Wesley is a member of Odom & Barlow Holdings, a Florida LLC, which is a holding company for real estate.

Wesley owns Mr. Retro, LLC, which is a holding company for outside business ventures that include collecting book royalties. This business involves a small amount of time every month after the close of the stock market in the U.S.

Wesley owns Go Retro, Inc. which is a tour company. He generally is not involved in the daily operations of the company but spends a small amount of time each week with management.

The firm does not assess additional performance-based fees.

In 1998, while working for Smith Barney, Wesley sold covered call option contracts at the clients' request. Later when the stock advanced past the strike price and before the option had matured, the client complained to management that Smith Barney had misrepresented the options, and they were unsuitable. In 1999, Smith Barney paid the client $26,250, of which Wesley contributed $2000; however, when the options matured, the options expired worthless, and the stocks never were exercised. Generally, Wesley does not utilize options strategies at Armada Advisors.

From April 1993 to March 2014, Wesley held an agent license for life insurance in the State of Florida; however, he voluntarily retired his insurance license because insurance sales were a small part of his business.
