Item 4: Advisory Business

A. The Firm and its Owners.

Circle Wealth Management, LLC (“CWM”), was formed in December 2006, and registered as an investment adviser with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission on April 24, 2007. SEC registration does not imply a certain level of skill or training. CWM’s principal owner is Maria L. Kattan-Chrin.

B. The Firm’s Services.

CWM provides customized wealth advisory and investment management services to a select group of high net worth individuals, families, trusts, and non-profit organizations. For its services, CWM charges an annual advisory fee consistent with the terms of the applicable advisory agreement between CWM and the client. The fee is based on a percentage of the market value of the assets being managed by CWM, and in some cases, may be a flat fee.

- Discretionary Wealth Advisory Services: offer a collaborative and comprehensive approach to providing financial planning, investment management, and financial education to clients. These services are provided to clients who engage CWM to manage and oversee all/most of their investable assets. In a discretionary relationship, CWM makes and effectuates investment decisions on behalf of the client based on an agreed upon Investment Policy Statement.
- Non-Discretionary Wealth Advisory Services: offer a collaborative and comprehensive approach to providing financial planning, investment management, and financial education to clients. These services are provided to clients who engage CWM to manage and oversee all/most of their investable assets. In non-discretionary relationship, CWM makes recommendations and the client makes her/his own decisions.
- Investment Management Services: offer access to CWM managed portfolios. These services are offered on a discretionary basis.
- Non-Discretionary Consulting Services: offer consulting services relative to specific investment assets.

CWM spends considerable time getting to know each client at the beginning of the relationship and on an ongoing basis. Through a series of discussions in which goals, objectives, constraints, preferences, and tax status are established, CWM, in conjunction with the client and their other advisors, ascertains the client’s financial situation, investment philosophy, and risk tolerance. Using this information, CWM will prepare and propose a customized plan which consists of an allocation across client goals (including liquidity, income, and growth) and the corresponding allocation among asset classes, based on CWM’s asset class and market views. Client will review the plan with CWM and, with respect to discretionary clients confirm approval by signing an Investment Policy Statement (IPS) which summarizes the plan. The IPS is reviewed annually and updated to reflect changes in client's objectives and/or financial situation.

- CWM provides investment advice with respect to various asset classes and investment vehicles which can be used in the implementation of the client's IPS.
- Asset Classes include: cash and cash equivalents, public equity, private equity, fixed income, credit, and real assets.
- Vehicles include: equity securities (such as exchange-listed, securities traded over-the-counter, preferred, and foreign issuers), debt securities (municipals, United States Governments and Agencies, corporate and sovereign), options, exchange traded funds, mutual fund shares, separate account managers, hedge funds, fund of funds, private equity partnerships, and structured notes.
- Although CWM's investment advice is typically limited to the investment categories noted above, CWM may provide advice with respect to other investment opportunities or client requests where CWM determines that its involvement would be helpful to the client.

Independent Managers. As referenced above, based on each client's goals and risk tolerance, CWM will recommend that a client allocates, or if CWM is serving on a discretionary basis, CWM will allocate, all or a portion of a client's assets to and/or among a select group of investments, which may include but are not limited to, separately managed accounts, exchange traded funds, individually selected equities and preferred stocks, mutual funds, hedge funds, options, private equity partnerships, and fund of funds.

As part of its investment due diligence process, CWM screens, selects, and monitors a broad universe of independent managers on an ongoing basis. CWM's due diligence process is extensive and consists of multiple steps through which the CWM investment team analyzes and assesses a number of important factors related to each Investment Manager as part of the selection and monitoring processes.

These factors include but are not limited to:

Firm: history, culture, structure, reputation, code of ethics, financial strength, privacy policies/procedures, risk management

Management Team: personal and professional backgrounds, team composition and structure, investment style and biases, compensation

Investment Philosophy and Process: investment selection criteria and process, selling discipline, pricing policy, asset types, liquidity requirements/constraints

Performance Track Record: length of track record, absolute and after-tax performance, attribution of performance

Custodial and Prime Broker Relationships: number of relationships, custody of client assets, trading and trade allocation processes, risk management, operational procedures

Fund Administration/Reporting: frequency, transparency

CWM generally has the authority to determine the broker-dealer/custodian to be used by designated Independent Managers, who invest on behalf of CWM's clients, through separately managed discretionary accounts. CWM will typically make that selection based on how best to access the manager at the lowest fee but may also select a broker-dealer/custodian based on a client request/preference. The investment management fees charged by the designated Independent Manager(s), together with the fees charged by the corresponding designated broker-dealer/custodian of the client's assets, are exclusive of, and in addition to, CWM's ongoing investment advisory fee.

C. Miscellaneous Information About the Firm's Services.

In connection with the provision of CWM's wealth advisory services:

- (1) CWM manages client's assets after client, in discussions with CWM, determines the appropriateness of CWM's services in the context of their overall financial situation and objectives.
- (2) CWM tailors its advisory services to the client's individual needs and goals. The CWM team will analyze the clients' existing investments in order to determine which should be held or sold and will create an asset allocation and implementation plan for each client. The client's investment objectives and goals-based asset allocation will be summarized in the client's Investment Policy Statement (IPS). The IPS will be reviewed and approved by the client in writing. When CWM's services are provided on a non-discretionary wealth advisory or consulting basis, the client retains the decision-making power over asset allocation, investment selection, and portfolio implementation and is free to accept or reject any recommendation from CWM. In non-discretionary relationships, CWM does not require an IPS.
- (3) Clients may impose reasonable restrictions on CWM, which may include restrictions on investing in certain securities, types of securities, and/or types of independent managers. These restrictions are noted in the client's IPS. Clients may change/amend those limitations, in writing, when appropriate.
- (4) CWM is authorized to rely on any and all information that is provided to CWM by the client or any of the client's other service providers and advisors (such as the client's attorney, accountant, family office staff) and by investment managers, and shall not be required to independently verify any such information.
- (5) Each client is responsible for promptly notifying CWM if there is ever any change in their financial situation or investment objectives so that CWM may review, evaluate and possibly revise its previous recommendations and/or services in light of the new information.
- (6) No information accessed or acquired, directly or indirectly, by a client as a result of participating in any meeting sponsored by CWM or accessed through CWM is, or is intended to be, investment advice or recommendations tailored for the benefit of the participant or investment advice or recommendations regarding particular securities.

D. The Firm's Assets Under Management.

As of December 31, 2015, CWM's total assets under management were $1,037,519,244 of which $467,793,296 were discretionary and $569,725,948 were non-discretionary.

Item 5: Fees and Compensation

A. The Firm's Fees and Compensation for Services.

CWM is compensated exclusively by its clients and does not share in the fees paid to independent managers, custodians, broker/dealers and any other provider. CWM fees are based on the overall assets under management and are reflected in the advisory agreement between CWM and each of its clients. Assets under management refer to both assets for which CWM provides discretionary services as well as non-discretionary services.

B. General Information on Fees.

Fees are based upon a percentage (%) of the market value of the assets placed under CWM's management. Asset based fees range from .24% to 1.00%. In cases where a client situation requires CWM's significant involvement in areas other than investment management, the fee may be in the form of a flat fee to reflect these additional services. Flat fees are reviewed annually and will typically not exceed 1.50% on the assets under management for that client. Fees are negotiable.

CWM charges a flat fee for non-discretionary consulting services.

CWM's annual investment advisory fee shall be pro-rated, invoiced and paid quarterly, in advance, based either upon the market value of the assets on the last business day of the previous quarter or the annual flat fee. Upon the termination of the applicable advisory agreement between CWM and the client, any unearned fees paid in advance will be returned to the client.

CWM's fees may be deducted from the client's account by the client's account custodian, or, if requested by the client, by CWM. The client may also pay CWM's fee directly.

All fees paid to CWM for its services are separate and distinct from the fees and expenses charged directly by the custodian(s) of the client's account(s), transaction charges imposed by the broker-dealer executing securities transactions for the client's account(s), fees and expenses embedded in exchange traded funds and mutual funds held in or for the client's account(s) and/or charged to the client's account(s) by investment managers, such as hedge funds and private equity partnerships, and by the client's other advisors. For further discussion concerning CWM's brokerage practices, please see Item 12 below.

The fees and expenses imposed by mutual funds and exchange traded funds are described in each fund's prospectus and will generally include a management fee, other fund expenses, and a possible distribution fee. If hedge funds, private equity partnerships, fund of funds, and managed accounts also impose sales charges, a client may pay an initial or deferred sales charge. The client should review both the fees charged by the funds and the fees charged by CWM to fully understand the total amount of fees to be paid by the client and to thereby evaluate the advisory services being provided.

Item 6: Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

CWM does not charge performance-based fees.

Item 7: Types of Clients

A. The Firm's Clients.

The Firm's client base is comprised of high net worth individuals and families and their associated entities, trusts, charitable and/or tax-exempt organizations.

B. Requirements for Opening or Maintaining an Account.

1. Minimum Account Size

Wealth Advisory: minimum account size of $30,000,000.

Investment Management: minimum account size of $3,000,000.

Consulting Services: N/A

CWM, in its sole discretion, may reduce or waive any account minimum based upon certain criteria (e.g., overall relationship, anticipated future earnings capacity, anticipated future additional assets, dollar amount of assets to be managed, related accounts, account composition, negotiations with client, etc.).

2. Advisory Agreement

Each client will be required to sign an advisory agreement with CWM that sets forth the terms and conditions of the relationship between the client and CWM.

Item 8: Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

A. Methods of Analysis and Investment Strategies.

1. Methods of Analysis. In connection with servicing client accounts, CWM utilizes both quantitative and qualitative analysis. This analysis includes technical analysis and fundamental research. The main sources of the information that CWM uses in the Firm's investment decision-making process include proprietary due diligence and research processes, information gathered from consultants, contracts with database services, and research materials from third parties including broker-dealers, banks, independent investment newsletters and investment managers.

2. Investment Strategy. CWM's primary role is to work with advisory clients on their asset allocation by creating, implementing, and monitoring their investment policy statement. CWM utilizes long term investments, short term investments, margin transactions, option writing, and independent manager[s] as the investment strategies that it recommends and/or employs for servicing client accounts.

(a) Long-term investments. Long term investments are generally comprised of individual equity, fixed income and option securities, exchange traded funds, mutual funds, private partnerships such as hedge funds, fund of funds, private equity funds and structured notes which are held at least one year after the date of their purchase.

(b) Short-term investments. Short term investments are generally comprised of individual equity, fixed income and option securities, exchange traded funds, mutual funds and structured notes which are sold within one year from the date of their purchase. Short term purchases may result in frequent trading of securities, which may negatively affect investment performance through the impact of increased brokerage and other transaction costs and taxes that the client account may incur.

(c) Leverage. CWM may allocate assets to independent manager(s) who may use leverage in their investment program. Leverage may create an opportunity for greater yield and total return, but may also increase exposure to capital risk and higher current expenses.

(d) Option Trading. CWM directly and/or the independent manager(s) it recommends or allocates assets to, may buy or write put and call options through listed exchanges and over-the-counter. The buyer of an option has the right to purchase (in the case of a call option) or sell (in the case of a put option) a specified quantity of a specific security or currency at a specified price prior to or on a specified expiration date. The writer of an option is exposed to the risk of loss if the market price of the underlying securities declines (in the case of a put option) or increases (in the case of a call option). The writer of an option can never profit by more than the premium paid by the buyer but can lose an unlimited amount.

(e) Short Selling. CWM may allocate assets to independent manager(s) who may sell short securities of an issuer in the expectation of covering the short sale with securities purchased in the open market at a price lower than that received in the short sale.

Restrictions on short selling activities imposed by the federal securities laws and the various national and regional securities exchanges could limit such investment activities. There can be no assurance that securities necessary to cover a short position will be available for purchase.

3. Risk of Loss.

Risks can occur as a result of macroeconomic conditions, market conditions, and idiosyncratic risks inherent in independent manager(s) and/or securities. There is no way of predicting how the independent manager(s) will make investments or whether they will act in accordance with any disclosure documents or descriptive materials given by them to CWM. There can be no assurance that CWM will achieve its clients' objectives or that the strategies described herein will be successful. Client's assets may be allocated to an independent manager(s) who may be invested in securities and other financial instruments or obligations for which no market exists and/or which are restricted as to their transferability under federal or state securities laws. As such, clients may not be able to exit from such investments when they would like to, even if they are under-performing. Given the factors that are described below, there exists a possibility that a client could suffer a substantial loss as a result of making investments. Investing in securities involves risk of loss that each client should be prepared to bear.

(a) Risks of Derivatives. CWM directly and/or the independent manager(s) it recommends or allocates assets to, may trade derivatives. The risks posed by derivatives include (1) credit risks (the exposure to the possibility of loss resulting from a counterparty's failure to meet its financial obligations); (2) market risks (adverse movements in the price of a financial asset or commodity); (3) legal risks (an action by a court or by a regulatory or legislative body that could invalidate a financial contract); (4) operations risks (inadequate controls, deficient procedures, human error, system failure or fraud); (5) documentation risks (exposure to losses resulting from inadequate documentation); (6) liquidity risks (exposure to losses created by the inability to prematurely terminate a derivative); (7) systemic risks (the risk that financial difficulties in one institution or a major market disruption will cause uncontrollable financial harm to the financial system); (8) concentration risks (exposure to losses from concentration of closely-related risks such as exposure to a particular industry or exposure linked to a particular entity); and (9) settlement risks (the risk that a client faces when it has performed its obligations under a contract but has not yet received value from its counterparty).

(b) Leverage. CWM may allocate assets to independent manager(s) who may use leverage in their investment program. Leverage may create an opportunity for greater yield and total return, but may also increase exposure to capital risk and higher current expenses.

(c) Short Selling. CWM may allocate assets to independent manager(s) who may sell short securities of an issuer in the expectation of covering the short sale with securities purchased in the open market at a price lower than that received in the short sale. Restrictions on short selling activities imposed by the federal securities laws and the various national and regional securities exchanges could limit such investment activities. There can be no assurance that securities necessary to cover a short position will be available for purchase. A short sale creates the risk of a theoretically unlimited loss because the price of the underlying security could theoretically increase without limit and increase the cost of buying those securities to close the short position.

(d) Institutional Risk and Custodial Risks. The institutions, including brokerage firms and banks, with which CWM and independent managers directly or indirectly do business, or to which securities have been entrusted for custodial and prime brokerage purposes, may encounter financial difficulties that impair the operational capabilities or the capital position of a client. Brokers may trade with an exchange as a principal on behalf of a client, in a “debtor-creditor” relationship, unlike other clearing broker relationships where the broker is merely a facilitator of the transaction. Such broker could, therefore, have title to all of the assets of the client (for example, the transactions which the broker has entered into on behalf of the client as principal as well as the margin payments which the client provides). There is a residual risk that any brokers or dealers could become insolvent. While both the U.S. Bankruptcy Code and the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 seek to protect investor property in the event of failure, insolvency or liquidation of a broker dealer, a failure of a broker dealer that has custody of client assets may result in the client incurring losses due to its assets being unavailable for a period of time. Such losses could be significant.

(e) Counterparty Risk. CWM may allocate assets to independent manager(s) who may effect transactions in many markets including “over-the-counter” or “interdealer” markets. The participants in such markets are typically not subject to credit evaluation and regulatory oversight as are members of “exchange based” markets. This exposes the client to the risk that a counterparty will not settle a transaction in accordance with its terms and conditions because of a dispute over the terms of the contract (whether or not bona fide) or because of a credit or liquidity problem, thus causing the client to suffer a loss.

(f) Underlying Manager Investments. Certain underlying managers may take competing positions resulting in the client indirectly incurring certain transaction costs without accomplishing any net investment result. Furthermore, when allocating assets to unaffiliated investment managers, (i) CWM will not have the right to participate in the management, control or operation of the underlying funds or managers or evaluate much of the relevant economic, financial and other information which will be utilized by the underlying managers in their selection, structuring, monitoring and disposition of investments and (ii) there is always the possibility that the underlying manager could divert or abscond with the assets, fail to follow agreed-upon investment strategies, provide false reports of operations or engage in other misconduct. Lastly, underlying fund investments (especially private equity funds) tend to be less liquid than publicly traded securities.

Item 9: Disciplinary Information

There are no legal or disciplinary events relating to CWM.

Item 10: Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

Ann F. Kaplan is on the Board of the Goldman Sachs Bank. CWM does not believe that such affiliation creates any conflicts of interest for CWM.

John R. Chrin serves as the Chairman of the Audit Committee for Astoria Financial (AF). He also serves as a senior advisor to Century Capital Partners. CWM does not believe that such affiliation creates any conflicts of interest for CWM.

While CWM may recommend that certain clients allocate, or if CWM is serving on a discretionary basis CWM may allocate, the management of all or portion of a client's assets by and/or among certain independent managers, CWM does not receive or share any compensation from or with any independent manager and/or custodian.

Item 11: Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

A. Description of the Firm's Code of Ethics

CWM has adopted a Code of Ethics pursuant to SEC Rule 204A-1, under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended ("Advisers Act"), which serves to establish a standard of business conduct for all of the Firm's personnel that is based upon fundamental principles of openness, integrity, honesty and trust. As an investment advisor and fiduciary, CWM has an undivided duty of loyalty to act solely in the best interest of its clients and must avoid or disclose conflicts of interest. In carrying on its daily affairs, CWM and all Associated Persons (also known as "Supervised Persons"), shall act in a fair, lawful, and ethical manner in accordance with the rules and regulations imposed by the governing regulatory authority. It is the purpose of CWM's Code of Ethics to emphasize and implement these fundamental principles within its operations. All Firm personnel shall act in accordance with the requirements of the Adviser's Act, which sets forth numerous policies and procedures.

The Code of Ethics requires that upon joining the Firm, all employees and partners must disclose all portfolio holdings individually and in which they or any immediate family member has direct or beneficial ownership. CWM must receive all transaction confirmations and monthly statements. CWM requires that prior to effecting any securities transactions, including trades and/or direct investments or investing with any investment managers for themselves or for immediate family, all employees and partners must request in writing, via email, and receive approval from the Chief Compliance Office and/or Managing Partner.

Employees and partners are prohibited from using any information acquired in their capacities as such to effect any trade or undertake any activity that may adversely affect CWM's clients or their interests. All are similarly prohibited from furnishing such information for their own benefit. CWM requires that all personnel act in accordance with all the applicable Federal and State regulations governing registered investment advisory practices. CWM analyzes its operations on an ongoing basis to identify potential conflicts. The Chief Compliance Officer reviews the Code of Ethics as well as CWM's internal policies and procedures with each employee to ensure each person is aware of his or her responsibilities. This review occurs upon joining the Firm as well as on an ongoing basis. Information concerning the identity of the security holdings and financial circumstances of clients is to be kept confidential. Any violation of this Code of Ethics or any Firm policy and/or procedure is subject to the Firm's disciplinary procedures, which may include termination of employment.

CWM will provide a copy of the Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

B. Investing by the Firm and its Personnel

1. The purchase or sale of the same securities as for the client. CWM personnel (including for purposes of this Item 11 its principals and employees) may purchase or sell the same securities for their own accounts as are recommended, purchased or sold for client accounts. In addition, any person affiliated with CWM may directly or indirectly hold the same securities as CWM recommends to clients. These investment activities may present a conflict of interest in the sense that CWM, or its personnel, may benefit financially from a transaction effected for a client account.

2. The purchase or sale of same securities, and allocations to same managers, at or about the same time as in a client's account. In the case that CWM personnel requests to transact in a security on the same day that CWM is transacting in that security for client accounts, the request is approved as long as the order is on the same side and it is placed in the CWM Master account. Clients must receive the same or better execution. Mutual Fund trade requests on the same side as CWM client transactions are approved as mutual funds are traded on a broad market at an average price for all trades of the day therefore it is not seen as a conflict.

The Firm believes that it has addressed potential conflicts of interest related to its personnel's personal trading through its internal compliance policies. Each such person will be required to request approval in writing, via email, from the Chief Compliance Officer and/or Managing Partner prior to effecting any transaction and/or investing with any investment manager, including ones to which CWM allocates client assets. The Chief Compliance Officer checks with the Managing Partner and execution team to assess if CWM is transacting, or intending to transact, in the security for clients on that day. If CWM is not transacting, or intending to transact, in the security the request is generally approved as long as it is on the same side of positions held by clients. If CWM is transacting, or intending to transact, in the security for client accounts, the partner or employee order must be entered in the CWM Master account and receive the same execution, but not a better execution, than that of clients.

CWM requires that all employees/partners provide copies of trade confirmations and all account and direct investment statements. Employees and partners of CWM are prohibited from using any information acquired in their capacities to affect any trade or undertake any activity that may adversely affect CWM's clients or their interests. All are similarly prohibited from furnishing such information to others or otherwise improperly using such information for their own benefit. Any individual not in observance of the above may be subject to termination.

Item 12: Brokerage Practices

A. Factors the Firm Considers in Selecting a Broker-Dealer.

1. Selection Criteria. In placing orders for the purchase and sale of securities and selecting broker-dealers to effect these transactions for advisory clients, CWM seeks prompt execution of orders at the most favorable prices reasonably obtainable under the circumstances. In doing so, CWM will consider a number of factors, including, without limitation, the overall direct net economic result to the client (including commissions and fees, which may not be the lowest available but which ordinarily will not be higher than the generally prevailing competitive range), the financial strength and stability of the broker-dealer, the efficiency with which the transaction is effected, and the broker-dealer's responsiveness. CWM will weigh the amount of the broker-dealer's compensation against the other criteria it considers in selecting the broker-dealer to execute client securities transactions to determine whether the broker-dealer's compensation is reasonable in light of those other factors. Accordingly, although CWM will seek competitive commission rates and fees, it may not necessarily obtain the lowest possible rates for account transactions. Clients may choose custodians and direct execution to take place at preferred custodian which may affect best execution as discussed below.

Over-the-Counter (OTC) securities transactions for CWM's advisory clients are generally effected on an agency basis, which involve the services of two (2) separate broker-dealers: (1) a "dealer" or "principal" acting as market-maker; and (2) the executing broker-dealer that acts in an agency capacity for the client's account. Dealers executing principal transactions typically include a mark-up/down, which is included in the offer or bid price of the securities purchased or sold. In addition to the dealer mark-up/down, the client will also incur the transaction fee imposed by the executing broker-dealer. CWM does not receive any portion of the dealer mark-up/down or the executing broker-dealer transaction fee.

2. Research and other benefits. CWM receives investment research from a number of brokers and banking institutions which may or may not be used in connection with client accounts custodied at those institutions. Nevertheless, the receipt of research does not in any way influence CWM's decisions with respect to which brokers to utilize.

3. Brokerage for client referrals.

CWM does not consider client referrals when selecting a broker-dealer.

4. Directed brokerage.

CWM does not recommend, request or require that a client direct CWM to execute transaction through a specified broker-dealer. Nonetheless, CWM may permit a client to request that CWM effect securities transactions for that client's account through a particular broker-dealer. A client's direction of brokerage can limit or eliminate CWM's ability to negotiate commissions and fees (which could result in higher costs) and otherwise obtain most favorable execution of client transactions. In addition, CWM may be unable to aggregate orders to reduce transaction costs. If the client directs brokerage, the client will negotiate terms and arrangements for the account with that broker-dealer, and CWM will not seek better execution services or prices from other broker-dealers. As a result, the client may pay higher commissions or other transaction costs or incur greater spreads, or receive less favorable net prices, on transactions for the account than would otherwise be the case. In other words, directing brokerage may cost a client more money.

B. Aggregation.

Transactions for each advisory client account generally will be executed independently, unless CWM decides to purchase or sell the same securities for several advisory clients at approximately the same time. CWM may (but is not obligated to) combine or "batch" such orders to obtain "best execution", to negotiate more favorable commission rates, or to allocate equitably among CWM's advisory clients differences in prices and commissions or other transaction costs that might have been obtained had such orders been placed separately. Under this procedure, transactions will be averaged as to price and will be allocated among CWM's advisory clients in proportion to the purchase and sale orders placed for each client account on any given day. To the extent that CWM determines to aggregate advisory client orders for the purchase or sale of securities, including securities in which CWM's principals and/or associated persons may invest, CWM shall generally allocate such securities on a fair and equitable basis based on a variety of factors including, without limitation, each participating advisory client's strategy, available cash, tax consequences, portfolio composition and liquidity concerns. CWM shall not receive any additional compensation or remuneration as a result of the aggregation.

Item 13: Review of Accounts

A. Account Reviews.

Each of CWM's advisory clients' accounts will be monitored by CWM's partners and the investment team weekly. In addition, portfolios are reviewed whenever significant economic events, changes in market conditions or important new developments concerning a security and/or investment manager affecting any individual account occur. The partners and the investment team will take appropriate action or no action consistent with the goals and objectives of each account.

Non-Discretionary Consulting clients do not have any accounts with CWM. Therefore, accounts are reviewed per the schedule that is agreed upon with the client based on account information provided by the client to CWM.

B. Account Reports.

Advisory clients receive confirmations of all transactions and statements from custodians, broker-dealers and/or banks, where assets are held, on a monthly basis and capital account statements from investment managers of managed accounts, hedge funds, fund of funds and private equity partnerships to which client assets are allocated on a quarterly basis or as provided by that manager.

In addition to reports sent directly to advisory clients by custodians and/or investment managers, CWM provides a comprehensive quarterly report to its clients. CWM's quarterly report includes all advisory clients' assets under CWM supervision, across all the custodians in which advisory client maintains an account, as well as investments such as managed accounts, hedge funds, fund of funds and private equity partnerships. All CWM reports provided to clients are issued as an accommodation and are not official customer statements. CWM prepares these reports based on data believed to be accurate and provided on custodian statements, investment manager statements and capital account statements. CWM does not guarantee the accuracy or completeness of the information used in its reports. To the extent that there are differences between official custodian and investment manager statements and CWM's report, the official custodian statement should prevail. Based on advisory client's preference, CWM reports can be posted on a secure site, and/or sent via password-protected email.

CWM is not required to prepare and/or provide any reports for non-discretionary consulting clients.

Item 14: Client Referrals and Other Compensation

A. Non-Clients providing an Economic Benefit to CWM.

N/A

B. CWM Compensation to Third Parties for Client Referrals.

CWM does not compensate third parties for client referrals.

Item 15: Custody

CWM does not maintain physical possession of advisory client securities; all advisory client assets are physically held in custody at independent qualified custodians. The qualified custodian may be authorized by the client to deduct and process direct payment of CWM's advisory fee directly from the client's custodial account. Each advisory client will receive account statements directly from the custodian(s) on at least a quarterly basis (and typically on a monthly basis as provided in Item 13.B). Advisory clients should carefully review those statements. In the event that a client also receives an account statement from CWM, client is urged to compare the account statement they receive from the qualified custodian(s) with the account statement they receive from CWM, and to rely solely on the account statement received from the qualified custodian.

With respect to CWM clients that have an account at Charles Schwab Institutional, CWM typically has client authorization to deduct its fee directly from their account. As a result, CWM is deemed to have custody of those accounts' assets.

Item 16: Investment Discretion

CWM's services are provided both on a non-discretionary and discretionary basis. In a non-discretionary wealth advisory and consulting engagement, CWM makes recommendations to its clients and each client makes its own decisions. In a wealth advisory discretionary engagement, CWM has written authority to determine the securities to be bought or sold, the amount of securities to be brought or sold, the broker or dealer to be used and the commission rates to be paid, as well as the investment managers to allocate assets to including but not limited to: mutual funds, exchange traded funds, preferred stock, options, managed accounts, hedge funds, fund of funds and private equity partnerships. Clients may place limitations on CWM's discretionary authority. Any such limitations shall be presented to CWM in writing, and clients may change/amend those limitations, in writing, when appropriate.

CWM's advisory agreement and the agreement between the client and the custodian/broker-dealer for the account, may grant discretionary authority to CWM. The client's written agreement with the custodian also grants a limited power of attorney to CWM relative to transactions in the client's custodial account.

Item 17: Voting Client Securities

CWM does not vote client proxies for client accounts. Therefore, although CWM may provide investment advisory services relative to client investment assets, CWM's clients maintain exclusive responsibility for: (1) directing the manner in which proxies solicited by issuers of securities beneficially owned by the client shall be voted, and (2) making all elections relative to any mergers, acquisitions, tender offers, bankruptcy proceedings or other type events pertaining to the client's investment assets. CWM and/or the client shall correspondingly instruct each custodian of the assets to forward to the client copies of all proxies and shareholder communications relating to the client's investment assets. Clients can contact CWM using the information on the cover page of this brochure with any questions about a particular solicitation.

Item 18: Financial Information

There is no financial information that is reasonably likely to impair CWM's ability to meet contractual commitments to its clients.
