers or dealers to effect securities transactions for the Funds, RoundTable relies on its judgment, knowledge and experience in evaluating the broker-dealer's reliability and capability based on previous and pending transactions effected by the broker dealer. RoundTable may also consider factors such as price, commission, size of order, difficulty of execution and the degree of skill required of the broker- dealer. RoundTable may also take into account certain broker-dealer specific factors, such as trading capability, financial stability and responsibility, reputation, operational efficiency and overall responsiveness to RoundTable and the Funds.

In the event that RoundTable has determined to purchase or sell a security at the same time for more than one Fund, the respective orders for each such Fund will be aggregated. If the aggregated order is filled at different prices, all participating Funds will receive the weighted average price and will share any associated transaction costs on a pro rata basis.

Review of Accounts

The portfolio companies of each Fund are actively monitored by a team of investment and operating professionals, which includes reviews of each portfolio company's operations, overall performance, financial position, strategy and prospects. Investors in each Fund typically receive annual audited financial statements of the relevant Fund after the end of such Fund's fiscal year and unaudited quarterly reports that provide narrative and summary financial information regarding the Fund's portfolio companies after the end of the Fund's first three quarters. In addition, investors receive ad hoc updates from time to time.

RoundTable may, in its discretion, agree to provide certain Fund investors with more frequent reports or certain other reports than those described above due to legal, regulatory or internal policy constraints faced by such Fund investors or as a result of the specific needs of such fund Investors. Expenses incurred in connection with such reports are expected to be borne by the applicable Fund.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

RoundTable does not receive compensation from any non-client in connection with the investment advice or other advisory services to the Funds. However, the General Partners or the Funds themselves may receive fees in connection with the termination, cancellation or abandonment of a proposed Fund investment, organization or success fees in connection with the making of a Fund investment and/or periodic advisory, monitoring, consulting or other similar fees from one or more of the Funds' portfolio companies. The management fee to which RoundTable is entitled from each Fund is generally reduced by the amount of such fees.

RoundTable does not compensate any persons for client referrals.

Custody

While the Firm or certain affiliates may be deemed to have custody of certain client funds, the Firm itself does not maintain physical custody of such assets. RoundTable has appointed unaffiliated, third-party, qualified custodians to serve as custodians for the Funds' assets, except with respect to certain privately offered securities held by certain of the Funds which, pursuant to Rule 206(4)-2 under the Advisers Act, are not required to be maintained with a qualified custodian. RoundTable has engaged an independent public accountant registered with, and regularly examined by, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board to conduct annual audits of the Funds' financial statements in accordance with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles. Each Fund's audited financial statements are delivered to its investors within 120 days of the end of such Fund's fiscal year.

Investment Discretion

The management and control of each Fund is vested exclusively in the General Partner of each Fund, which, in turn, has delegated discretionary authority to RoundTable to manage the assets of each Fund. This investment discretion is limited by applicable law, the limitations prescribed in the Offering Materials and organizational documents of each Fund as well as any other restrictions that RoundTable may agree upon with any Fund or investors in any Fund.

Voting Client Securities

In the event RoundTable receives a proxy, RoundTable's policy is to exercise the proxy vote in the best interest of the Funds, taking into consideration all relevant factors, including without limitation, acting in a manner that RoundTable believes will (i) maximize the economic benefits to the Funds and (ii) promote sound corporate governance by the issuer. On rare occasions, RoundTable may be required to exercise a vote for a privately-held portfolio company, in which case the same principles shall apply. RoundTable will seek to avoid material conflicts of interest between its own interests on the one hand, and the interests of the Funds on the other. The fiduciary duty RoundTable owes to each Fund prohibits the adoption of a policy to enter default proxy votes in favor of board recommendations. However, as is typical in private equity, RoundTable seeks and accepts the election of a RoundTable representative to serve on the board of directors of portfolio companies on behalf of its Funds and will typically, but not always, vote in favor of board recommendations. In situations where RoundTable is required to vote the proxy for a company with respect to which RoundTable employees serve on the board of directors, RoundTable has determined that this does not inherently present a conflict of interest, as the sole purpose of this representation is to maximize the return on the Funds' investment in such company. Accordingly, while RoundTable is generally, but not automatically, fully supportive of recommendations made by a portfolio company's board of directors with respect to proxy votes related to that issuer, it will review all proxies and may or may not vote in favor of the board's recommendation.

Generally, RoundTable's clients cannot direct proxy votes. Issuers' proxy voting materials are generally received directly by RoundTable and are reviewed and considered by the applicable Fund's investment professionals. The Firm's Chief Compliance Officer is responsible for ensuring that proxies are voted and submitted in a timely manner, and that all books and records relating to proxy voting activities are retained in accordance with the requirements of Rule 204-2(c)(2) under the Advisers Act.

Investors may obtain a complete copy of the Firm's proxy voting policies and procedures by contacting the Chief Compliance Officer in writing and requesting such information. Each investor may also request in writing from the Chief Compliance Officer information concerning the manner in which proxy votes have been cast on behalf of such investor's Fund(s) during the prior annual period with respect to securities held by such Fund(s). Such information will be provided to the investor in writing as soon as is practicable.

Financial Information

RoundTable does not believe that it has any financial commitment that is reasonably likely to impair its ability to meet contractual commitments to its clients and has not been the subject of a bankruptcy petition at any time during the past ten years.
