Material Changes

Annual Update

MH & Associates is providing this information as part of our annual updating amendment which contains material changes for our last annual update. This section discusses only material changes since the last annual update which most recently occurred on May 31, 2015.

Material Changes Since the Last Update

The Securities and Exchange Commission adopted amendments to Part 2 of Form ADV effective October 2010. The newly revised Part 2 consists of Part 2A (the “Brochure”) and Part 2B (the “Brochure Supplement”). Each update of the Brochure must now include a summary of all material changes since the last annual update.

- Code of Ethics (Personal Trading): Section 4: Reporting
 - ⊖ “For purposes of this section the reports indicated below are to be submitted to the Chief Compliance Officer or the Co-Compliance Officer. ~~The Chief Compliance officer will submit its reporting to the Co-compliance Officer or the Chief Executive Officer.”~~
 - Previously, it was stated that reports were submitted to just the Chief Compliance Officer. In order to be more specific we felt that we should notate that reports are also submitted to the Co-Compliance Officer. Particularly in the case of personal transactions reports for the Chief Compliance Officer who would need to submit to the Co-Compliance Officer. The second sentence was removed as it seemed redundant and there was never a need to submit to the Chief Executive Officer.

Advisory Business

Firm Description

MH & Associates (“the firm”) is a registered investments advisor with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Firm was incorporated in June 1981. MH & Associates is an independent firm with no outside corporate ties or affiliations. Registration of an investment advisor does not imply any level of skill or training.

Principal Owners

J. Robert Meichelbock and John Z. Heilman are the principal owners of MH & Associates. J. Robert is the Chairman and Co-Chief Investment Officer and John Heilman is the President and Co-Chief Investment Officer.

Types of Advisory Services

MH & Associates Securities Management Corporation primarily provides investment management services using a “balanced” investment style/approach. This balanced approach utilizes various investment vehicles including equities, fixed income securities and mutual funds.

In its full discretionary relationships the firm provides the following investment management services:

- Continuous asset allocation between equities, convertible securities, long term securities, short-term debt securities and cash equivalents.
- Supervision and review of all securities held in client’s account.
- Determination of which securities should be held, purchased and sold and execution of transactions.
- Periodic reports and, as agreed to by client, meetings to explain and review investment policy and strategy and performance results.

Tailored Relationships

The firm also provides the same services, as described above, that are not full discretionary. Due to different investment objectives, investment time horizon or risk tolerances of a client, the client can request that the account, within the framework of a balanced investment style, have different investment orientation, i.e. higher income orientation or higher equity exposure.

Client Assets

As of the time of producing this brochure (May 31, 2017), MH & Associates managed $115 million of client assets, all on a discretionary basis.

Fees and Compensation

Description

MH & Associates is compensated for our advisory services by fees received by our clients. The basic fees for discretionary investment management services are generally based on a percentage of market value of the assets as listed in the next section.

Fee Schedule

Account Size	Annual Rate
First $3,000,000	1.0% Per Annum
Next $3,000,000	0.8% Per Annum
Next $4,000,000	0.6% Per Annum
Over $10,000,000	0.5% Per Annum

The fee can, in some cases, be higher in taxable accounts depending on the tax planning and monitoring the firm does. Occasionally, the firm has reduced its fees to non-profit organizations and/or in competitive situations. Prior to 08/1/2008, the firm operated under a different fee structure.

Fee Billing

Fees are calculated at the end of each quarter and are based on the market value of assets on the last business day of each quarter. One fourth (1/4) of the annual fee is payable at the time of each computation. Upon client approval and dependent on the custodian having the technology, the firm will charge the client's account directly for fees due on a quarterly basis. Under this direct charge method, the invoice(s) will be submitted to the custodian three business days after the firm's statement and invoice are sent via mail.

Contract termination procedures and conditions are that either party be given written notice of termination. In the events of termination during a quarterly billing period, the amount of the final fee payable shall be prorated as of the date of termination. The client has the right to terminate the contract, without penalty or cost, within five (5) business days after entering the contract.

Other Fees

The firm utilizes, in certain circumstances, mutual funds and/or Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) in its investment management services and the client will indirectly incur additional investment management fees and other expenses that are charged by the mutual fund and/or ETF. The circumstances in which mutual funds and/or ETFs are typically used are:

- (1) To achieve a broader diversification in a specialized industry or group
- (2) To achieve investment diversification in a specific country or region
- (3) Closed-end funds that are selling at a discount to its net asset value.

Additional Compensation

MH & Associates receives no compensation other than that of its primary business as laid out above.

Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

MH & Associates receives no performance-based fees or engages in side-by-side management.

Types of Clients

Description

MH & Associates clients include:

- Individuals
- High Net Worth Individuals
- Charitable Organizations

Account Minimums

As a general rule the firm requires a minimum of $300,000 to establish an investment advisory account. In certain circumstances the firm will consider establishing an account with less than $300,000 due to expected additional cash flow or a pre-existing client relationship.

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

Methods of Analysis

MH & Associates investment philosophy is to search for fundamentally sound investments with potential for long term growth. The firm determines buy and sell recommendations individually based on the conditions of the issuer, industry sector, and market conditions.

The firm relies on information from a wide range of sources, the Wall Street Journal, Barron's, brokerage research reports, a company's annual and quarterly reports and public information and information on sites such as Bloomberg. We may also speak with members of management teams of companies we wish to consider for investment.

Approach to Equity Investments:

When determining the merits of an equity security, MH & Associates uses a variety of financial analysis techniques and quantitative methods to arrive at a given investment decision. Below is a list of common ways we may evaluate potential equity investments:

- Balance sheet analysis
- Income statement analysis
- Cash flow analysis
- Ratio analysis
- Common size financial statements
- Comparative relative multiple analysis
- Dividend discount analysis
- Technical analysis
- Statistical analysis

These techniques and methods can indicate important characteristics of the security including financial strength and flexibility, operational performance, earnings and growth potential, relative and intrinsic value, buy and sell points, volatility, correlation with other portfolio assets, and other recognized means of security evaluation. Furthermore, consideration of other variables such as technological innovation, new product or service launches, economies of scale, and changes in market power may play a significant role in the decision making process.

Approach to Fixed Income Investments:

MH & Associates uses fixed income securities to add stability and income to our client portfolios.

When the firm evaluates fixed income securities it considers the broad economic environment, including factors such a current and expected future interest rates, GDP growth, and inflation expectations. Additionally, the attributes of a potential fixed income security such as credit quality, duration, payment structure and maturity are factored in the analysis to determine if the yield or total return is reasonable given the broad economic environment.

Common fixed income securities that the firm may invest in are investment grade corporate bonds, high yield bonds, U.S. government securities, mortgage linked securities, foreign government securities, floating rate bonds, preferred and convertible preferred securities.

The firm typically uses discounted closed end mutual funds, open ended mutual funds, along with exchange traded funds when making fixed income investments due to liquidity and diversification concerns of holding individual names. However, the firm has and will select individual names when appropriate.

We make investment decisions within the context of the overall domestic and/or global economy as well as the condition of the financial markets. Macroeconomic indicators, political events and geopolitical situations are closely monitored as these factors often can have dramatic effects on the economy and financial markets. However, the ultimate decision about an investment lies in the strength and merit of its unique characteristics, determining whether it is acquired for client portfolios and in what quantity it is maintained therein.

When deciding to sell securities, the firm uses many of the same criteria discussed above. We often sell when, in our judgment the price of a given security has risen to meet our target, or exceeded our estimate of its fair value. We also may sell a security when either economic conditions underlying our original decision change, or changes in the security itself differ from our original assumptions.

Investment Strategies

MH & Associates Securities Management Corporation primarily provides investment management services using a “balanced/tactical” investment approach. This approach utilizes various equity and fixed income securities. The firm does not have any formal guidelines as to minimum or maximum commitment levels to either equities or fixed income securities. Commitments to these asset classes have historically varied widely.

In its full discretionary relationships the firm provides the following investment management services: (a) continuous asset allocation between equities, convertible securities, long term securities, short-term debt securities and cash equivalents, (b) supervision and review of all securities held in client’s account, (c) determination of which securities should be help, purchased and sold and execution of transactions, (d) periodic reports, as agreed to by client, meetings with client to explain and review investment policy and strategy and performance results.

The firm also provides the same services, as described above, that are not full discretionary. Due to different investment objectives, investment time horizon or risk tolerances of a client, the client can request that the account, within the framework of a balanced investment style, have different investment orientation, i.e. higher income orientation or have greater exposure to growth investments.

Additionally, on a selected “case-by-case” basis the firm will provide(s) investment management services using an investment style other than the balanced approach i.e. equity investment management.

Risk of Loss

Investing in securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. The firm controls risk of loss primarily through diversification within its balanced investment style.

Decision & Review Process

The principals of the firm, J. Robert Meichelbock and John Heilman, along with the associate portfolio managers, Daniel Meichelbock and Andrew Heilman, make all investment decisions jointly. The principals and associates conduct the investment reviews.

The principals conduct informal meetings to exchange views, to analyze one another’s investment ideas, and agree upon transactions. The principals are aware at all times of the timing of client transactions. Investments are reviewed on a continuous basis. In the review process the account is assessed to insure that the “asset mix” is consistent with the current strategy as well as client objectives.

Investment Limitations

MH & Associates has discretion to determine, without client consent, the type and quantity of securities to be purchased or sold for a client’s account. Limitations, if any, are typically conveyed, orally or written, by the client in the form of investment guidelines. Also, the firm, as an internal policy, has a limitation as to the maximum commitment to any one security (other than mutual Funds and U.S. government securities) of 5%, at cost, of the account value.

However, the firm already has in-place a procedure whereas monthly transaction reports are submitted under its Policy & Procedure relative to Personal Transactions. Thus, this requirement is satisfied through that procedure.*

Brokerage Practices

Selecting Brokerage Firms and Best Execution

MH & Associates, as a fiduciary to our advisory clients, endeavors to seek best execution for client transactions, i.e., seeking to obtain not necessarily the lowest commission cost but the best overall qualitative execution.

In evaluating brokerage firms, the firm seeks to obtain the best results for its clients, taking into consideration such factors as commission rates, reliability, and financial responsibility. When more than one brokerage firm is believed to meet these criteria, preference may be given to brokers who provide research services or are more responsive to the firm. To ensure that the clients are receiving the best execution, a formal review has been instituted and will be conducted periodically to evaluate broker-dealers that are currently being used as well as an evaluation of services available by other broker-dealers.

The firm's role in the selection of a broker-dealer used to effect security transactions varies. Due to commission savings that are offered, the firm suggests that client's maintain or establish a custodial relationship with a discount brokerage firm. The vast majority of the firm's accounts have custody relationships with discount brokerage firms and all transactions for these accounts are placed with the client's corresponding discount brokerage firm.

The Compliance Officer and/or other personnel of the firm will periodically review its best execution procedures. This review will be documented.

Research and Soft Dollars

MH & Associates does not currently earn commission based soft dollars from a broker-dealer and has no plans to initiate such an arrangement in the near future. However, the firm does utilize research related services obtained from a broker-dealer on a soft dollar commission basis based on accumulated soft dollars from prior years until such monies are exhausted.

Research Services

In the past the firm might have paid a broker a commission in excess of that which another broker might have charged for effecting the same transaction in recognition of the value of research provided by the brokerage firm. The following research products and services are received: payment of fees for economic and technical publications, periodicals, and investment newsletters.

If the firm receives products or services that have a "mixed use" (research and non-research purposes) the firm will reasonably allocate, in good faith, the cost among research and non-research use.

Approval

The compliance officer shall approve all research services obtained from broker-dealers on a soft-dollar commission basis.

Directed Brokerage

MH & Associates does accept accounts whereby the client has directed the firm to place security transactions through a particular broker-dealer.

Client Directed Broker-Dealer (Non-Consultant Relationship)

Absent a preference by the client, and due to significant commission savings that are offered, the firm does suggest that clients establish a custodial relationship with a discount brokerage firm. Some research services are made available to the firm, but these are not the result of a soft dollar arrangement.

Client Directed Broker-Dealer (Consultant Relationship)

The firm accepts accounts whereby the client has directed the firm to place security transactions through a particular broker-dealer due to the broker-dealer acting as a consultant. These accounts are typically as a result of a particular broker acting as a consultant in conducting a competitive search for, and monitoring, an investment manager on behalf of a client. The client directs that the brokerage transactions go to the particular broker who conducted the search and who is providing consulting/monitoring services for the account. In these types of relationships, the commission structure is typically negotiated and agreed to by the client and the broker. Accordingly, the firm does not negotiate commissions on behalf of the client.

In these situations, the firm will advise the client (Form ADV and Investment Management Agreement) of the following: the effect of a client directing brokerage to a particular broker dealer will remove the firm's ability to negotiate brokerage commissions and its ability to obtain volume discounts or best execution for the client resulting in disparities in commission charges among clients. Also, the client is advised of the potential conflict of interest could exist from the client's interest in obtaining best execution and the firm's interest in being included in future competitive searches by the broker.

Trading Practices

MH & Associates policy is to prohibit unfair trading practices. In order to ensure that trading in clients' accounts is fair and equitable, the firm has established certain procedures relative to trading securities for the clients account and in dealing with trading errors.

Trading (Order Memoranda)

Prior to initiating trading activity for all its clients accounts an Order Memoranda or similar document is prepared showing the security to be traded. This document will also show, by client, the number of shares to be traded and at what price the execution occurred. The Order Memoranda is only prepared when the firm is trading for all/or significant number of its client accounts. Prior to initiating trading, a portfolio analyst shall review the document for items such as, but not limited to: suitability, cash position, and cash flow expectations. The document will indicate who approved and executed the trade.

Trade Allocation

Allocating trades among clients shall be fair and equitable. In allocating trades, MH & Associates will not disproportionately favor certain client accounts over other client accounts. The firm will seek to allocate the full transactions equitably whenever concurrent decisions are made to purchase or sell securities of the accounts managed by the firm.

In the event the firm achieves a partial completion of its block trade the allocation shall be, in most cases, on a proportionate basis. In certain circumstances, a client might receive an allocation that is not proportionate. Factors that are considered which might lead to a disproportionate allocations are: Existing cash position and anticipated cash flow, possible excessive commission cost, investment objectives of the account, the relative size of the portfolio holdings of the same or comparable securities, and size of investment commitments generally held.

Trade Aggregation

In general, when client accounts are concentrated with one particular custodian or broker-dealer, the firm will aggregate the orders for its clients within that custodian or broker-dealer and will “block” trade to take advantage of certain administrative and cost benefits. In some cases, this procedure could have an adverse effect on the price and amounts of securities purchased or sold by clients domiciled in one particular custodian or broker-dealer over another depending upon the size and breadth of the market for each security. In order to be fair and not disfavor clients that are domiciled with a particular custodian or broker-dealer, the firm does have a policy of systematically rotating, between the various custodians and broker-dealers, the order in which block trading is initialized. Allocating cost in block trading shall be based upon average price.

Upon completion of trading, Compliance Officer and/or Co-Compliance Officer will review the “Order Memoranda” to insure that the firm’s client accounts are being dealt with fairly and equitably.

The firm does not aggregate orders on behalf of any other proprietary accounts of the firm, its employees and principals.

Trading (Daily Transaction Sheet)

For a variety of reasons, situations arise where the firm is only trading for selected accounts. In those circumstances a Daily Transaction Sheet document is prepared. This document will show all relevant information, including account, action taken, quantity, security traded, limit price, execution price and time of trade.

Upon completion of trading, Compliance Officer will review the “Daily Transaction Sheet” to insure that the firm’s client accounts are being dealt with fairly and equitably.

Trade Errors

The client shall not be disadvantaged due to any trading error. The client shall be reimbursed and shall be “made whole” in the event of a trading error. Any trading errors are to be reported to the Compliance Officer by the person executing the trade. A file shall be maintained documenting the correction of trading errors.

Review of Accounts

Account Review

Accounts are reviewed on a continuous basis. In the review process the account is assessed to insure that it is being managed in a way that is consistent with the current strategy as well as client objectives.

The principals of the firm, J. Robert Meichelbock and John Heilman, conduct all reviews with assistance from the firms' associate portfolio managers. The principals, who are also portfolio managers, make investment decisions jointly.

The portfolio manager and its associates conduct informal meetings to exchange views, to analyze one another's investment ideas, and agree upon transactions. The principals are aware at all times of the timing of client transactions

Periodic Client Reviews

The firm will obtain and maintain supporting client documentation in regard to the current financial status of the client. The firm's portfolio managers, or financial analysts, will be responsible for initiating a discussion in this regard at least once during the calendar year, either in person, telephonically, or electronically. The outcome of these discussions shall be recorded on a memorandum to be stored in the correspondence file of each client. The goal of this policy is to ascertain whether the clients' financial status or investment objectives have materially changed.

Regular Reports

Clients are provided with quarterly reports showing the holdings in their accounts, their performance for various periods (quarter, year-to-date, and since inception) and their quarterly management fee invoice. Also included in these reports is a newsletter discussing the firms economic and investment outlook. The custodian provides monthly holdings and transaction statements to the client. The firm confirms, no less than annually, that the client is receiving these statements from the custodian.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

MH & Associates does not have any agreements in place where it is paid cash or receives economic benefit from a non-client in connection with giving advice to clients.

Custody

The firm requires that all clients have a third party custodial relationship (i.e. bank or broker-dealer) to domicile the assets the firm manages. The firm has the authority to establish and maintain a broker-dealer or other financial institutional account once the client selects which broker-dealer or entity to utilize as a custodian. The firm is willing and prepared to deal with any type of custodial relationship.

Safeguarding of Client Assets

In order to ensure the safeguarding of client assets the firm has the following policies and procedures:

- 1) The firm will not take physical possession of clients' cash or securities and will disclose as such in the firms Investment Management Agreement.
- 2) The firm requires the client domicile the assets in a "qualified" custodian to handle client funds and securities.
- 3) It is further noted that, in most "qualified" custodial relationships a limited power of attorney (LPOA) is utilized. The firms powers under a typical LPOA is limited to the following:
 - a. Trading
 - b. Requesting distributions/withdrawal of funds to client.
 - c. Charging the client account for investment management fees only by client consent.
- 4) It is noted that the firm does, in many instances, have the ability to directly charge the clients account for its investment management charges. Before a fee is charged, the client will be provided with an invoice that will show the basis of the charge. The fee will be charged three (3) business days after the invoice is mailed.

Investment Discretion

MH & Associates has discretion to determine, without client consent, the type and quantity of securities to be purchased or sold for a client's account. We assume authority over the account after the client has signed an Investment Management Agreement. Limitations, if any, are typically conveyed, orally or written, by the client in the form of investment guidelines. Examples of such limitations can include restrictions on certain securities. Also, the firm, as an internal policy, has a limitation as to the maximum commitment to any one security (other than mutual funds and U.S. Government securities) of 5%, at cost, of the account value.

Voting Client Securities

Proxy Voting

MH & Associates, as a matter of policy, disclaims proxy-voting authority with regard to client securities. That authority is to be retained by the client.

Advising Clients

In situations where no material conflict of interest exists, MH & Associates will provide, if requested by the client, advice concerning their proxy votes. MH & Associates will maintain a record of those clients that have requested assistance. The record will show the name of the client, date inquired, the nature of the question/advice sought by the client and the response/advice given the client by MH & Associates.

Disclosure

MH & Associates discloses to all potential new clients of the firms Proxy Voting policy via Form ADV Part 2 Brochure, which is included in the firms' promotional packet. In addition, a statement relative to the firms Proxy voting policy will be included in the Investment Management Agreement.
