- Individuals
- High Net Worth
- Corporations/Other Businesses
- Pension/Profit Sharing Plans
- Other Investment Advisors (i.e. third-party money manager)

There are no account minimums.

Item 8 - Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

Methods of Analysis

Intrepid Wealth Partners, LLC analyzes investment strategies as part of a larger financial planning process to align risk and types of investments with clients stated goals & objectives. We select and allocate investments based on these factors as well as using data from 3rd party money managers. We can recommend a large variety of investment types including stocks, bonds, ETFs, and mutual funds.

Investment Strategies

We build a portfolio based upon a client's time horizon, risk tolerance, and objectives for the money as part of our "Results by Design" financial planning and investment analysis process.

Risk of Loss

All investment programs have certain risks that are borne by the investor. We will advise you concerning the risks associated with your investments that we manage by conducting a analysis and our clients will be provided with a summary of risks associated with investment products purchased through each qualified custodian. For all services provided through our third-party managers you should consult with your investment advisor for a summary of risks associated with those investments. Investing in securities involves risk of loss that you should be prepared to bear. The risks can range from failing to keep pace with inflation to losing some or all of the money you invest.

Examples of Portfolio Management Risks

- Interest-rate Risk: Changes in interest rates may cause investment prices to fluctuate. For example, when interest rates rise, yields on existing bonds become less attractive, causing their market values to decline.

- Market Risk: The price of a security, bond, or mutual fund may drop in reaction to tangible and intangible events and conditions. This type of risk is caused by external factors independent of a security's particular underlying circumstances. For example, political, economic and social conditions may trigger market events.
- Inflation Risk: When any type of inflation is present, a dollar today will not buy as much as a dollar next year, because purchasing power is eroding at the rate of inflation.
- Currency Risk: Overseas investments are subject to fluctuations in the value of the dollar against the currency of the investment's originating country. This is also referred to as exchange rate risk.
- Reinvestment Risk: This is the risk that future proceeds from investments may have to be reinvested at a potentially lower rate of return (i.e. interest rate). This primarily relates to fixed income securities.
- Business Risk: These risks are associated with a particular industry or a particular company within an industry. For example, oil-drilling companies depend on finding oil and then refining it, a lengthy process, before they can generate a profit. They carry a higher risk of profitability than an electric company, which generates its income from a steady stream of customers who buy electricity no matter what the economic environment is like.
- Liquidity Risk: Liquidity is the ability to readily convert an investment into cash. Generally, assets are more liquid if many traders are interested in a standardized product. For example, Treasury Bills are highly liquid, while real estate properties are not.
- Financial Risk: Excessive borrowing to finance a business' operations increases the risk of profitability, because the company must meet the terms of its obligations in good times and bad. During periods of financial stress, the inability to meet loan obligations may result in bankruptcy and/or a declining market value.

Examples of Stocks, bonds, ETFs, and Mutual Fund risks

- Market Risk: The price of a security, bond, or mutual fund may drop in reaction to tangible and intangible events and conditions. This type of risk is caused by external factors independent of a security's particular underlying circumstances. For example, political, economic and social conditions may trigger market events.
- Interest-rate Risk: Changes in interest rates may cause investment prices to fluctuate. For example, when interest rates rise, yields on existing bonds become less attractive, causing their market values to decline.
- Credit Risk: particularly in bond funds, where the issuer could default on payment.
- Liquidity Risk: Liquidity is the ability to readily convert an investment into cash. Generally, assets are more liquid if many traders are interested in a standardized product. For example, Treasury Bills are highly liquid, while real estate properties are not.

- Concentration Risk funds that focus on a specific industry, sector, or region, making them more susceptible to market changes.
- Managerial Risk Insight into how the decisions made by a fund's manager can impact the fund's performance, for better or worse.
- Sector/Industry Risk: Certain sectors or industries may be more vulnerable to certain risks, affecting stocks within those areas disproportionately. Case studies or examples of sectors that have experienced significant downturns.
- Company-Specific Risk: Individual companies, including management decisions, financial health, and poor company performance can lead to stock value decline, regardless of overall market trends.
- Volatility Risk: investor sentiment, news, and market dynamics can lead to significant price fluctuations.

The CFP® certification is a voluntary certification; no federal or state law or regulation requires financial planners to hold CFP® certification. It is recognized in the United States and a number of other countries for its (1) high standard of professional education; (2) stringent code of conduct and standards of practice; and (3) ethical requirements that govern professional engagements with clients. More than 62,000 individuals have obtained CFP® certification in the United States.

Education – Complete an advanced college-level course of study addressing the financial planning subject areas that CFP Board’s studies have determined as necessary for the competent and professional delivery of financial planning services, and attain a Bachelor’s Degree from a regionally accredited United States college or university (or its equivalent from a foreign university). CFP Board’s financial planning subject areas include insurance planning and risk management, employee benefits planning, investment planning, income tax planning, retirement planning, and estate planning;

Examination – Pass the comprehensive CFP® Certification Examination. The examination, administered in 10 hours over a two-day period, includes case studies and client scenarios designed to test one's ability to correctly diagnose financial planning issues and apply one's knowledge of financial planning to real world circumstances;

Experience – Complete at least three years of full-time financial planning-related experience (or the equivalent, measured as 2,000 hours per year); and

Ethics – Agree to be bound by CFP Board's Standards of Professional Conduct, a set of documents outlining the ethical and practice standards for CFP® professionals. Individuals who become certified must complete the following ongoing education and ethics requirements in order to maintain the right to continue to use the CFP® marks:
