Introduction

The Wealth Group, Ltd. (“we” or “our” or “us”) is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) as an investment adviser. Brokerage and investment advisory services and fees differ and that it is important for the retail investor (“you” or “client”) to understand the differences. Q. What investment services and advice can you provide to me?

The Wealth Group, Ltd. offers investment advisory services to retail investors. We offer the following three principal services to clients: Wealth Planning and Analysis Service, Internal Money Management, and External Money Management.

The Wealth Planning and Analysis Service is a financial planning service where our firm analyzes data supplied by the client and prepares a financial plan with recommendations for the client. The client retains discretion on whether the recommendations are provided by our firm and whom to utilize in implementing any recommendations. We do not monitor clients’ investments on an ongoing or continuous basis; we do not limit our advice with respect to types of investments; and do not have any minimums or requirements to receive this service.

Internal Money Management is where we select and/or recommend individual securities on behalf of clients. Assets can be managed on a discretionary or non-discretionary basis. Discretionary authority enables us the ability to buy and sell securities on behalf of the client without prior consent subject to any account restrictions imposed by the client. For accounts managed on a non-discretionary basis, the client retains ultimate decision-making authority regarding the purchase or sale of investments recommended by us. Client accounts are monitored on a quarterly basis if not more frequently as needed. We have not established any minimum requirements for this service. We limit our management services to stocks, bonds, exchange-traded funds, and mutual funds and we do not invest in initial public offerings on behalf of clients.

External Money Management is where our firm refers clients to third party managers. The third party manager typically manages accounts on a discretionary basis, which allows the manager to buy and sell securities without obtaining the client’s prior consent. We do not offer account monitoring services. The third party manager has its own review process. Any limitations as to investment offerings and account minimums and other requirements are established by the third party manager and can be found by reviewing their Form ADV.

Q. What fees will I pay?

Clients will be assessed a fixed flat fee or an hourly charge for the Wealth Planning and Analysis Service. For Internal Money Management, we charge annual fees, payable quarterly in arrears, based on a percentage of assets under management. For External Money Management, clients will incur an asset management fee comprised of a fee from The Wealth Group, Ltd., the external manager, and the custodian. For both Internal Money Management and External Money Management, clients may be subject to fees, such as commission, transaction-related fees for securities trades, etc., from the broker-dealer/custodian maintaining your account as well as fund operating fees charged by mutual funds owned.

Additional Information

You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce the amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying. More information about fees is disclosed in Item 5 of the ADV Part 2A ("Brochure").

- Help me understand how these fees and costs might affect my investments. If I give you $10,000 to invest, how much will go to fees and costs, and how much will be invested for me?

Q. What are your legal obligations to me when providing recommendations? How else does your firm make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we act as your investment adviser, we have to act in your best interest and not put our interest ahead of yours. At the same time, the way we make money creates some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the investment advice we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means. 1) We have an incentive to recommend third party managers for whom we may receive more compensation than we would otherwise by recommending. We mitigate this conflict by negotiating fees with clients and ensure our recommendations of third party managers are in the best interest of the client. 2) Employees of our firm have an incentive to trade ahead of clients. We have adopted a Code of Ethics to prevent such activity and require employees' personal trades to be placed either at the same time client trades are placed or until after all clients' trades have been executed for the day.

Additional Information

Item 5.E of ADV Part 2A provides additional detail as to conflicts of interest that arise from our financial professionals serving in the capacity of a Registered Representative with a broker-dealer and/or as an insurance agent. Our financial professionals may receive commissions and/or premiums from the sale of investment and insurance products. In addition to having a Code of Ethics, the firm nor its financial professionals receive commissions and/or premiums as part of money management services.

Q. How does your financial professional make money?

Our financial professionals are compensated based on investment advisory fees collected from clients and referrals of investors to third party money manager(s). The investment advisory fees are based on the amount of client assets in the case of money management services and based in part on the time and complexity of financial planning whether charged as an hourly fee or a fixed fee. For referrals to third party managers, our financial professionals receive from third party managers an agreed upon fee based on a percentage of assets under management collected by the manager. Financial professionals may receive additional compensation for activities performed outside of our firm.
