ITEM 2: MATERIAL CHANGES

On July 28, 2010, the United State Securities and Exchange Commission published “Amendments to Form ADV” which amends the disclosure document that we provide to clients as required by SEC Rules. This Brochure dated January 1, 2011 is a new document prepared according to the SEC’s new requirements and rules. As such, this document is materially different in structure and provides certain new information that our previous brochure, the Form ADV Part II, did not require.

In the future, this Item will discuss only specific material changes that are made to the Brochure and provide clients with a summary of such changes. We will also reference the date of our last annual update of our brochure.

In the past we have offered or delivered information about our qualifications and business practices to clients on at least an annual basis. Pursuant to new SEC Rules, we will ensure that you receive a summary of any material changes to this and subsequent Brochures within 120 days of the close of our business’ fiscal year. We may further provide other ongoing disclosure information about any material changes as necessary.

We will further provide you with a new Brochure as necessary based on changes or new information, at any time, without charge. Currently, our Brochure may be requested by contacting David Pendergast at 617-406- 0220 or dpendergast@corbyasset.com. Our Brochure is also available on our web site www.corbyasset.com, also free of charge.

ITEM 4: ADVISORY BUSINESS

About Us

Corby Asset Management, LLC is a Delaware limited liability company established in 2006 and the company's principal owner is Michael J. Reilly.

Our Services

The primary business of Corby Asset Management, LLC is to furnish advice with regard to the following types of strategies:

The Global Cash Flow Portfolio: An equity strategy designed to complement a fixed income portfolio with primarily income-producing equity-based securities. This strategy is focused on achieving long-term total returns by combining a high level of cash flow and compounding growth with potential for capital appreciation. Securities are not chosen strictly for the expectation of near-term growth resulting from capital gains.

The Municipal Fixed Income Portfolio: Customized client portfolios that invest in general obligations and revenue bonds of state and local governments of the United States and United States Territories. This strategy generally seeks to maximize after-tax income while minimizing overall risk.

These services are offered on a discretionary basis which involves the continuous management of investment advisory accounts, including the initial allocation and ongoing rebalancing (buy, sell, or otherwise trade) of investments within the account. The accounts are managed according to Corby's investment policies for that strategy.

Investment Supervisory Services

In addition, Corby may, from time to time, provide investment supervisory services to clients. This activity includes providing continuous advice and management services consistent with the circumstances, preferences, and objectives of the client. The investment management process includes an assessment of the client's objectives, needs, restrictions, and portfolio holdings. We attempt to structure and manage the client's investment program in the context of these considerations.

Conversely, Corby may also manage accounts on a fully discretionary basis without detailed knowledge of the circumstances, preferences, and objectives of the specific client. As an example, Corby serves as a portfolio manager inside of a wrap fee program (see Item 10: "Corby as Separate Account Manager"). In these instances, Corby formulates and implements an investment program that is considered prudent, appropriate, and suitable to the nature of the account and Corby's understanding of the client's general characteristics.

Corby does not provide investment advice on any basis other than those described above.

Corby does not issue periodic publications relating to securities on a subscription basis, nor do we prepare or distribute any special reports or analyses relating to securities.

Corby does not generally prepare or issue any charts, graphs, formulas, or other devices for use by clients in evaluating securities, nor do we furnish advice to clients on any matters not involving securities on other than an incidental basis. Incidental to its primary function as a money manager, Corby offers certain clients very general guidance commonly considered financial planning. Such services are provided free of additional cost.

Assets under Management

Corby manages 100% of client accounts, representing roughly $320 million in assets as of January 2011, on a discretionary basis.

ITEM 5: FEES AND COMPENSATION

Minimum Household Size and Annual Fees

Corby charges an annual fee for its advisory services. These fees are prorated and payable quarterly in arrears.

The fee schedule (annual) is:

- 1.5% of Assets Under Management between $0-$250,000
- 1.0% of Assets Under Management between $250,000 and above

The firm generally requires a minimum account value (household minimum) of $100,000 for investment advisory services.

Corby will deduct fees from clients' assets, where authorized in writing by the client. Otherwise the client will be billed directly for fees incurred. Please find detailed information below under "Billing Process." Some client agreements may specify payment of management fees in advance (See Item 10: "Other Investment Advisers").

Negotiability of Fees

In its sole discretion, Corby may charge a lesser management fee or waive the $100,000 minimum investment based upon certain criteria (i.e. anticipated future earning capacity, anticipated future additional assets, dollar amount of assets to be managed, historical relationship, related accounts, account compensation, negotiations with client, accounts referred to Corby by another professional, etc.)

Billing Process

Corby bills client accounts for a given quarter on the first business day of the following quarter by applying one-fourth of the applicable annual fee to the closing market value on the just-concluded quarter's last trading day. An account billed on the first business day of January, for example, applies one-fourth of the appropriate household rate to the account's market value on the last trading day of December.

Corby's has one billing cycle, where accounts are billable on the first of January, April, July, and October. When an account is first placed under Corby's management, billing begins on the first business day of the following quarter. Billing for that period is pro-rated by the number of trading days remaining in the quarter divided by the quarter's total trading days, with the resulting pro-rated fee applied to the value of the account on the just-concluded quarter's last trading day.

For accounts billed in advance, the billing begins on the first business day the account is opened and funded. Billing for that period is pro-rated by the number of trading days remaining in the quarter divided by the quarter's total trading days, with the resulting pro-rated fee applied to the initial value of the account on the first day of Corby's management.

For households with multiple accounts (e.g., two IRAs and a joint account), the applicable fee may be calculated on the basis of total household, with that fee applied to each account or to one of the household accounts as specified and chosen by the client.

Termination of Advisory Contracts and Refunds

Clients have the right to terminate the advisory contract at any time, without penalty, with written notice and/or verbal instruction. Upon termination of the advisory contract where the advisory fee is charged in arrears, fees will be taken pro rata to the date of termination. Upon termination of an advisory contract before the end of a billing period for clients billed in advance, the already-billed quarterly fee is pro-rated on the same basis as specified in the "billing process" paragraph above, and the difference between the assessed fee and the pro-rated fee is refunded promptly to the client.

Additional Fees

Clients may also incur additional fees or expenses in connection with Corby's advisory services such as:

- Broker-dealer/custodian commissions and/or transaction fees for effecting securities transactions.
- Relative to all mutual fund investments, charges imposed at the mutual fund level (e.g. management fees and other fund expenses).

Transaction costs for any transaction will be shared pro rata based on each portfolio's participation in the transaction, subject to any minimum transaction cost as imposed by any broker-dealer/custodian. Please refer to Item 12: "Brokerage" for more information.

Clients have the option to purchase investment products that Corby recommends through other brokers or agents that are not affiliated with Corby. However, Corby does not reduce its advisory fees to offset commissions charged by broker-dealer/custodians.

ITEM 6: PERFORMANCE-BASED FEES AND SIDE-BY-SIDE MANAGEMENT

The firm and its supervised persons do not accept or charge any fees based on a share of capital gains on or capital appreciation of client assets. The firm's investment management services are also limited to a specific strategy for an asset-based fee as mentioned previously throughout this brochure. Accordingly, the firm remains free of any potential conflict of interest where the firm might be presented with the opportunity to favor certain incentive-based accounts.

ITEM 7: TYPES OF CLIENTS

Corby provides investment advisory services to individuals, trusts, estates, charitable organizations, businesses, and pension plans.

Corby generally requires a $100,000 household minimum for investment advisory services. (See Item 5: “Fees and Compensation,” for more information about requirements for opening and maintaining an account).

ITEM 8: METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES, AND RISK OF LOSS

Corby provides investment advice (with regard to the services described in Item 4: “Advisory Business”) on the following types of securities: exchange-listed, over-the-counter, and foreign-issuer securities; corporate debt securities, municipal securities; United States government securities; and mutual fund shares.

Corby generally uses a combination of fundamental and technical methods to assess risks and opportunities in the markets. Fundamental security analysis helps us identify companies, industries, and sectors with compelling financial characteristics. Technical data helps us identify securities with attractive supply and demand characteristics. Other factors for decision making include cash-flow analysis, dividend growth, dividend yield, top-down/economic analysis, and industry sector analysis.

Throughout our investment process, we review numerous sources of information: financial newspapers and magazines; inspections of corporate activities; research materials prepared by others; corporate rating services; annual reports, prospectuses, and filings with the SEC; and company press releases. From time to time, and where suitable to client circumstances and preferences, we may use short sales, margin transactions, covered option writing, or option purchases.

Corby does not guarantee that securities will produce profits or that they will equal past performance. Investing in securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. An investment is not a deposit and is not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or any other government agency or by Corby.

There are risks involved with investing, including loss of principal. Current and future portfolio holdings are subject to risks as well. International investments may involve risk of capital loss from unfavorable fluctuation in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles or from economic or political instability in other nations. Emerging markets involve heightened risks related to the same factors as well as increased volatility and lower trading volume. Narrowly focused investments and smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility. Bonds and bond funds will decrease in value as interest rates rise. High-yield bonds involve greater risks of default or downgrade and are more volatile than investment-grade securities, due to the speculative nature of their investments. Diversification may not protect against market risk. There is no assurance the objectives discussed will be met. Past performance does not guarantee future results.

ITEM 9: DISCIPLINARY INFORMATION

There are no legal or disciplinary events which we believe are material to our client’s or prospective client’s evaluation of our advisory business or the integrity of our management.

ITEM 10: OTHER FINANCIAL INDUSTRY ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

Corby Capital Markets, Inc.

In addition to their fee-based advisory duties, firm personnel maintain separate licenses as registered representatives of our FINRA Registered broker-dealer affiliate, Corby Capital Markets, Inc. In consideration for their brokerage-based services, these individuals are subject to commission based compensation. Such compensation is in addition to those fees earned from their advisory duties. Clients are required to open separate brokerage accounts at Corby Capital Markets, Inc. and assets held in those accounts are not included in Corby Asset Management's total assets under management. Currently less than 25 of our clients maintain brokerage accounts at Corby Capital Markets, Inc.

Pursuant to Section 206(3) in the Advisers Act of 1940 Corby Asset Management may engage in principal or agency cross transactions* provided the adviser makes disclosure to and obtains the consent of the client.

 Rule 206(3)-2 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 defines an agency cross transaction for an advisory client as a transaction in which a person acts as an investment adviser in relation to a transaction in which such investment adviser, or any person controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such investment adviser, acts as broker for both such advisory client and for another person on the other side of the transaction.*

Solicitation Agreements with Other Investment Advisers

Corby has entered into solicitation agreements under which it pays fees for client referrals as permitted by Rule 206(4)-3 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 as amended. Under these agreements, Corby is designated as the Separate Account Manager ("SAM") and shares responsibilities with the clients' primary investment adviser as defined in the solicitation agreement between Corby and the Investment Adviser firm. Each shared client is provided with an introduction disclosure document, and must acknowledge that they understand the roles of each firm in writing prior to opening an account with Corby.

Currently Corby has entered into solicitation agreements with the following firms:

Sontag Advisory, LLC

Sontag Advisory, LLC is an Investment Adviser registered with the SEC. The arrangement with Sontag calls for a minimum of $100,000 client investment and a flat annual percentage based fee to their clients as follows:

Equity Portfolios:

$100,000 and above:	The fee is 1.25% per annum (.65% Corby, .60% Sontag)
----------------------	--

Fixed Income Portfolios:

$200,000 - $499,000:	The fee is .50% per annum (.25% Corby, .25% Sontag)
$500,000 - $1,999,999:	The fee is .35% per annum (.15% Corby, .20% Sontag)
$2,000,000 and above:	The fee is .25% per annum (.10% Corby, .15% Sontag)

This fee schedule may be amended from time to time. Upon written notice from Sontag to Corby, Sontag may, in its sole discretion, reduce or waive its portion of these management fees on an individual case basis.

Chertok Investment Group

Chertok Investment Group is an Investment Adviser registered with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The arrangement with Chertok calls for a minimum of $100,000 client investment and a flat fee to their clients as follows:

Fixed Income Portfolios:

$200,000 - $499,000:	The fee is .50% per annum (.25% Chertok, .25% Corby)
$500,000 - $1,999,999:	The fee is .35% per annum (.15% Chertok, .20% Corby)
$2,000,000 and above:	The fee is .25% per annum (.10% Chertok, .15% Corby).

This fee schedule may be amended from time to time. Upon written notice from Chertok to Corby, Chertok may, in its sole discretion, reduce or waive its portion of these management fees on an individual case basis.

Dual Contract Agreements

Corby has also entered into dual contract agreements with clients. Under these agreements, Corby is designated as the SAM and shares responsibilities with the clients' Investment Adviser, however Corby's fees will be set forth in separate client agreements and charged independently of the client's arrangements with the Investment Adviser. Clients should understand that Corby's fees may not be included in the program and/or the management fees negotiated between the client and their Investment Adviser.

Corby as the Separate Account Manager (SAM)

In both of the arrangements described above, Corby is not acting as the primary Adviser to the client. Here, Corby's portfolio management services are offered on platforms that allow other registered investment advisers to engage Corby as the SAM, if they determine the investment to be suitable for the client and if Corby's services are offered on the clients' broker-dealer/custodian platforms. Presently, Corby's services as a SAM are offered to Investment Advisers on the following broker-dealer/custodian platforms:

Fidelity Investments:	"Separate Account Network" (SAN)
Charles Schwab:	"Manager Marketplace"
RBC Wealth Management:	"Managed Account Program" (MAP)
RBC Wealth Management:	"FlexNet Program"

Clients of Advisers using Fidelity Investments or Charles Schwab as the broker-dealer/custodian must make a minimum investment of $100,000 and are charged a flat annual management fee of 1%, billable quarterly in arrears (See Item 5: "Fees and Compensation").

Clients of Advisers using RBC Wealth Management as the broker-dealer/custodian must make a minimum investment of $100,000 and are charged a flat annual management fee of .75%, billable quarterly in advance (See Item 5: "Fees and Compensation").

Other Material Relationships

Corby does not have relationships or arrangements that are material to its advisory business other than those described above.

While Corby's investment management services are often recommended by other advisers, the firm does not recommend or select other investment advisers for clients.

ITEM 11: CODE OF ETHICS, PARTICIPATION OR INTEREST IN CLIENT TRANSACTIONS AND PERSONAL TRADING

Code of Ethics

The Investment Advisers Act of 1940 prohibits Corby and any of its related persons from engaging in fraudulent and manipulative practices with respect to its clients or their accounts. The rules under the Act also require Corby to adopt and publicize a code of ethics designed reasonably to prevent us from engaging in prohibited practices. Corby's Code of Ethics serves to provide personnel and clients with an understanding of the firm's obligations as fiduciary.

Participation in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

For their own personal accounts, firm personnel may buy/sell securities that have been similarly recommended to clients. However, where such purchases/sales may be deemed to create a conflict of interest, all personnel are subject to the terms of the Code of Ethics and prohibited from engaging in activities that could jeopardize the client, his/her account(s), or their best interests.

Corby's officers are not prohibited from buying, selling, or trading in any securities for its or their own accounts and they may at any time, have, acquire, increase, decrease, or dispose of positions in investments which are at the same time being acquired or disposed of for the client, as long as the security trades in sufficiently broad markets to permit transactions to be completed without any appreciable impact on the client's transaction.

Transactions in thinly traded securities require pre-clearance authorization by the Portfolio Manager and/or the Compliance Officer. Corby requires all personnel to report at least quarterly, all security transactions made during the quarter and a statement of current beneficial investment holdings to the Compliance Officer.

The complete version of our Code of Ethics is available to clients upon request.

ITEM 12: BROKERAGE PRACTICES

Corby does not maintain custody of the client assets that we manage, although we may be deemed to have custody if clients give us authority to withdraw assets from their accounts (see Item 15: "Custody"). Client assets must be maintained in an account at a "qualified custodian," generally a broker-dealer or a bank. We request that our clients use Fidelity Investments (Fidelity), a registered broker-dealer and member SIPC, as the qualified custodian. Corby is independently owned and operated and is not affiliated with Fidelity. Fidelity will hold client assets in a brokerage account and buy and sell securities when we so instruct. While we request that clients use Fidelity as Custodian/broker, clients will decide whether to do so and will open their accounts with Fidelity by entering into an account agreement directly with them. Corby does not open the account for clients, although we may assist in doing so. If clients do not wish to place their assets with Fidelity, then we cannot be the primary adviser on the account (see Item 10: "Other Investment Advisers"). Not all advisers require clients to use a particular broker-dealer or custodian selected by the adviser. Even though an account is maintained at Fidelity, we can still use other brokers to execute trades for the account as described below (see "Brokerage and Custody Costs," below).

How We Select Brokers/Custodians

Corby seeks to select a custodian/broker who will hold assets and execute transactions on terms that are, overall, most advantageous when compared to other available providers and their services. We consider a wide range of factors, including, among others:

- Combination of transaction execution services and asset custody services (generally without a separate fee for custody)
- Capability to execute, clear, and settle trades (buy and sell securities for your account)
- Capability to facilitate transfers and payments to and from accounts (wire transfers, check requests, bill payment, etc.)
- Breadth of available investment products (stocks, bonds, mutual funds, exchange traded funds {ETFs}, etc.)
- Availability of investment research and tools that assist us in making investment decisions
- Quality of services
- Competitiveness of the price of those services (commission rates, margin interest rates, other fees, etc.) and willingness to negotiate prices
- Reputation, financial strength, and stability
- Prior service to us and other clients
- Availability of other products and services that benefit us

Brokerage and Custody Costs

For our clients' accounts that Fidelity maintains, Fidelity generally does not charge clients separately for custody services but is compensated by charging clients commissions or other fees on trades that it executes or that settle into the clients' Fidelity account. Fidelity's commission rates applicable to our clients' accounts were negotiated between Corby and Fidelity. In addition to commissions, Fidelity charges clients a flat dollar amount as a "prime broker" or "trade away" fee for each trade that we have executed by a different broker-dealer but where the securities bought or the funds from the securities sold are deposited (settled) into the Fidelity client account. These fees are in addition to the commissions or other compensation clients pay the executing broker-dealer. Because if this, in order to minimize client trading costs, we have determined that having Fidelity execute most trades is consistent with its duty to seek "best execution" of client trades. Best execution means the most favorable terms for a transaction based on all relevant factors, including those listed above (see "How We Select Brokers/Custodians").

Products and Services Available to Us from Fidelity

Fidelity provides Corby and our clients with access to its institutional brokerage - trading, custody, reporting, and related services - many of which are not typically available to Fidelity retail customers. Fidelity also makes available various support services. Some of those services help Corby manage or administer clients' accounts, while others help Corby manage and grow our business. Fidelity's support services generally are available on an unsolicited basis (Corby does not have to request them) and at no charge as long as clients maintain their assets in accounts at Fidelity. Following is a more detailed description of Fidelity's support services:

Services That Benefit You

Fidelity's institutional brokerage services include access to a broad range of investment products, execution of securities transactions, and custody of client assets. The investment products available through Fidelity include some to which we might not otherwise have access or that would require a significantly higher minimum initial investment by our clients. Fidelity's services described in this paragraph generally benefit clients and their accounts.

Services That May Not Directly Benefit You

Fidelity also makes available to us other products and services that benefit the firm but may not directly benefit clients or their accounts. These products and services assist us in managing and administering clients' accounts. They include investment research, both Fidelity's own and that of third parties. We may use this research to service all or a substantial number of our clients' accounts, including accounts not maintained at Fidelity. In addition to investment research, Fidelity also makes available software and other technology that:

- Provide access to client account data (such as duplicate trade confirmations and account statements)
- Facilitate trade execution and allocate aggregated trade orders for multiple client accounts
- Provide pricing and other market data
- Facilitate payment of our fees from our clients' accounts
- Assist with back-office functions, recordkeeping, and client reporting

Services That Generally Benefit Only Us

Fidelity also offers other services intended to help Corby manage and further develop our business enterprise. These services include:

- Educational conferences and events
- Consulting on technology, compliance, legal, and business needs
- Publications and conferences on practice management and business succession

Fidelity may provide some of these services itself. In other cases, it will arrange for third-party vendors to provide the services to Corby. Fidelity may also discount or waive its fees for some of these services or pay all or a part of a third party's fees.

Our Interest in Fidelity's Services

The availability of these services from Fidelity benefits Corby because we do not have to produce or purchase them. Corby does not have to pay for Fidelity's services so long as clients maintain their assets in accounts at Fidelity. Beyond that, these services are not contingent upon Corby committing any specific amount of business to Fidelity in trading commissions or assets in custody.

ITEM 13: REVIEW OF ACCOUNTS

Individual accounts are reviewed daily by Corby's Investment Committee. This process is facilitated in part by the fact that Corby primarily runs model portfolios, not unique accounts for each household. Certain clients may impose restrictions on their holdings. In accommodating those restrictions, we evaluate any resulting differences between a specific account and the firm's model portfolios very closely. All accounts are monitored on a portfolio management system that provides current and comprehensive information concerning account performance, asset allocation, and the progress of individual positions in the portfolio.

Account review is a routine firm function, but it can be triggered or intensified by unexpected performance, shifting market conditions, or changing client preferences or circumstances. In both routine and unusual circumstances, the central purpose of Corby's review process is to ensure that the firm's clients understand both what and how their accounts are doing. An additional purpose is to ensure the suitability of Corby's investment discipline for all clients. Clients receive quarterly reports for their investment advisory accounts. These reports include a portfolio appraisal, current year internal rate of return, and a billing summary for quarterly fees. Upon request, clients may receive reports more frequently, and may, in all cases, access comprehensive account information using our custodian's internet resources. Clients may opt in or out of duplicate confirmations from the trade-executing broker. In addition to these written or formal methods, Corby communicates with clients frequently—by e-mail, postal mail, telephone, and in person—concerning their accounts and personal and financial circumstances.

ITEM 14: CLIENT REFERRALS AND OTHER COMPENSATION

We receive an economic benefit from Fidelity in the form of the support products and services it makes available to us and other independent investment advisers whose clients maintain their accounts at Fidelity. These products and services, how they benefit us, and the related conflicts of interest are described above. The availability to us of Fidelity's products and services is not based on us giving particular investment advice, such as buying particular securities for our clients.

Client Referrals

Corby has entered into solicitation agreements under which it pays fees for client referrals as permitted by Rule 206(4)-3 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 as amended. These arrangements are described in Item 10: "Solicitation Agreements with Other Investment Advisers."

ITEM 15: CUSTODY

Other than the client authorized direct deduction of fees from accounts, Corby does not maintain or accept custody* of client funds or securities. An independent broker-dealer/custodian maintains actual custody of Client assets (see Item 12: "Brokerage Practices"). Clients receive account statements directly from the custodian at least quarterly. They will be sent to the email or postal mailing address provided by the client to the custodian. Clients should carefully review those statements promptly when they receive them. We also urge clients to compare their custodian's account statements to the periodic portfolio reports they receive from us.

 Rule 206(4)-2 Investment Advisers Act of 1940 defines custody to mean the holding, directly or indirectly, of client funds or securities, or having any authority to obtain possession of them.*

ITEM 16: INVESTMENT DISCRETION

Corby manages client accounts on a discretionary basis according to the limitations, terms, and conditions of the written agreement.

Corby uses Fidelity Investments as its custodian for private client assets. The firm has chosen this custodian on the basis of its reasonable, straightforward commission structure, integrity, and financial stability. Corby does not have discretion as to the commissions our clients pay.

ITEM 17: VOTING CLIENT SECURITIES

Clients may elect Corby to be responsible for the voting of proxies solicited by or with respect to the issuers of securities in which their accounts may be invested. This option is made available to the client on the custodian account application and/or by service request. Corby has the power to take any action or render any advice with respect to the voting of proxies for the benefit of and in the best interest of the client. The objective of voting a security in each case under the Corby's policy is to vote in the best interests of shareholders, generally seeking to enhance the value of the security, or to reduce potential for a decline in the security's value. Corby's policy does not prescribe voting requirements or specific voting considerations. Instead, it provides procedures for assembling voting information and applying the informed expertise and judgment of the Corby's personnel on a timely basis in pursuit of the voting objectives stated above. Clients may request from Corby information regarding how votes were cast as well as a complete version of Corby's Policy on Proxy Voting.

ITEM 18: FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Under Rule 206(4)-4 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, investment advisers are required to disclose certain information about their business practices that might serve as material to the client's decision in choosing an investment adviser. As of the date of this filing, Corby does not require the pre-payment of any fees or maintain any financial hardships or other conditions that might impair its ability to meet its contractual obligations to clients. On a voluntary basis, Corby's financial statements are prepared and audited by an independent certified public accountant in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and Article 1 of SEC Regulation S-X. These statements are available to clients as a courtesy upon request.
