The Adviser's clients will generally use Excel Securities. The Adviser strongly recommends this because they are the broker dealer through which the Adviser executes transactions; allocating positions on an average price and performance reporting are all consistent for its clients. Clients choosing this broker dealer will typically instruct the firm to direct portfolio transactions through Excel at a rate agreed to between the parties, or as set forth in a wrap fee arrangement.

Clients are free to choose or change broker dealers, provided that the chosen broker dealer can provide adequate services as determined by the Adviser. In the event such brokerage cannot provide such services, to be determined by Adviser, Adviser may be unable to accept management of the portfolio. A client choosing another broker dealer to direct brokerage transactions is responsible for negotiating fees or commissions with that broker dealer, unless Adviser has a wrap fee arrangement with such broker dealer. The client is responsible to independently determine whether the commissions charged or execution effected is done at rates or prices that are better than could be obtained had Adviser directed the trade. In such circumstances, the client will receive trade confirmations directly from the designated broker (or its clearing firm) and pay brokerage commissions in accordance with the designated broker's schedule of rates or whatever arrangement the client has negotiated.

The Adviser does not engage in cross trading, principal trading or in accepting soft dollar arrangements including research.

The Adviser may enter into an arrangement from time to time and with clients whereby the Adviser agrees to reduce client fees when clients refer other clients to the Adviser. The advisory fee charged to the client is not affected by the use of a third party in connection with the client's account(s), and the client will not be assessed any additional fees for the use of such services by the Adviser. If the services of a third party are used in connection with the client's account, the structure of the arrangement and the compensation paid to the third party will be fully disclosed to the client pursuant to Rule 206(4) of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 and all subsequent amendments thereto.
