In accordance with the Commission's Supplemental Briefing Order dated April 20, 2018, Respondent Brian T. Mayer submits this brief regarding the law judge's 2018 Decision.¹

Far from reconsidering "the record, including all substantive and procedural actions taken"² as the Commission directed, the law judge ignored the overwhelming record evidence that Mayer did not make any material misrepresentations or omissions in presenting any McGinn Smith Security to any clients.

The Commission should dismiss the charges against Mayer because (1) the overwhelming evidence demonstrated that he did not violate any securities laws,³ (2) the law judge applied incorrect legal standards to the Fraud and Section 5 Claims,⁴ (3) the law judge's conduct of the proceeding was rife with prejudicial error and bias,⁵ and (4) the proceeding was time barred and fraught with due process, equal protection, and constitutional infirmities.⁶

² Commission Order dated November 30, 2017 at 1 (the "Post Hoc Ratification Order").

Mayer also respectfully urges the Commission to consider that it was unreasonable and unfair to single out Mayer (and nine others) when (a) approximately 40 other registered representatives sold over $69 million of the McGinn Smith Securities, (b) those other individuals also did not see alleged "red flags" or uncover the secret theft and diversion of funds by McGinn and Smith (with the aid of inside and outside accountants), and (b) despite examinations of MS&Co. by the SEC, the NASD/FINRA, and an outside compliance firm, none were unable to uncover the fraud of McGinn and Smith for years.

1. The Law Judge Did Not Reexamine The Record Which Shows Mayer Made No Material Misrepresentations or Omissions

The law judge did not reexamine the record which showed that Mayer did not make any material misrepresentation or omission to any client about any McGinn Smith Security. Although the Division identified 23 investors of Mayer, it only called three – Gary Von Glinow, Vincent O'Brien and Thomas Alberts. None of these witnesses testified that Mayer made a material misrepresentation or omission, and the law judge's 2018 Decision is devoid of any citation to one.

a. Gary Von Glinow, although called by the Division, undermined the core allegations of the OIP. Von Glinow, an accredited investor with a net worth greater than $1,000,000 at the time he began investing in McGinn Smith Securities, testified that Mayer reviewed PPMs with him prior to investing to discuss the structure of the investment, how it worked, how it would pay off, and the risks of investing, and together they would try "to come up with ways that [the investment] could go bad." FoF ¶¶ 434, 438, 446.⁷ Von Glinow peppered Mayer with "30 or 50, 70 questions on each" PPM, and Mayer answered all of them. Id. ¶ 438.

[&]quot;FoF" refers to Rabinovich, Mayer and Rogers' Joint Proposed Findings Of Fact And Conclusions Of Law dated May 12, 2014.

Von Glinow considered Mayer an honest broker, and testified that Mayer did not tell him anything about McGinn Smith Securities that was not in the PPM. Id. ¶¶ 442, 450. None of this is mentioned anywhere in the 2015 Decision. Nor is it mentioned in the 2018 Order following a "reexamination" of the record.

b. Vincent O'Brien, also an accredited investor with a net worth of more than 1,000,000, testified that he met with Mayer several times, and Mayer helped him "sketch out" a long-term investment strategy that included stocks and bonds, in addition to private placements. FoF ¶¶ 452, 455. O'Brien did not testify that Mayer made any material misrepresentations to him, see FoF ¶ 457, and the law judge correctly did not conclude that Mayer did. Decision at 106. Instead, the law judge erroneously concluded that Mayer "did not mention material information" to O'Brien (id.) – the very same information that was fully disclosed in the PPMs that O'Brien admitted he received from Mayer, and which he signed and attested to receiving and reading. Id. ¶¶ 457-48. No legal authority supports holding an individual broker liable for a supposed material omission of fact that is specifically disclosed in offering documents that the investor acknowledged reading and reviewing prior to investing. In reexamining the record, the law judge failed to address this issue at all.

c. Thomas Alberts, an 84-year old retired chemical engineer with a hazy recollection of investments he made more than five years prior to the date the OIP was filed, also did not testify about any material misrepresentations. FoF ¶¶ 463, 466, 470. The law judge nevertheless adopted the same novel theory of material omissions as with O'Brien, claiming that Mayer was required to orally convey to Alberts every risk expressly set forth in the PPMs Alberts attested to reading and understanding. Decision at 106.

d. Mayer also presented his own witness, William Strawbridge, an accredited investor with about 30 years of investing experience, who invested $250,000 in McGinn Smith Securities. FoF ¶¶ 421, 424. Strawbridge described the detailed process he and Mayer went through before he would decide to invest, which included identifying investment opportunities, reviewing the PPMs, and discussing the investments and their risks in detail. Id. ¶¶ 425, 426. Strawbridge, who has accounts with multiple brokers, described Mayer as "probably the most conscientious and analytical of any of the brokers that I deal with." Id. ¶ 433. In concluding that Mayer made "material misrepresentations and omissions" in the 2015 Decision, the law judge says nothing of Strawbridge's testimony. 2015 Decision at 105-06. And she ignored it entirely in the 2018 Order.

Three other investors, who were subpoenaed but could not attend the hearing, attested to Mayer's thorough presentation of each security – McGinn Smith Securities or other securities. RMR Exs. 613, 617, 621.

e. The law judge did not reexamine her (erroneous) conclusion that Mayer was reckless in selling Trust Offerings based on supposed red flags relating to a different investment product – the Four Funds (the sale of which predated the OIP by more than five years). FoF ¶ 552. The law judge ignored that the Four Funds had nothing to do with the Trust Offerings, which the Division's own expert witness admitted "were not at all similar" to the Four Funds. Div. Ex. 1 at 25. The Trust Offerings were managed by McGinn, not Smith, were based on cash flow from income-generating assets such as "triple play" contracts with homeowner associations that could be amortized or sold to pay the stated interest due on the trust certificates, and were unrelated to the types of investments made by the Four Funds. FoF ¶ 47, 273, 338.

The evidence demonstrated that Mayer did not act with scienter. Indeed, Mayer's family invested, and lost, significant sums in McGinn Smith Securities – far more than Mayer earned selling them. Yet, the law judge, without citation to any legal authority, sweepingly declared that "Mayer was reckless in offering and selling securities based on material misrepresentations and omissions that he made to the witness who purchased private placements." 2015 Decision at 106. Any objective review of the record proves otherwise – a review that should have been conducted by the law judge before and after the Post-Hoc Ratification Order. It was not.

2. The Law Judge Did Not Reexamine The Record Which Shows Mayer Acted Prudently and Fulfilled His Duties as a Registered Representative

The law judge did not reexamine the overwhelming evidence that established that Mayer acted prudently and fulfilled his duties as a registered representative. The law judge ignored Mayer's testimony and contemporaneous documents, which made clear that Mayer discharged his duties as required of a registered representative and did not violate Securities Act sections 17(a)(2) and (a)(3).

As the record showed, Mayer understood each McGinn Smith Security (and other securities) before presenting them. FoF ¶¶ 235-37; see also FoF ¶¶ 238-268 (Four Funds due diligence); FoF ¶¶ 269-78 (Trust Offerings due diligence). During 2003 through 2009, Mayer had a business practice when presenting investment opportunities to clients of (a) analyzing "the client's goals and objectives," (b) "doing our research" to "come up with an asset allocation strategy," (c) going back to the client about the proposed allocation strategy, (d) implementing the strategy, and (e) monitoring the assets and managers. Id. ¶ 237. In evaluating the merits of McGinn Smith Securities, Mayer reviewed the PPMs, attended due diligence meetings, spoke to investment bankers who had reviewed the underlying investments, asked questions of management, and independently analyzed whether interest rates were achievable. See, e.g., id. $\P\P$ 240-43, 246, 248. As Respondent Gamello testified – who the law judge deemed "credible" (Decision at 101) – "the RMR guys [Rabinovich, Mayer and Rogers] are very thorough." Tr. 5945:7-11; see also 2015 Decision at 20 n.33; FoF $\P\P$ 283-85.

Based on the evidence adduced at the hearing, no reexamination of the record could support the law judge's assertions that "[t]here is no evidence in the record that Mayer did any serious, objective analysis or review of the private placements, which would provide a basis for recommending them to investors." 2015 Decision at 105. This conclusion could only be reached by ignoring the evidence, rather than actually considering it (or supposedly reconsidering it a second time in 2018).

3. The Law Judge Did Not Meaningfully Reexamine The Steadman Factors And Ignored That The Vast Majority Of Alleged Misconduct In The OIP Occurred Prior To September 23, 2008

The law judge's Steadman reexamination was utterly deficient. Aside from referencing the Steadman factors, the law judge never meaningfully considered (or reconsidered) them. See Monetta Fin. Servs., Inc. v. SEC, 390 F.3d 952, 957 (7th Cir. 2004) (Commission abused discretion by not meaningfully considering Steadman factors; sanctions vacated).

The law judge's imposition of a one-year suspension – a financial death knell for all practical purposes – was unjustified and unnecessary to protect the public interest. The evidence demonstrated that Mayer did not act with scienter and his conduct was not egregious, which is highly relevant to the question of what, if any, remedial action should be taken in the public interest, or whether penalties should apply at all. See In re Steadman Sec. Corp., 1977 SEC LEXIS 1388, 30, 46 S.E.C. 896, 909 (June 29, 1977) ("[I]ntent is ... highly germane to determining the quantum of the remedial action, if any, that due regard for the public interest requires us to take"); Steadman, 603 F.2d at 1140-41 ("respondent's state of mind is highly relevant in determining the remedy to impose.").

Mayer and his family purchased McGinn Smith Securities, undermining any suggestion he acted with scienter. RMR Ex. 804. The clients who testified or submitted affidavits in support of Mayer, or who were contacted by the Division, showed that Mayer worked with them to further their interests, and dealt with them fairly, honestly, and in good faith. FoF ¶¶ 425, 431, 439, 450, 455, 694-95; RMR Ex. 873 at 2. None of this is mentioned in the law judge's Steadman analysis.

The law judge's sole justification for the suspension in the 2015 Decision was that Mayer "currently work[s] in the securities industry, so there appears to be a strong likelihood for recurrence." 2015 Decision at 113. In purporting to reconsider the record in 2018, the law judge ignored that (1) for more than eight years as a registered investment adviser of RMR, Mayer has had an unblemished record, and (2) RMR has "zero proprietary product" and does not sponsor private placements or mutual funds, see FoF ¶¶ 33-35, concluding that "the likelihood that a respondent's occupation will present opportunities for future violations is but one of the Steadman factors." 2018 Order at 19. There simply is no basis to believe that Mayer is a threat to the investing public. See, e.g., SEC v. Bausch & Lomb, 565 F.2d 8, 18 (2d Cir. 1977) (requiring "positive proof of a reasonable likelihood that past wrongdoing will recur"). The record and case authority do not support the imposition of any sanction against Mayer.

4. A Collateral Suspension Based On Pre-Dodd Frank Conduct Is Improper

The law judge erred in her 2018 Order which collaterally suspends Mayer from association with an investment adviser based solely on alleged conduct in his capacity as a registered representative of a broker-dealer that occurred prior to the passage of the Dodd Frank Act in July 2010. 2018 Order at 17 n.12.

In Bartko v. SEC, 845 F.3d 1217 (D.C. Cir. 2015), which the law judge purported to follow, the Court stated that "[a] collateral bar is a tool by which the SEC can ban a market participant from associating with all classes based on misconduct regarding only one class," and may be imposed only based on conduct that occurred after July 22, 2010. Id. at 1220 (emphasis added). The law judge acknowledged that the OIP did not allege any violation of the Advisers Act, or conduct after 2009, and noted that "the Division did not pursue disgorgement" or any penalty under the Advisers Act. 2015 Decision at 114-15 nn.129-30. Nevertheless, the law judge collaterally suspends Mayer from association with an investment adviser in her 2018 Order.

As support for punitively suspending Mayer from associating with his investment advisory firm (RMR Wealth Management, LLC), which has operated without incident for 8 years, the law judge relied on Teicher v. SEC, 177 F.3d 1016, 1020-21 (D.C. Cir. 1999), which is not remotely similar to the facts here. Victor Teicher was the sole general partner and 75% owner of Teicher & Co., L.P., an unregistered investment adviser. He, as well as Teicher & Co., was criminally convicted of securities fraud, conspiracy and mail fraud in an insider trading scheme while working as an unregistered investment adviser. Thereafter, the SEC brought a follow-on administrative proceeding and barred Victor Teicher from associating with an unregistered investment adviser. Unsurprisingly, the Court affirmed the Commission's authority and decision to bar Victor Teicher from associating with any unregistered investment adviser. Unlike Victor Teicher, Mayer's conduct at issue was not as an investment adviser of McGinn Smith Advisors. The allegations of the OIP and the evidence presented at the hearings related exclusively to Mayer's sale of McGinn Smith Securities in his capacity as a registered representative of MS&Co.

The law judge's citation to Mayer's registration with McGinn Smith Advisors, for which there was no evidence that he worked as an advisor or conducted any business in that capacity, does not support his suspension as an investment adviser of RMR. No investment advisory agreements were offered in evidence. The law judge's justification that "clients also considered them [Rabinovich and Mayer] their investment advisers" is grossly misleading and beside the point. 2018 Order at 17 n.12. It was the Division who referred to Mayer as an investment advisor, not the customer (Tr. 892:2-3); the customer called Mayer a "senior broker" (see, e.g., Tr. 931:2-6).

5. A New Proceeding Was Required

Adopting the Commission's and the Solicitor General's newly-stated positions⁸ – rather than independently examining them – the law judge erroneously concluded that she could cure the constitutional defects in this proceeding through "reconsideration and ratification." 2018 Order at 8. It was not feasible for the law judge to review this four-year-old, gargantuan record and make, as she must, a "detached and considered affirmation" of the 2015 Decision. See Adv. Disposal Servs. East v. NLRB, 820 F.3d 592, 602 (3d Cir. 2016). Nor did she.

This proceeding should have been started anew in an Article III forum (where it was required to have been brought in 2013 to afford Mayer equal protection). Gupta v. SEC, 796 F.Supp. 2d 503, 513-14 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Having admitted that the proceeding was unconstitutional, a new proceeding was required. See, e.g., Ryder v. United States, 515 U.S. 177 (1995) (holding that an individual subjected to a trial before an unconstitutionally appointed judge "is entitled to a hearing before a properly appointed panel of that court"); United States v. L.A. Trucker Truck Lines, Inc., 344

Post Hoc Ratification Order at 1; Compare 2018 Order at 7 with Brief for Respondent SEC dated April 2018 at 20 in Lucia.

U.S. 33 (1952) (where the appointment of the adjudicator in an administrative proceeding is legally deficient, and the respondent objects, "the defect in the examiner's appointment [is] an irregularity which would invalidate a resulting order"); Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33 (1950) (administrative hearing before examiner not properly appointed rendered resulting orders null and void and required release of immigrant detained by the government), superseded by statute as recognized in, Ardestani v. INS, 502 U.S. 129 (1991). As the Supreme Court recognized in Ryder, retroactively blessing an adjudication before an unconstitutional judge "would create a disincentive to raise Appointments Clause challenges with respect to questionable judicial appointments." Ryder, 515 U.S. at 188. In all events, any renewed action – whether in court or an administrative forum – would be time-barred by 28 U.S.C. § 2462.

6. Section 2462 Barred This Proceeding And Would Bar Any Renewed Or New Proceeding

The law judge failed to reexamine the OIP, and Mayer's (and other Respondents') motions to dismiss the OIP on the grounds that neither the law judge nor any other forum had jurisdiction to hear any of the claims because more than half of them arose more than five years before the OIP was filed – that is before September 23, 2008.⁹ 28 U.S.C. § 2462 ("[A] proceeding for the enforcement of any civil fine, penalty, or forfeiture... shall not be entertained unless commenced within five years from the date when the claim first accrued."). All of the Four Funds and 11 of the Trust Offerings claims predated September 23, 2008. See OIP ¶¶ 15, 16.

According to the OIP, starting in 2003, Respondents failed to conduct a reasonable investigation in offering McGinn Smith Securities (see OIP ¶¶ 34, 35, 37), and ⁹ Rabinovich, Mayer And Rogers' Joinder In The Motion Of Lex For Leave To File Motion For Summary Disposition dated January 13, 2014. allegedly "held out the pre-2003 alarm note offering as indicative of Smith's and McGinn's integrity and skill," despite a never-sent "handwritten letter from Smith to McGinn in 2000" allegedly "characteriz[ing] the pre-2003 offerings as a 'Ponzi scheme,'" that Mayer did not know about. OIP ¶ 38(b) n.3.

Having asserted mostly pre-September 23, 2008 claims, no claim asserted in the OIP – pre or post-September 23, 2008 – could be "entertained." See, e.g., Williams v. Warden, 713 F.3d 1332, 133740 (11th Cir. 2013) (the "great weight of authority" holds that the statutory command – "shall not be entertained" – is jurisdictional in nature"). For there to have been subject matter jurisdiction, only post-September 23, 2008 claims could have been alleged in the OIP. Nevertheless, the law judge summarily denied Mayer's (and other Respondents') motions stating only that "when the Commission sets down a case for hearing ... the agency does not want motions...because you're second guessing their decision that ... there is a legal basis for it...."¹⁰

In her 2018 Order, the law judge did not address jurisdiction to "entertain" any claim in the OIP where most of the claims pre-dated September 23, 2008, or acknowledge the severe prejudice to Mayer (and other Respondents) in having to defend these stale claims and the evident impact they had on her decision. Had the law judge been asked to consider solely post-September 23, 2008 claims relating to the Trust Offerings – as the statute requires – there would be no objective basis on which to conclude Mayer violated the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. The law judge instead allowed the Division to pollute the record with stale allegations relating to the pre-September 23, 2008 Four Funds, a different investment product altogether.

7. Ratification Was A Nullity

Pre-Hearing Tr. (Jan. 21, 2014), at 30:13-21.

The law judge erroneously concluded that the Commission can "ratif[y] the agency's prior appointment" of its ALJs, see Post Hoc Ratification Order at 1, notwithstanding the fact that the Commission never appointed those ALJs in the first place. In so doing, the law judge ignored the Commission's admission in briefing before the United States Supreme Court that it "did not play any role in the selection" of its ALJs, see Lucia Brief at 19 (emphasis added), and instead relied on principles of agency law – a theory never put forth by the Commission in the Post Hoc Ratification Order.¹¹

Moreover, the cases relied upon by the law judge to reach her conclusion did not, as here, involve the improper appointment of a judge overseeing the principal legal and factfinding stage of proceedings, but instead the simple ratification of administrative decisions entirely distinct from judicial or quasi-judicial decision-making. See 2018 Order at 7, citing, e.g., Doolin Sec. Sav. Bank, F.S.B. v. Office of Thrift Supervision, 139 F.3d 203, 204-05, 213-14 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (finding that a written decision by a properly appointed Director of OTS, following a trial before a properly appointed ALJ, effectively ratified the Notice of Charges that were signed at the outset of the case by the "Acting Director" of the OTS); FEC v. Legi-Tech, Inc., 75 F.3d 704, (D.C. Cir. 1996) (upholding a vote by a reconstituted FEC to find probable cause to continue a pending case where the FEC was not properly constituted at the time of its initial probable cause finding); Advanced Disposal Services East, Inc. v. NLRB, 820 F.3d 592 (3d Cir. 2016) (finding that a properly constituted NLRB could ratify the actions of its Regional Director in overseeing an election of whether employees would choose to unionize; the authority of the hearing officer that adjudicated the dispute was not at issue).

¹¹ The law judge also detailed the process by which the Commission's ALJs were purportedly selected and "appointed," see 2018 Order at 7, facts that are nowhere to be found in this record due to the prior position of the Commission and its staff that appointment pursuant to the United States Constitution was unnecessary.

8. Restrictions On The Removal Of ALJs Violate Separation-of-Powers

The law judge erred in concluding that the restrictions on removal of Commission ALJs do not violate the United States Constitution's separation-of-powers principles based on a mechanical application of the Commission's opinion in Timbervest. The law judge reached this conclusion despite the fact that (i) the Commission expressly admitted in Lucia that its ALJs are insulated by "at least two, and potentially three, levels of protection against presidential removal authority," see Lucia Brief at 20, and (ii) much of the justification supporting the Commission's decision in Timbervest has since been abandoned by the Commission in Lucia, see Timbervest, LLC, Investment Advisers Act of 1940 Release No. 4197, 2015 SEC LEXIS 3854, at *107-12 (Sept. 17, 2015) (finding removal restrictions not unconstitutional because, among other things, ALJs are mere "employees," and "every one of their decisions can be revisited in the course of [the Commission's] de novo review"). The statutory restrictions on removal violate separationof-powers principles and warrant dismissal. See FEC v. NRA Political Victory Fund, 6 F.3d 821 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (finding "no theory that would permit us to declare the Commission's structure unconstitutional without providing relief to the appellants in this case" where "appellants raise the constitutional challenge as a defense to an enforcement action").

9. The Law Judge Did Not Reexamine Prior Evidentiary Rulings

a. The law judge erred in refusing to exclude all "unreliable" evidence as expressly required by amended Rule 320, and dismissed the recent amendment as superfluous. See 2018 Order at 9 ("I do not consider the addition of the adjective 'unreliable' to Rule 320 to be a significant change in the criteria for evidence because Section 556(d) of the Administrative Procedure Act already required that sanctions may not be imposed unless they are supported by 'reliable' evidence." (citations omitted)). The law judge repeatedly allowed "unreliable" evidence to be received, over Mayer's objections, including but not limited to David Smith's 1999 never-sent handwritten ramblings – pure hearsay and filled with prejudicial statements. Tr. 4575:5-11, 4577:20.

The Division's conduct – reading the never-sent 1999 letter into the record, see Tr. 4577:21-4580:25, "under the guise of asking questions" – is precisely what the Second Circuit found in 2015 to be "manifestly erroneous," and "especially prejudicial and improper" in the criminal trial of McGinn and Smith. See United States v. McGinn, 787 F.3d 116, 128 (2d Cir. 2015). In 2018, despite having the benefit of the Second Circuit's decision, the law judge refused to acknowledge her error. Instead, she reached the opposite conclusion stating that "the notes are not unreliable," because the material was seized from Smith's home by federal agents and "[t]here was no doubt" that Smith – a non-party who did not testify – was the author. 2018 Order at 9. This was prejudicial error. Nevertheless, the law judge now contends that she did not rely on the handwritten ramblings in issuing her decision. This ignores the law judge's own statement on the record when she interrupted one Respondent's answer and declared: "how do you square all that with . . . the letter that Smith wrote in 1999 that said the whole thing was a sham." Tr. 5703:22-25. It also ignores the fact that the Division expressly relied on and quoted the 1999 letter in the OIP. See OIP at 9 n.3.

Misleadingly, the law judge also noted that the handwritten ramblings are in evidence as Livingston Exhibits 31 and 32, see 2018 Order at 9 n.5, as though a Respondent sought their admission. She fails to mention that the document was offered by the Division, over Respondents' repeated objections, and when Livingston's counsel was not present. See Tr. 2434:7-13, 2948:12-20, 4574:5-11. The admission of the 1999 never-sent handwritten ramblings alone requires dismissal, as it indelibly prejudiced the law judge against Respondents.

b. The law judge erred in refusing to consider on remand affidavits from Mayer's investors who were subpoenaed to testify, but unable to attend the hearings. Citing the amended rules, under which Respondents are permitted to depose at least five witnesses prior to any hearing, Mayer argued that he would have utilized the new rule in lieu of offering testimony by affidavits. The law judge dismissed this argument, because the ability to depose witnesses under the new rules "does not automatically translate into admissibility of those depositions." See 2018 Order at 9 (citing 17 C.F.R. § 201.235(a)(5)). The law judge denied Mayer's (and Mayer's) 2014 motion to admit the affidavits – which she now refers to as a "fuss" – based on a purported concern that the Division would be unable to cross-examine the witnesses.¹² Of course, had Mayer been given the opportunity to depose those witnesses, the Division would be present, and there would be no such concern. In any event, insofar as some of the witnesses who submitted affidavits were called to testify at the hearing, the Division elicited little, if any, testimony on cross-examination. The affidavits should have been received in evidence.

The law judge's assertion that she "took [it] as a given" that Mayer had "many satisfied customers," 2018 Order at 10 n.6, misses the point. First, the law judge imposed disgorgement on post-September 23, 2008 purchases by customers who were "satisfied" and were not misled. Second, the affidavits demonstrated that Mayer did not make material misstatements or omissions to his customers and that he explained the risks and rewards of investing in McGinn Smith Securities (and other securities). Moreover, not all affidavits were submitted by customers. See, e.g., RMR Ex. 611 (affidavit of James E. Hacker, an attorney who provided 28 boxes of MS&Co.'s due diligence materials regarding the McGinn Smith Securities to the U.S. Attorney's Office in connection with its criminal action against McGinn and Smith); and RMR Ex. 619 ¶ 12 (affidavit of Kyle Weeks, a former FINRA Senior Compliance Examiner and the CEO of Securities Compliance Management who provided compliance consulting and audit services to MS&Co. and found that the New York branch RRs "pre-qualified their customers" for private placement securities, including McGinn Smith Securities.).

10. The Commission May Not Impose Disgorgement

The law judge ignored (and erred in rejecting) Mayer's argument that the Commission may not, as a matter of law, impose disgorgement for any period of time even within the five year statute of limitations of § 2462. See Kokesh, 137 S. Ct. at 1642 n.3 ("Nothing in this opinion should be interpreted as an opinion on whether courts possess authority to order disgorgement in SEC enforcement proceedings or on whether courts have properly applied disgorgement principles in this context.").

11. The Law Judge Did Not Reexamine The Equal Protection And Due Process Deprivations

a. The law judge did not reexamine that this proceeding should have been brought (if at all) in federal court given the interrelated issues between the OIP and the SEC's federal court action against McGinn and Smith. While McGinn and Smith could take depositions and other discovery under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and had the protections of the Federal Rules of Evidence, trial by jury, and an Article III judge, Mayer (and other Respondents) were deprived of those benefits and protections. The prejudicial effect of the administrative forum was amplified because much of the hearing was devoted to (a) McGinn and Smith, who were not parties to or present for examination, and (b) the records of MS&Co. – that Mayer (and others) did not have, but which the Division's summary witnesses spent several years analyzing.

b. The law judge did not consider or reexamine that "[t]he fundamental requirement of due process is the opportunity to be heard 'at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner." Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 333 (1976); Locurto v. Giuliani, 447 F. 3d 159 (2d Cir. 2006) (party in hearing before administrative law judges does not receive "a full and fair opportunity to litigate" where he was "denied adequate discovery" on the relevant issues).

c. Nor did the law judge reexamine Mayer's (and other Respondents') motions challenging the patent pleading deficiencies in the OIP, which failed to state a fraud claim.¹³

d. The law judge did not reexamine whether Mayer's (and other Respondents') equal protection rights were violated when they were singled out, even though approximately 40 others sold over $69 million of McGinn Smith Securities to investors were not charged. See Div. Ex. 591. There was no legitimate basis to single out Mayer when 40 others also offered McGinn Smith Securities, also did not see any red flags, also did not conduct an "investigation" (Rabinovich conducted "due diligence"), also did not "verify" statements in the PPM or statements by McGinn and Smith, and also did not uncover the secret fraud and diversion of funds by McGinn and Smith. Gupta, 796 F. Supp. 2d at 513-14.

e. The law judge did not reexamine whether she had prejudged the case as evidenced by her statement that certain proffered evidence had "nothing to do with the violations," Tr. 2412:5-6 (emphasis added). The statement was a blatant violation of due process. In re Murchison, 349 U.S. 133, 136 (1955) ("A fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process.") (internal citations and quotations omitted); Caperton v. A.T.

¹³ See Rabinovich, Mayer And Rogers' Motion For A More Definite Statement dated November 7, 2013; Rabinovich's Answer dated November 15, 2013 at 4-8.

Massey Coal Co., 556 U.S. 868, 883-84 (2009) (the Due Process Clause does not require "proof of actual bias," but rather whether there is a real risk of actual bias or prejudgment.).

12. Pre-Judgment Interest Is Punitive

The law judge erred in sua sponte ordering pre-judgement interest to run from November 1, 2009. Pre-judgment interest under these circumstances – where Mayer has been ensnared in prolonged proceedings as a result of the Commission's failure to properly appoint its ALJs – is punitive. There should be no award of prejudgment interest. See, e.g., Matter of Jordan, 2017 FINRA Discip. LEXIS 39, at *72 (Sept. 26, 2017) (finding it "unduly punitive" to require respondent to pay prejudgment interest in prolonged proceeding where last trades at issue occurred five years earlier); Matter of Coxon, Securities Act of 1933 Release No. 8271, 2003 SEC LEXIS 3162, at *65 (Aug. 21, 2003) (cutting prejudgment interest in half due to "the passage of time" – nearly ten years – from the last violation to the Commission's opinion); see also City of Milwaukee v. Cement Div., Nat'l Gypsum Co., 515 U.S. 189, 195-96 (1995) (noting that prejudgment interest may be denied in "peculiar" circumstances, and "the most obvious example" would be a plaintiff's "undue delay").

Conclusion

The Commission should dismiss all charges against Mayer.
