Item 4 – Advisory Business

Borealis is a Delaware limited partnership that was formed April 4, 2017 and is owned solely by entities principally owned and controlled by our Managing Partner, Scott Schweighauser. Any references to the “Firm”, “us,” “we,” and “our” in this Brochure refer to Borealis. Any defined terms used in this Brochure not otherwise defined herein, have the definition ascribed to them in the offering documents of the applicable Fund (as defined below).

Borealis provides investment advisory services on a discretionary basis pursuant to investment advisory agreements between us and several private pooled investment vehicles (“Funds”). Borealis’ current advisory clients include two families of private investment funds operating through master-feeder structures (“Fund I” and “Fund II”, respectively):

- The Fund I family of funds is comprised of the following private investment funds: (i) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Fund I, LP, a Delaware limited partnership (the “Onshore Feeder Fund I”); (ii) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Offshore Fund I, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Offshore Feeder Fund I,” together with the Onshore Feeder Fund I, the “Fund I Feeder Funds”); and (iii) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Master Fund I, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Fund I Master Fund”, together with the Fund I Feeder Funds, “Fund I Main Funds”). Fund I is closed to new investor subscriptions.
- The Fund II family of funds is comprised of the following private investment funds: (i) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Fund II, LP, a Delaware limited partnership (the “Onshore Feeder Fund II”); (ii) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Offshore Fund II, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Offshore Feeder Fund II,” together with the Onshore Feeder Fund II, the “Fund II Feeder Funds”); and (iii) Borealis Strategic Capital Partners Master Fund II, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Fund II Master Fund”, together with the Fund II Feeder Funds, the “Fund II Main Funds”). Fund II is closed to new investor subscriptions.

The Fund I Main Funds and the Fund II Main Funds are referred to herein collectively as the “Main Funds” or each individually as a “Main Fund”.

Borealis also provides investment advisory services to a co-investment master-feeder structure comprised of the following private funds: (i) Borealis Strategic Co-Investment Fund IC, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Co-Investment Feeder Fund”, together with the Fund I Feeder Funds and the Fund II Feeder Funds, the “Feeder Funds”) and (ii) Borealis Strategic Co-Investment Fund IP, LP, a Cayman Islands exempted limited partnership (the “Co-Investment Master Fund”, together with the Fund I Main Master Fund and the Fund II Main Master Fund, the “Master Funds”). Co-Investment Feeder Fund and Co-Investment Master Fund are currently closed to new investor subscriptions.

Our affiliate, Borealis Strategic Capital General Partner, LLC (the “General Partner”), a Delaware limited liability company, serves as the general partner of the Funds. References to “Investors” generally refer to the investors in the Funds.

In the future, Borealis may provide investment advisory services through several different investment products, including additional U.S. and non-U.S. private investment funds and advisory agreements for individual clients (collectively with the Funds, “clients”). We provide investment advisory services pursuant to investment advisory agreements between us and our clients. Clients typically invest in a portfolio of Primary Funds (as defined below) but clients or Investors may also invest in co-investments, including additional investment capacity in a Primary Fund or access to special investment opportunities (which may be highly concentrated) managed by third party managers.

The Funds generally invest capital in a variety of newly-formed, early-stage, or existing private funds ("Primary Funds") managed by third party investment managers that we believe have not yet reached a "critical mass" of fee-paying assets under management or have yet to commence operations ("Early Stage Managers"). We invest in Primary Funds in return for direct economic participation in their growth and success. In exchange for providing committed early-stage capital, Investors are entitled to receive the benefit of not only the investment return and shared revenue earned by Early Stage Managers over a specific period (if any), but also generally one or more of the following: reduced management fees, reduced performance fees/allocations, and/or reserved investment capacity rights. These types of investments are referred to herein as "Strategic Capital Investments."

Primary Funds pursue various investment strategies which potentially involve trading on margin, short sales, and/or investing in a wide range of instruments and markets on a worldwide basis, including, but not limited to, equities and equity-related instruments, over-the-counter and exchange traded instruments, fixed income and other debt-related instruments, currencies, commodities, and derivative instruments, such as swaps, futures, options, and forward agreements. Investors may invest directly in the Primary Funds in certain instances, as discussed below. There is often limited capacity for Strategic Capital Investments. Accordingly, the potential exists for the Funds to participate in varying degrees, if at all, in each Strategic Capital Investment.

All discussions of the Funds in this Brochure, including but not limited to their investments, the strategies used in managing the Funds, the fees and other costs associated with an investment in the Funds, and conflicts of interest faced by the Firm in connection with management of the Funds, are qualified in their entirety by reference to each Fund's respective offering memorandum and advisory agreement.

Borealis tailors its investment advisory services to the strategies and conditions set forth in the Funds' offering and governing documents, rather than to the needs of any individual Investor. We generally do not permit clients or Investors to impose limitations on the investment activities described in the applicable offering documents or the governing documents. However, Borealis reserves the right to tailor other contractual rights of Investors through side letter agreements at its sole discretion. Side letter arrangements may provide terms and conditions to certain Investors that are more advantageous than those set forth in the applicable Fund's offering memorandum and may include special rights to make future investments in the Funds or other investment vehicles managed by Borealis, different transparency right, reporting rights, and/or different fee terms.

Borealis does not participate in any wrap fee programs.

As of December 31, 2023, Borealis manages approximately $528,796,000 in regulatory assets under management on a discretionary basis. We do not currently manage any non-discretionary assets.

From time to time, where excess capacity in Strategic Capital Investments is available, we generally offer such excess capacity to Investors and other third parties to invest alongside our clients in Primary Funds on a co-investment basis. We generally provide access to such co-investment opportunities through a private investment fund or advisory agreement. Co-investment opportunities will generally be offered to potential co-investors on an individual basis, and each co-investor will generally have the opportunity to accept or reject each individual co-investment. Participation in such opportunities may be limited to a select number of co-investors based on the amount of excess capacity available, the co-investor's relationship with us, certain side letter provisions, or other factors, and are not always available to all interested parties.

Item 5 - Fees and Compensation

Subject to the terms of the applicable offering memoranda, governing documents, or agreements, we typically receive an asset-based annual Management Fee, generally payable in advance at the beginning of each month or quarter. The Management Fee is typically deducted at the beginning of each month or quarter, as applicable, from the respective Fund Portfolio Capital Account balances of Investors. In addition to the Management Fee, we are generally entitled to receive the Strategic Capital Return Share, as discussed more fully in Item 6. Our Investors are all "qualified purchasers," as defined in the Investment Company Act of 1940 or "knowledgeable employees". As a result, detailed information regarding our fees is not required to be provided herein. Prospective Investors should review the applicable offering memoranda and/or governing documents prior to investing.

Borealis reserves the right to waive all or any portion of these fees with respect to any Investor (including, but not limited to, officers, directors or employees of the General Partner, Borealis, any of their direct or indirect affiliates, or any members of their immediate families or family trusts or other entities established for their benefit ("Borealis Parties")), without notice to, or the consent of, the other Investors.

Each Feeder Fund generally bears its own expenses and a pro rata portion of the applicable Master Fund's expenses relating to its investment and trading activities, including, but not limited to, expenses related to the offering of the Fund's interests or shares, as applicable, brokerage commissions (see Item 12), "bid-ask" spreads, mark-ups, borrowing costs and interest expenses, management and performance fees of the Primary Funds, third-party legal fees, the costs of bonding required by ERISA, valuation and consulting fees in connection with an investment or prospective investment with an Early Stage Manager, including the costs related to conferences attended (including reasonable travel), the costs of due diligence performed on an Early Stage Manager (including reasonable travel), negotiations of project agreements, expenses associated with "broken deals," reasonable expenses related to the purchase, sale or transmittal of Feeder Fund assets (through its investment in the applicable Master Funds) and other transactional charges and clearing fees, marketing expenses incurred by or on behalf of a Feeder Fund, expenses related to the Firm's research and monitoring (e.g., Bloomberg terminal and other financial software and required hardware), the cost of third parties that provide risk and other hedge fund analytics utilized by the Firm to monitor portfolios, any costs of winding up and dissolving the Funds, the costs and expenses of compliance consultants retained by the General Partner, legal, accounting, insurance, custodial, audit and administration fees and expenses.

Where more than one Master Fund is exposed to expenses associated with "broken deals" in connection with a concurrent investment in a Primary Fund which ultimately never comes to fruition, Borealis seeks to allocate such expenses pro-rata between the respective Master Funds where Borealis believes that it is appropriate and reasonable to do so. However, certain circumstances could require a Fund to bear more than its pro-rata share.

Generally, the Funds bear all expenses, including reasonable travel, related to marketing of interests in the applicable Fund. The Main Funds bear all of their marketing expenses until the final closing date; thereafter the General Partner will bear such expenses.

The Funds will generally pay for any out-of-pocket costs and expenses incurred by the Firm in connection with cybersecurity, computer software, news and information services and licensing costs that benefit the Funds. Costs and expenses relating to or arising out of registration, regulatory or self-regulatory filings by the applicable Funds, the General Partner or Firm will be paid by the applicable Funds. If an LPAC is formed for the Main Funds, such Main Funds will bear the reasonable out-of-pocket expenses of the members thereof in connection with their services. The Funds also bear their pro rata share of the fees and expenses of the Primary Funds, as well as extraordinary expenses (if any), including expenses related to any litigation or proceedings or examinations by the IRS or other governmental bodies or self-regulatory organizations.

Co-Investment Master Fund – Share Class Expenses

Due to the existence of multiple share classes in the Co-Investment Master Fund, Fund Expenses solely attributable to one or more classes shall generally be borne by the relevant classes. Shared expenses are generally allocated between classes based on the size of the Strategic Capital Investment of each Class or another methodology that the General Partner believes to be fair, all as determined by the General Partner. Borealis reserves the right to determine whether an expenditure relates solely to a particular class. Given the single purpose investment of each class, it is anticipated that the majority of the initial fund expenses attributable to each class will be costs, fees and expenses related to the identification of and negotiation with the relevant Early Stage Manager. Such expenses will be allocated between the class and the Main Master Fund.

Borealis does not typically refund fees paid in advance if an advisory contract is terminated before the end of a billing period.

Neither Borealis nor any of its supervised persons accept compensation for the sale of any securities or other investment products.

Item 6 - Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

With respect to Strategic Capital Investments, the General Partner is generally entitled to receive a certain percentage of the Strategic Capital Return (as defined below) otherwise allocable to Investors, subject to the terms of the applicable governing documents or agreements (“Strategic Capital Return Share”). “Strategic Capital Return” refers to the share of the performance allocation and additional returns from a Primary Fund as well as, generally, each other fund or account advised by the applicable Early Stage Manager received by a Fund in exchange for the Fund’s Strategic Capital Investment. The General Partner reserves the right to waive or reduce the Strategic Capital Return Share with respect to any Investor without entitling, or providing notice to, any other Investor.

Borealis advises several Funds that invest in similar investments, and the Funds and Investors are subject to conflicts of interest with respect to the simultaneous management of multiple accounts that follow the same or similar investment strategies. In managing multiple Funds, Borealis will potentially determine that an investment opportunity is appropriate for a particular Fund, but not for another. To the extent that certain Funds invest in a limited investment opportunity, such as a Strategic Capital Investment or an additional investment in a Primary Fund, the ability of other Funds or Investors to invest in that same investment opportunity could be adversely affected.

Borealis may have different types of clients. These clients may have different investment strategies, objectives and restrictions and may be subject to different terms. These terms may include, but not be limited to, the following: management and performance fees, rights to receive information regarding the portfolio (which may include more frequent reporting) and such other rights as may be separately negotiated. Further, clients may be at differing stages of their investment period, which may impact the allocation of an investment opportunity.

Multiple Borealis Funds may simultaneously be eligible to make Strategic Capital Investments in the Primary Funds and receive interests including Strategic Capital Return. As a result, Borealis will be subject to a conflict of interest in allocating Primary Fund investment opportunities among the Borealis Funds. In particular, Borealis anticipates that a subsequent Borealis Fund's initial Strategic Capital Investment may be made alongside and pari passu with the Strategic Capital Investment of an existing Borealis Fund. Such a parallel investment would present a conflict of interest on the part of Borealis in that the subsequent Fund's investment in the same Primary Fund as an existing Borealis Fund may support or otherwise benefit the existing Borealis Fund, for example by seeding an Early Stage Manager who requires a larger investment than the existing Borealis Fund is able to make on its own. Such a parallel investment would also cause the subsequent Fund's allocation to the Primary Fund to be smaller than it would be if the existing Borealis Fund were not also participating. On the other hand, an existing Borealis Fund may take all of the available capacity in a particular Primary Fund investment opportunity, in which case the subsequent Fund would not be able to participate in such investment. Not every investment that is made by the Funds will be appropriate for each Borealis Fund and, as a result, such Borealis Funds may not be offered the opportunity to invest in such Primary Funds. In all events, Borealis will comply with its investment allocation policies and procedures in allocating investment opportunities among the Borealis Funds.

In certain limited circumstances, Borealis pursues a co-investment strategy pursuant to which certain Investors are offered the opportunity to invest in Primary Funds on an individual basis, including in the form of Strategic Capital Investments. Such co-investment opportunities are offered in an instance in which the Main Master Fund has received a full capacity allocation based upon the current risk guidelines in place or have passed on the opportunity due to risk guidelines, portfolio management considerations, liquidity, or other factors. Such co-investment opportunities generally involve the payment of a performance fee or allocation and management fee to Borealis.

Compensation arrangements, such as the Strategic Capital Return Share and Management Fee, vary among the Master Funds, each Fund thereof, or share classes within each Fund. Any variances in compensation arrangements create a conflict of interest as we have an incentive to favor or allocate certain investments, such as the highest performing investments, to Funds or share classes within each Fund from whom we receive the greatest compensation. We have adopted policies and procedures designed to ensure fair and equitable treatment of each Fund and share classes thereof.

The Firm and certain of its employees have invested in or alongside certain Funds. In addition, the Funds are typically under the control of employees or affiliates of Borealis by virtue of their ownership of a controlling percentage of such Fund's voting rights or Borealis' discretionary authority over the Funds. These circumstances create a conflict of interest to the extent that we have an incentive to favor one Fund over another when making investment decisions. However, these conflicts of interest are mitigated to the extent that such investments align our interests with the Funds and their Investors.

Item 7 - Types of Clients

We currently provide investment advice to the Funds and not individually to any Investor. In the future, Borealis may provide investment advisory services to other types of clients as well, such as additional U.S. and non-U.S. private funds and advisory agreements for individual clients, but excluding persons within the definition of “retail investors” under Rule 17a-14(e)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

The underlying Investors in the Funds, while not considered clients of Borealis under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the “Advisers Act”), as amended, are high net worth individuals and institutional investors that qualify to invest in 3(c)(7) funds as “qualified purchasers” or “knowledgeable employees.”

Item 8 - Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

All references to the Funds in this Brochure, including, but not limited to, their investments and management strategies, are qualified in their entirety by reference to each Fund’s respective offering documents. The following is a general discussion of the methods of analysis, investment strategies and the risk of loss associated with Borealis’ overall investment strategy. These risk factors can change over time. There can be no assurance that the Funds will achieve their objectives or that the Funds will not incur losses. Investors in the Funds must be prepared to lose all or substantially all of their investment in the Funds.

THE INFORMATION BELOW IS INTENDED TO SERVE AS A SUMMARY OF POTENTIAL RISKS OF INVESTING. THE FOLLOWING IS NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE OFFERING DOCUMENTS OF THE FUNDS. POTENTIAL INVESTORS IN THE FUNDS MUST REVIEW OFFERING DOCUMENTS IN THEIR ENTIRETY BEFORE INVESTING. THIS INFORMATION IS BOTH SUPPLEMENTED AND SUPERCEDED BY INFORMATION IN THE OFFERING DOCUMENTS FOR THE FUNDS.

A. Investment Strategies and Methods of AnalysisInvestments in Primary Funds of Early Stage Managers

Borealis seeks to identify talented Early Stage Managers and invest on behalf of the Funds in such Early Stage Managers’ newly-formed or existing Primary Funds to monetize the systemic mismatch between Early Stage Managers’ needs for strategic capital and lack of access to it. We believe that Early Stage Managers outperform their established peers due to a variety of structural and behavioral factors, such as nimbleness, broader opportunity sets, fewer distractions, and higher motivation. By investing in the Primary Funds of Early Stage Managers, we seek to provide Investors with access to the varied skills and expertise of such Early Stage Managers which could potentially not otherwise be available to Investors.

The substantial majority—if not all—of the Funds’ investments will be in the interests of Primary Funds managed by Early Stage Managers employing a variety of alternative investment techniques and strategies, which include, but are not limited to equities, credit, event-driven, opportunistic, and macro strategies.

Borealis selects Early Stage Managers on the basis of various criteria, which include, among other things, an analysis of the Early Stage Manager’s principals’ and key personnel’s past experience and their performance; the specialized expertise of the Early Stage Manager’s principals, and whether the principals are talented, flexible, and opportunistic; the personal characteristics of the Early Stage Manager's principals and/or key personnel, including their integrity, intellectual honesty, talent, expertise, flexibility, and dedication; an evaluation of the Early Stage Manager in terms of a risk/reward analysis; the business prospects of the Early Stage Manager and the principals' commitment to managing a business as opposed to simply investing capital; the additional risks of making a long-term Strategic Capital Investment in such strategy; the potential macroeconomic or other strategy-specific factors on the strategy and, accordingly, on the Early Stage Manager; possible reputational issues relating to the Early Stage Manager, its strategy, and its personnel; the amount of personal capital invested by the principals of an Early Stage Manager in the Primary Fund; the current organizational depth and operational resources of each Early Stage Manager as well as the Early Stage Manager's business plan as it relates to organizational depth and operational resources; and the Early Stage Manager's investment philosophy and policies and training of its principals and key personnel.

Borealis is not limited to investing with Early Stage Managers with past investment histories and has the discretion to invest with an Early Stage Manager based on Borealis' assessment of its future prospects.

The Early Stage Managers selected by Borealis have complete discretion to make investments for their respective Primary Funds consistent with the relevant investment advisory agreements, limited partnership agreements, memorandum and articles of association or other governing documents. Such agreements and governing documents generally allow the Early Stage Managers to change the kinds of investments they make and their techniques for making investments if they believe that such changes are appropriate in view of the then-current or expected market, business or economic conditions.

Direct Trading

Borealis retains authority to conduct certain limited direct trading activities on behalf of the Funds, including for hedging purposes. Where appropriate, Borealis can also engage in direct trading in connection with the liquidation of securities that have been distributed in kind to the Funds. For these purposes, Borealis can invest in stock, options (for FX hedging purposes only), futures (for FX hedging purposes only), money market instruments, mutual funds and other investment companies or securities. In addition, Borealis holds the authority to invest the Funds' cash balances in any instruments it deems appropriate. Any income earned from such investments will be deployed in accordance with the investment program.

B. Material Risks

Below is a summary of potentially material risks for the significant investment strategies used by the Firm, as well as Early Stage Managers. This list of risk factors does not purport to be a complete enumeration or explanation of the risks involved in any investment in the Funds, including the general business and regulatory risk of investment in private investment funds, operational risks, general market risks, general credit risks, liquidity risks, or other risks. Investors should refer to the offering memorandum for further detail.

Risks Related to Concentrated Investments in Early Stage Managers

Limited or No Past Performance. Primary Funds will typically have limited or no operating history. Moreover, the Early Stage Managers themselves will also typically have limited or no operating history. Early Stage Managers and Primary Funds could have less operational infrastructure and administrative controls, which in turn presents additional risk to the Funds.

Liquidity. Strategic Capital Investments will be subject to the Strategic Capital Commitment Period and other investors in the Primary Funds will likely be subject to different terms. Consequently, the Funds will be forced effectively to implement a “buy and hold,” rather than an active asset allocation “fund of funds” strategy with respect to the Funds, at least until the termination of the last Strategic Capital Commitment Period. The Funds will be required to bear the risk of investment for such period of time. The Strategic Capital Commitment Period will restrict the Funds’ ability to withdraw its investment in a Primary Fund, except under limited circumstances. Such restrictions could result in the Funds experiencing significant losses at a time when it otherwise would have withdrawn from such Primary Fund.

Long-Term Commitment. Withdrawals can generally only be made with respect to a Primary Fund after the termination of such Primary Fund’s Strategic Capital Commitment Period, potentially regardless of any Key Person Event. Furthermore, withdrawal terms of the Primary Funds are expected to materially limit an Investor’s ability to withdraw from the Funds even after the termination of such Primary Fund’s Strategic Capital Commitment Period. In acquiring an Interest, Investors are making a long-term commitment to Borealis’ management, irrespective of possible adverse developments at Borealis.

Lack of Diversification. The identification and development of individuals who have not yet established independent operations but are looking to build a successful investment management business is resource-intensive, and Borealis will only be able to make investments in a limited number of Primary Funds and the Funds will therefore bear the risk of a highly concentrated portfolio of Primary Funds. Like any highly concentrated portfolio, a portfolio of Primary Funds will bear the risk of a larger overall loss in connection with the poor performance of any one investment.

Competition. There are a number of major competitors in the strategic capital investment and/or “seed” sector. This means that Borealis will have to compete for Early Stage Managers and there can be no guarantee that it will be able to compete successfully for a limited number of potentially high performing Early Stage Managers.

Possible Failure of the Investment Strategies Employed by the Early Stage Managers. The Funds are subject to the risks associated with the investment strategies and investment techniques and practices employed by the Early Stage Managers. The Early Stage Managers could be unsuccessful in attempting to generate profits and/or avoid losses. If the trading and investing of Early Stage Managers is unsuccessful, not only will the Funds incur losses but also the business of the Early Stage Managers will likely be materially adversely affected. The alternative investment strategies that will be implemented for the Primary Funds are subject to a “risk of total loss”—the risk that a previously low volatility and apparently comparatively low risk strategy will incur sudden and dramatic losses—at a level of severity to which investment funds employing traditional strategies (which could be potentially less dependent on the availability of financing or market liquidity) could possibly not be subject.

Market Risk. Market risk reflects the fact that there are certain general market conditions in which any given investment strategy is unlikely to be profitable. Neither the Early Stage Managers nor Borealis will have any ability to control or predict such market conditions, and the Early Stage Managers will be particularly vulnerable to adverse market conditions early in the operations of their Primary Funds.

Strategy Risk. Strategy risk is associated with the failure or deterioration of an entire strategy such that most or all investment managers employing that strategy suffer significant losses. Strategy specific losses could result from excessive concentration by multiple investment managers in the same investment or general economic events that adversely affect particular strategies (e.g., the disruption of historical pricing relationships). The strategies employed by the Early Stage Managers are speculative and involve substantial risk of loss in the event of such failure or deterioration.

Manager Risk. Manager risk relates to the possibility of Early Stage Manager inexperience in trading on a standalone basis, inability to establish and develop its own business, fraud, intentional or inadvertent deviations from an Early Stage Manager's announced investment strategy (including excessive concentration, directional investing outside of disclosed ranges, excessive leverage or experimentation with new capital markets) or simply poor judgment.

Importance of Early Stage Manager Initial Performance. Investment management is a highly competitive field in which successful asset raising is, in a large part, driven by performance. Even a brief period of initial poor performance could make it difficult, if not impossible, for an Early Stage Manager to raise or retain assets for its funds and accounts. The Primary Funds, and in turn the value of the Strategic Capital Investments, will be particularly vulnerable to the risk of adverse initial performance. If an Early Stage Manager were to incur substantial losses, it could have adverse reputational consequences to: (i) such Early Stage Manager, making it difficult for such Early Stage Manager to raise additional or maintain current assets under management; (ii) Borealis, the General Partner and the Funds; and (iii) Investors due to their association with the Funds and such Early Stage Manager. Further, the reputational consequences could make it difficult for Borealis to negotiate Project Agreements with new Early Stage Managers in the future.

Risks Related to Early Stage Managers

Early Stage Managers. Borealis could be unsuccessful in identifying Early Stage Managers which have the potential to succeed in establishing and developing their own businesses and trading on a stand-alone basis. Evaluating whether a particular Early Stage Manager will be successful in building a business as an entrepreneur while also managing an investment portfolio can be materially more uncertain than evaluating an Early Stage Manager's past trading record, especially a trading record generated as part of a larger portfolio or at an established financial institution.

Other Early Stage Manager Investment Funds – Follow-On Investments. In order for the Funds to receive a Strategic Capital Return related to other investment funds managed by an Early Stage Manager, the Funds will generally be required, or for efficiency reasons elect, to invest in such other investment funds. To the extent that this occurs, the Funds will possibly be exposed to investment strategies and performance that Borealis otherwise would not have selected for the Funds.

Start-Up Operations. Start-up operations are often subject to risks substantially unrelated to the underlying quality or potential of a business. If the principals of an Early Stage Manager prove to be incompatible colleagues; the organization could fail to develop an appropriate trading discipline; initial cash flow constraints could make it difficult for the Early Stage Manager to retain valuable personnel, etc. Even if Borealis is successful in selecting promising principals, unless such principals are able to develop effective business operations for their respective Early Stage Manager, such Early Stage Manager could be unable to trade effectively or develop.

Fraud or Misrepresentation. Borealis cannot protect the Funds from the risk of Early Stage Manager fraud or misrepresentation. Although Borealis will conduct background checks and perform due diligence on key employees and the Early Stage Manager, as well as obtain regular reporting and inspection rights and portfolio-related information, because the Funds will not have custody or control over assets it invests in Primary Funds, the Early Stage Manager of a Primary Fund (or such Early Stage Manager's personnel) could divert or abscond with such assets. An Early Stage Manager also could deviate from its stated investment strategy, objectives, policies or restrictions (e.g., entering into new or riskier markets, excessive portfolio concentration, investing outside of pre-defined ranges, excessive leverage), issue false performance reports or engage in other misconduct. Early Stage Manager misconduct could result in reputational damage to the Funds and Investors.

Human Error and Poor Judgment. In many cases, the bulk of a Primary Fund's trading will be based on the market judgment of an Early Stage Manager's personnel. Such judgment could be in error, based on incomplete or inaccurate information and/or adversely influenced by personal or emotional factors.

Systems Malfunctions and Other Operational Failures. Certain of the Early Stage Managers could potentially implement strategies that rely to a material extent on trading and analytical systems. These systems could malfunction at any time, and such malfunction could potentially not be identified for some period of time during which material losses could be incurred. The risk and magnitude of potential trading errors can also be materially increased by the use of computerized trading systems. It is reasonable to assume that the risk of a non-override computer malfunction will likely be higher in the case of a start-up or developmental stage Early Stage Managers than in the case of an established manager.

Misuse of Confidential Information. Widely-reported instances of securities law violations through the misuse of confidential information have occurred and are continuing among investment managers (such as the Early Stage Managers). Such violations will likely result in substantial liabilities for damages and the disgorgement of profits and penalties. It is possible that certain Early Stage Managers will be charged with involvement in such violations. Not only could such charges be damaging to an Early Stage Manager's operations, but also the Funds, as the provider of the Strategic Capital Investments to the Early Stage Managers, could be implicated in such charges (although Investors' exposure would be limited to their respective investments).

Investment Strategy Risks. The Early Stage Managers execute many investment strategies, including several types of arbitrage, event-driven and directional strategies (e.g., long/short equities, relative value, long/short credit, activist, volatility trading and capital structure arbitrage). At times, Early Stage Managers focused on implementing a particular strategy could make an opportunistic trade representing a different trading approach. For example, in seeking to identify a relatively mispriced pair of assets, an Early Stage Manager could conclude that an asset is sufficiently over or underpriced to merit taking an outright directional position. Each investment strategy involves specific risks that are more fully described in the applicable offering memoranda.

Early Stage Managers are continually developing new, and adapting and refining existing, strategies. There is no material limitation on the strategies that the Early Stage Managers can apply or the investment instruments in which the Early Stage Managers can invest and no assurance as to which types of strategies will be applied at any one time.

General Economic Conditions. The success of any investment activity is affected by general economic conditions, which could affect the level and volatility of interest rates and the extent and timing of investor participation in the markets for both equities and interest-sensitive securities. Unexpected volatility or illiquidity in the markets in which the Funds, directly or indirectly, holds positions could impair the Funds' ability to carry out its business or cause it to incur losses.

Use of Leverage. The Early Stage Managers generally can use leverage by purchasing instruments with the use of borrowed funds, by trading options or futures contracts or through other means. The amount of leverage used by an Early Stage Manager could be large in relation to a Primary Fund's capital. Although such techniques increase the opportunity for a higher return on investment, they also increase the risk of loss. The Primary Funds are subject to the margin rules of the Federal Reserve System and stock exchanges. To the extent the margin rules become more restrictive the investment results of the Fund could be adversely affected.

Increase in Amount of Assets Under Management. The Early Stage Managers potentially have restrictions on their level of assets under management. It is not known what effect, if any, an increase in the amount of assets under management will have on the trading strategies utilized by the Early Stage Managers or their investment results. However, there generally appears to be a tendency for the rates of return achieved by investment managers to degrade as assets under management increase, and there can be no assurance that this will not occur in the case of Borealis or any Early Stage Manager, or that the return on the Funds' investments will be similar to that achieved by such Early Stage Managers in the past.

Investment in Non-U.S. Securities, Offshore Funds and Emerging Markets. The Early Stage Managers generally can invest, directly or indirectly, in securities of non-U.S. issuers. Non-U.S. investments—and in particular those in emerging markets—involve certain special risks, including (i) political or economic instability, (ii) the unpredictability of international trade patterns, (iii) the possibility of non-U.S. governmental actions such as expropriation, nationalization or confiscatory taxation, (iv) the imposition or modification of currency controls, (v) price volatility, (vi) the imposition of withholding taxes on dividends, interest and gains, (vii) different bankruptcy laws and practice, (viii) the fluctuation of currency exchange rates and (ix) the lack of, or different, regulations applicable to such investments as compared to U.S. investments. As compared to U.S. entities, non-U.S. entities generally disclose less financial and other information publicly, and are subject to less stringent and less uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards. Also, it is often more difficult to obtain and enforce legal judgments against non-U.S. entities than against U.S. entities.

Lack of Liquidity in Markets. Despite the heavy volume of trading in securities and futures, certain markets for instruments traded by the Primary Funds have limited liquidity and depth. Lack of liquidity could disadvantage the Primary Funds and, indirectly, the Funds, both in the realization of quoted prices and in order execution. Lack of liquidity also increases the risk that the Primary Funds that need to raise capital could be required to liquidate positions at disadvantageous prices. The risk of market illiquidity is materially heightened by the use of leverage and the possibility that margin calls will need to be met in declining or disrupted market conditions. The valuation of the Primary Funds' less liquid investments will potentially differ materially from the actual or realizable value of such investments.

Stagnant Markets. Although volatility is one indication of market risk, certain of the investment strategies employed by the Early Stage Managers could rely on market volatility contributing to the mispricings which they are designed to identify. In the event of trendless or stagnant markets and/or deflation, these strategies may have materially diminished prospects for profitability.

No Limitation on Investment Instruments. There is generally no limitation on the investment instruments in which an Early Stage Manager can invest. New investment instruments are continually developing and investments in such instruments will potentially involve material and unanticipated risks.

Structural Risks

Certain risks are inherent in the structure of the Funds.

Liquidity and Transferability of Interests. An investment in the Funds involves limited liquidity, and the Interests are not freely transferable without the prior written consent of the General Partner and compliance with applicable federal and state securities laws. There is no market for the Interests and none is expected to develop. Investors will thus likely be unable to liquidate or withdraw their investment in the event of an emergency or for any other reason, and Interests are unlikely to be readily accepted as collateral for a loan. Investors will not have the ability to withdraw capital from the Fund until the termination of each Primary Fund's Strategic Capital Commitment Period. An investment in the Funds is suitable only for sophisticated investors.

Commitment Termination Events. Borealis could potentially not provide Investors with notice of Commitment Termination Events. Borealis has the sole discretion to determine whether to make withdrawals from a Primary Fund following a Commitment Termination Event. Borealis could determine to not make such withdrawals, thereby preventing Investors from receiving a return of capital from such Primary Fund. The inability of Investors to make withdrawals following a Commitment Termination Event could lead to losses.

Investor Concentration Risk. There is no limit on the amount that an Investor or a group of related Investors can invest in the Funds. It is expected that an Investor or a group of related Investors has or will contribute a substantial percentage of the Funds' capital and such Investor or group of Investors could be in a position to control the outcome of investor votes. Such a "controlling" Investor or group of Investors generally has no fiduciary duty to other Investors and could make decisions that are not in the best interest of such other Investors. In addition, the withdrawal by such Investor or group of Investors will likely adversely impact the Funds.

Side Letters. From time to time, a Fund and Borealis enter into agreements with an Investor which have the effect of altering or supplementing the terms of the offering to the specific Investor in a manner that are more favorable than the terms applicable to other Investors. Such agreements could grant the Investor certain rights related to fees, reporting, access to co-investment opportunities, or access to investment capacity rights, as well as other matters. Any terms contained in the agreement with an Investor shall govern with respect to such Investor notwithstanding the provisions of the offering materials. Such agreements are not subject to the approval of or specific disclosure to any Investor or any other person.

Substantial Fees and Expenses. A Fund's fees and expenses include not only Borealis fees and the Funds' operating expenses, but also the compensation and fees paid to the Primary Funds, as well as pro rata share of the costs and expenses of the Primary Funds in which it invests. Due to this double layer of fees and expenses, a Fund's expenses will likely constitute a higher percentage of net assets than expenses of other investment entities which do not use a multi-manager approach. Also, Funds will generally bear their pro rata share of the costs of negotiating the Strategic Capital Investments with Early Stage Managers, which could be significant, even if an agreement is not reached.

Affiliate Transactions. To the extent permitted by law, the Funds have the ability to, from time to time, engage in transactions with affiliates. These transactions could involve actual or potential conflicts of interest.

Master-Feeder Fund Structure. The Feeder Funds invest their assets solely in their respective Master Funds (except for such assets as the General Partner determines necessary or appropriate to pay any fees, expenses or other costs related to the Funds). The master-feeder fund structure, in particular the existence of multiple investment vehicles investing in the same portfolio, presents certain unique risks to Investors. Smaller investment vehicles investing in the Master Funds could be materially affected by the actions of larger investment vehicles investing in the Master Funds. For example, if a larger investment vehicle redeems from the Master Funds, the remaining funds will likely experience higher pro rata operating expenses, thereby producing lower returns. Similarly, the Master Funds could become less diverse due to a redemption by a larger investment vehicle, resulting in increased portfolio risk. Further, the use of the master fund structure entails an additional layer of operating costs.

Cybersecurity Risk. The Funds, Borealis and their service providers are subject to operational and information security risks related to cyber-attacks. Cyber-attacks include, among other behaviors, stealing or corrupting data maintained online or digitally, denial of service attacks on websites, the unauthorized release of confidential information or various other forms of cybersecurity breaches. Cybersecurity attacks affecting the Funds and its service providers could adversely impact the Funds. For instance, cyber-attacks could interfere with the processing of Fund transactions, cause the release of private information about Investors in the Funds, impede trading, subject the Funds and Borealis to regulatory fines or financial losses, and cause reputational damage. Similar types of cybersecurity risks are also typically present for issuers of securities in which the Funds invest, which could result in material adverse consequences for such issues and cause the Funds' investment in such issuers to lose value.

Technology Risk. Borealis uses various technologies in managing the Funds, consistent with its investment objective and strategy described in this Memorandum. For example, proprietary and third-party data and systems are utilized to support decision making for the Funds. Data imprecision, software or other technology malfunctions, programming inaccuracies and similar circumstances could impair the performance of these systems, which could negatively affect Fund performance.

Pandemic Risks. An outbreak of disease or similar public health threat, or fear of such an event could have a material adverse impact on the performance of client accounts. In addition, outbreaks of disease could result in increased government restrictions and regulation, including quarantines, which could adversely affect the Fund's operations. Any extended period of global supply chain and economic disruption could materially affect the performance of client accounts, results of operations, access to sources of liquidity and financial condition.

Force Majeure. Global markets are interconnected, and events like hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, forest fires and similar natural disturbances, war, terrorism or threats of terrorism, civil disorder, public health crises, and similar "Act of God" events have led, and may in the future lead, to increased short-term market volatility and may have adverse long-term and wide-spread effects on world economies and markets generally. Clients may have exposure to countries and markets impacted by such events, which could result in material losses.

The foregoing list of risk factors does not purport to be a complete explanation of the risks involved in investing in the Funds. Prospective investors should read the applicable Memorandum and Partnership Agreement before determining whether to purchase Interests, in addition to consulting with their own financial and tax advisers. Prospective investors should also be aware that, if they decide to purchase Interests, they will have no role in the management of the Funds and will be required to rely on the expertise of the Borealis and the General Partner in dealing with the foregoing (and other) risks on a day-to-day basis.

Item 9 - Disciplinary Information

There are no legal or disciplinary events to report.

Item 10 - Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

Neither Borealis nor any of our management persons are registered or applying to register as broker-dealers or representatives of any broker-dealer.

Neither Borealis nor any of our management persons are registered or applying to register as futures commissions merchants, commodity pool operators, commodity trading advisors, or associated persons of the foregoing entities. To the extent a Fund trades or is deemed to trade in commodity interests, Borealis will maintain certain exemptions from registration with the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission as a commodity pool operator or commodity trading adviser, as applicable, with respect to Borealis or such Fund.

An affiliate of Borealis serves as general partner to the Funds. Borealis does not have any arrangements with a related person who is a broker-dealer, securities dealer, government securities dealer or broker, investment company or other pooled investment vehicle, investment adviser, financial planning firm, banking or thrift institution, accountant or accounting firm, lawyer or law firm, insurance company or agency, pension consultant, real estate broker or dealer, or an entity that creates or packages limited partnerships that are material to its advisory services.

Principals, employees and affiliates of Borealis hold investments in the Funds. The fact that affiliates of Borealis have pecuniary interests in Funds creates a potential conflict in that it could cause Borealis to make different investment decisions than if such related parties did not have such interests.

Borealis does not have any formal arrangements or agreements to recommend or select other investment advisers for the Funds or Investors. To the extent an Investor makes an investment in a Primary Fund directly (not through Borealis or the Funds), Borealis will not directly receive compensation for such investments in a Primary Fund but will generally receive indirect compensation through the Strategic Capital Return Share on any applicable Strategic Capital Return from the Funds' investments in the Primary Fund.

Certain Borealis personnel are involved in other outside business activities, including board positions for institutions and charities. Such Borealis personnel have a conflict of interest in allocating their time and activity between the Funds, Borealis, and other businesses with which they are associated. Borealis maintains policies and procedures designed to manage and monitor the conflicts of interests presented to Borealis and its clients by these activities.

Item 11 - Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

We have adopted a Code of Ethics that reflects our commitment to conducting our business in accordance with all applicable laws and regulations and in an ethical and professional manner. In addition, we recognize that we have a fiduciary duty to the Funds and other accounts we manage, and that all of our employees must conduct their business on our behalf in a manner that enables us to fulfill this fiduciary duty. In this regard, we have developed policies and procedures in our Code of Ethics that are premised on fundamental principles of openness, integrity, honesty and trust. In addition, among other things, our Code of Ethics governs personal investment transactions by our employees, our policies with respect to gifts and entertainment, compliance with applicable federal securities laws, the manner in which violations of our Code of Ethics are to be reported, and certain other outside activities of our employees. With certain limited exclusions, personal securities transactions by employees require the pre-approval of the Chief Compliance Officer. We will provide a copy of our Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

Borealis will occasionally introduce Investors to Primary Funds or Early Stage Managers but receives no direct or indirect compensation (aside from the Strategic Capital Return Share on the Strategic Capital Return from the Funds' investments in Primary Funds) for such recommendations. Further, Borealis generally receives Strategic Capital Return Share on the Strategic Capital Return from the Fund's investments in Primary Funds as a result of an Investor's use of the negotiated investment capacity rights. Additionally, Borealis, its employees, officers, and directors will invest in the Funds as limited partners alongside non-Borealis Parties, such as outside investors. While Borealis' clients are the Funds rather than the Investors, Borealis will nonetheless act in the best interests of Investors, as their interests align with certain Borealis employees, officers, and directors, who are also invested in the Funds as Investors.

Borealis is subject to significant conflicts of interest resulting from negotiating both the terms of the Strategic Capital Return and the terms of the investment in the Primary Funds. Borealis will negotiate with each Early Stage Manager the investment terms of the Strategic Capital Investment (including size of the investment, management and incentive fees payable, length of the lock-up period, capacity rights among other terms). Simultaneously, Borealis will also negotiate the terms of the Strategic Capital Return (including the duration and amount of this profit-sharing agreement). Since Borealis is entitled to receive performance-based compensation in the form of the Strategic Capital Return Share solely on the Strategic Capital Return, Borealis may be incentivized to accept less advantageous investment terms in the Primary Funds in order to obtain better terms with respect to the Strategic Capital Return. Similarly, since the Strategic Capital Return is derived from the management and performance fees of the Primary Funds, Borealis may be incentivized to negotiate investment terms that are favorable to the growth of assets in the Primary Funds. The investment terms and Strategic Capital Return are negotiated solely at the discretion of Borealis. The investors do not have the right and are not engaged to review or approve these terms.

From time to time, Borealis will recommend that the Funds purchase or sell an investment that is being sold or purchased, respectively, at the same time by Borealis, an affiliate, or another client. Borealis and its employees, officers and directors will occasionally invest in some of the Primary Funds or related investments in which the Funds will invest in the future, and these investments are often purchased, sold or liquidated independently of the Funds' investments. Such investments could influence Borealis' allocation of Fund capital among Primary Funds and its decision to maintain, increase or withdraw assets from any particular Primary Fund to the possible detriment of the Funds.

Item 12 - Brokerage Practices

Investments that Borealis makes for the Funds are principally investments in privately offered hedge funds. As such, we do not anticipate performing direct trading or participating in soft dollar benefits. However, if we were to place trades directly, we will seek to obtain best execution for the Funds and will generally take into account factors including, but not limited to, the following: price quotes; difficulty of execution; the extent to which the counterparty makes a market in the security involved or has access to such markets; the counterparty's skill in positioning the securities involved; the counterparty's promptness of execution; the counterparty's reputation for diligence, fairness, and integrity; and any other factors deemed appropriate by Borealis. Borealis does not maintain soft dollar accounts and does not anticipate doing so at this time.

While Borealis provides investment advisory services to multiple clients, we do not anticipate aggregating the purchase or sale of securities. Should Borealis pursue a soft dollar arrangement, it will only use soft dollars to purchase research and items related to research pursuant to Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1933. If Borealis begins to utilize soft dollars, its Chief Compliance Officer and Managing Partner will review soft dollar mark-ups and the value of services received by Borealis to determine whether or not commission mark-ups paid in connection with soft dollars are commensurate with the value of the services received.

Item 13 - Review of Accounts

Borealis' Managing Partner is primarily responsible for ensuring that the securities or financial instruments held by the Funds are consistent with the disclosures set forth in the relevant offering documents. The Managing Partner, or a member of the investment team, will periodically review the Funds' portfolio holdings to determine whether the securities held remain consistent with the applicable offering documents. The Managing Partner is often assisted by the investment team or another designee with these efforts. The Managing Partner will consider any restrictions that are relevant. On a periodic basis, Borealis' Chief Compliance Officer will review the general ledgers of the Funds to ensure that expenses have been allocated in a fair and equitable manner, consistent with the guidelines provided in the relevant governing documents.

During the Strategic Capital Commitment Period, Borealis will periodically meet with Early Stage Managers to review and discuss the performance of their respective Primary Funds. In addition, Borealis will review the Funds' Net Asset Value and Portfolio Performance on no less than a quarterly basis.

Each Project Agreement Borealis enters with Primary Funds on behalf of the Funds will contain clauses creating early termination triggers, such as percentage drawdowns over a period of time or disqualifying disciplinary events. Borealis will monitor for the occurrence of such conditions as it deems necessary at its sole discretion.

We generally provide each Investor with, or with access to, monthly Capital Account statements with respect to their investment in the Main Funds and quarterly Capital Account Statements with respect to their investment in the Co-Investment Master Fund or Co-Investment Feeder Fund, and often, at our discretion, provide periodic (generally quarterly) written reports indicating the results of operations, commentary regarding the Primary Funds and other matters concerning the applicable Fund's operations as the General Partner deems advisable.

Borealis or the Funds may offer certain Investors additional information and reports that other investors may not receive.

On an annual basis, Investors will receive a copy of the relevant Fund's annual report audited by an independent public accounting firm selected by the General Partner, and, where applicable, tax information. In certain circumstances, Borealis will offer oral intra-period estimated performance, monthly estimated performance, and other Fund information to Investors, upon request.

Item 14 - Client Referrals and Other Compensation

Borealis does not receive any economic benefits from non-client parties for providing investment advice to the Funds.

Borealis does not currently, but may elect to in the future, engage selling agents to offer and sell interests in the Funds. Such selling agents will likely be paid a sales commission out of the Strategic Capital Return Share or the Management Fee made or paid to the General Partner and Borealis, respectively, or an asset-based "distribution fee" charged to Investors introduced by such selling agents. Depending on the type of sales commissions paid, such commissions will potentially increase the aggregate expenses of any person investing in the Funds; provided however, that Investors will be informed of any asset-based fees applicable to them prior to their investing in the Funds.

Item 15 - Custody

Borealis is deemed to have custody of the Funds. Except with respect to certain uncertificated securities, Borealis maintains the assets of the Funds in accounts with one or more "qualified custodians" pursuant to Rule 206(4)-2 under the Advisers Act. Borealis takes responsibility for ensuring that the Funds are audited each year by an independent public accountant that is both registered with and subject to regular inspection by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. All reports of the annual audits are made available to each Investor upon issuance within 180 days of the end of each fiscal year, absent an applicable exemption from such delivery.

Item 16 - Investment Discretion

Borealis has discretionary authority over the Funds pursuant to the Funds' investment advisory agreements. Investors generally may not place any limits on our authority beyond the limitations set forth in the Funds' offering and governing documents.

Item 17 - Voting Client Securities

In general, Borealis' investment activities relate to creating portfolios of hedge funds and do not involve directly investing or trading in equity securities. Thus, the exercise of proxy voting rights typically involves only limited partner, shareholder, or investor votes with regard to hedge fund organizational or governance issues. We have adopted a policy for exercising proxy voting rights as required under Rule 206(4)-6 of the Advisers Act. Our proxy voting policy is reasonably designed to ensure that we vote proxies, if any, in the best interests of the applicable Fund, and in a prudent manner intended to enhance the economic value of the securities. In general, neither the Funds nor Investors are able to direct proxy votes in a particular direction.

Our Chief Compliance Officer is responsible for resolving any material conflicts of interest related to proxy voting. Our employees are required to disclose any ownership interest in an underlying private fund or outside activities that could result in a conflict. Any employee with knowledge of a potential conflict of interest relating to a particular proposal must disclose that potential conflict to the Chief Compliance Officer and remove himself or herself from the proxy voting process.

Upon the request of a client, we will disclose to such client how we voted securities owned by such client. Clients can contact us via e-mail or telephone to request a copy of our proxy voting policies and procedures or to inquire about the way in which a proxy was voted.

Item 18 - Financial Information

Borealis is not aware of any financial condition reasonably likely to impair our ability to meet contractual commitments to the Funds.
