Advisory Business

Peter B. Cannell & Co., Inc. (the “Firm” or “we”) was founded in 1973. The Firm is a subsidiary of New York Community Bancorp, Inc., a public company listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Throughout the Firm’s history, we had focused solely on investing our clients’ assets in common stocks of publicly traded companies. As of January 2014, the Firm invests the assets of certain more recently acquired clients in fixed income securities. We are not broker-dealers. We do not engage in investment banking or related activities. We are value investors and take a long term view. We rely on investment selection, not market timing.

Our approach provides individualized management for each account. We meet with each client (or client’s financial advisor) to gain an in-depth understanding of the client’s financial goals. Selection of securities, asset allocations, purchase guidelines, and tax management are based on our insight and understanding of each client’s financial circumstances and objectives. We meet with or otherwise communicate with our clients on a periodic basis to ensure that the financial goals of each client have not changed.

As of March 11, 2016, the Firm had assets under management of $3,346,807,185. All assets are managed on a discretionary basis.

Fees and Compensation

Our annual fee is based on the total value of each client’s assets under management on the last day of each calendar quarter. Our fees are billed at the end of each quarter. Fees are pro-rated in the event the Firm does not manage the account for an entire calendar quarter. If an investment advisory agreement is terminated on other than the last day of the calendar quarter, the fee is based upon the value of the account on the date of termination. Certain accounts managed by two of the portfolio managers who joined the Firm in 2014 are subject to a lower fee than shown in the schedule relating to those managers.

Fees for those accounts managed by Joseph Werner, William Herrman and Edward Giles are calculated as follows:

- 1.20% on the first $2,000,000 of assets under management
- 1.00% on the next $3,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.75% on the next $10,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.50% on assets under management in excess of $15,000,000.

Fees for accounts managed by John Furth, Ian MacCallum, Robert Shapiro, and Robert Eising are typically calculated as follows:

A. Fixed Income Securities:

- 0.40% on fixed income securities with original maturity of more than one year, and

B. All Other Assets:

- 1.00% on the first $10,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.75% on the next $10,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.60% on the next $10,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.40% on the next $70,000,000 of assets under management
- 0.30% on assets under management in excess of $100,000,000.

A client may authorize the custodian to deduct the investment advisory fee from the custody account or the client may elect to receive a bill each quarter for the amount due.

Clients will be charged custody fees by their custodian. Clients should refer to the custody agreement or contact their custodian for a discussion of their fees.

Clients will be charged brokerage commissions for transactions effected by the Firm on their behalf. See Brokerage Practices section. Clients will also be charged money market fund fees by the fund's manager on the cash portion of the account.

Clients will be charged a fee by the third-party class action processor which the Firm has retained. This fee is a percentage of the total compensation awarded to the client and is deducted by the class action processor prior to disbursing the award to the client.

Performance-Based Fees and Side-by-Side Management

There are no performance-based fees.

Types of Clients

We manage assets on behalf of individuals, pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, non-profit organizations, partnerships, corporations and other business entities. In some cases, principals of the Firm serve as trustee for some trust account clients, by virtue of a prior relationship with those clients.

There is typically a $2,000,000 minimum to open an account with us. In certain instances this minimum may be waived.

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

Significant rewards can come to the prudent and patient investor. Quality management, a proven record, a competitive advantage, sound financials and the opportunity for growth are the fundamental traits we look for in the companies in which we invest.

We employ fundamental security analytical techniques, although consideration is given to technical studies. Our strategy is to buy securities for long term capital appreciation. Research is conducted independently in-house. When we identify what we believe to be a promising investment, we evaluate its suitability for each of our clients.

Most of our clients' assets are generally fully-invested in common stocks (or publicly traded limited partnership interests). However, we maintain cash or cash equivalents in each portfolio sufficient to permit us to capitalize on new investment opportunities without being forced to sell an existing holding at an inopportune time.

We believe common stocks are an excellent way to preserve and enhance purchasing power. We want our clients to own good businesses — businesses that we understand, that are managed by dedicated and able people. Other characteristics we look for are low cost of raw materials, low political profile, high return on stockholders' equity, free cash flow, and a material management stake in the business. We keep an eye out for evolving industries and new concepts as well as for unduly depressed securities that appear to provide minimal market risk but potential for substantial appreciation.

For some clients, we employ fixed income strategies.

While the foregoing describes the general precepts guiding our investment strategy, it is inherent in our makeup to avoid dogma, to keep a clear and open mind as to what constitutes value and to be deeply suspicious of the prevailing view. We manage each account individually. Therefore, a client's financial needs, goals, tolerance for risk, etc. further shape our investment strategy with respect to that account.

A typical portfolio managed by Joseph Werner, William Herrman and Edward Giles will hold less than 25 securities. They believe this allows for appropriate diversification and manages risk while not watering down the importance of each investment to the overall return of the portfolio. When a holding becomes too small or too large relative to the portfolio, they tend to rebalance the holding. In taxable accounts, they are sensitive to capital gains taxes and under usual circumstances will hold a security for at least one year and a day before considering trimming or selling it.

A typical portfolio managed by John Furth, Ian MacCallum, Robert Shapiro, and Robert Eising will hold 30-40 securities, and may hold fixed income securities.

Investing in equity or fixed income securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. There is no assurance that an investment will provide positive performance over any period of time. Past performance is no guarantee of future results and different periods and market conditions may result in significantly different outcomes. There can be no guarantee that our decisions will produce the intended result, and there can be no assurance that the investment strategy will succeed. Additional material risks presented by the strategy and its investments are set forth below.

Market risk: The market values of the securities may decline, at times sharply and unpredictably. Market values of equity securities are affected by a number of different factors, including the historical and prospective earnings of the issuer, the value of its assets, management decisions, decreased demand for an issuer's products or services, increased production costs, general economic conditions, interest rates, currency exchange rates, investor perceptions and market liquidity.

Stocks of a particular sector (e.g., energy, financial, etc.) or style (e.g., "growth" or "value") held in an account could fall out of favor and returns would subsequently trail returns from the overall stock market. The performance of stocks of large-cap companies could underperform those of smaller companies that may be more nimble and have better growth prospects. The performance of stocks of small and mid-cap companies could be more volatile than stocks of larger companies. There may be less liquidity in a smaller company's stock, which means that buy and sell orders in that stock could take longer to complete without impacting price. Small-cap companies often have less predictable earnings, more limited product lines and markets, and more limited financial and management resources than larger companies.

Non-U.S. risk: Companies based outside of the United States or domestic companies with significant foreign operations may be subject to risks in addition to those of companies that principally operate in the United States, due to political, social and economic developments abroad, different regulatory environments and laws, potential seizure by the government of company assets, higher taxation, withholding taxes on dividends and interest and limitations on the use or transfer of portfolio assets. Other risks include the following: enforcing legal rights may be difficult, costly and slow in non-U.S. countries, and there may be special problems enforcing claims against non-U.S. governments; non-U.S. companies may not be subject to accounting standards or governmental supervision comparable to U.S. companies, and there may be less public information about their operations; and non-U.S. markets may be less liquid and more volatile than U.S. markets.

Credit risk: Fixed income investments are prone to credit risk. The credit quality of an issuer can fluctuate, depending upon the issuer's ability to make good on its principal and interest obligations.

Inflation risk: This is the risk that the value of your investment will be negatively affected as an increase in prices decreases the value of money over time.

Interest rate risk: Fixed income investments are generally subject to interest rate risk, which is the risk that the value of a security will fall due to a change in overall interest rates. The current level of interest rates makes it more likely that rates will rise in the foreseeable future, an environment that will generally cause the value of fixed income securities to decrease. Equity portfolios may also be subject to "hidden" interest rate risk, as some stocks can change in value due to fluctuation of interest rates.

Disciplinary Information

Neither the Firm nor any of its management persons have been involved in a material regulatory or legal event.

Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

None of our management persons are registered or have a pending application to be registered as a broker-dealer, registered representative of a broker-dealer, futures commission merchant, commodity pool operator, commodity trading advisor or an associated person of any of these entities. We are not affiliated with any broker-dealer or commodities trading firm.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

We manage several of our employees' personal investment accounts or accounts in which they are deemed to have a beneficial interest. Our management of these accounts raises potential conflicts of interest when we buy or sell a security that is owned by, or considered for purchase or sale for, a client. In addition, we permit our employees to buy and sell securities that we have purchased or sold for or recommended to our clients after they are purchased or sold for clients. Such employees are permitted to engage in transactions for their accounts in a manner that is inconsistent with our recommendations to our clients.

Whether we buy or sell securities for employee accounts under our management, or our employees engage in personal securities transactions, all such trades must comply with our Code of Ethics ("the Code").

The Firm's Code is designed to detect and prevent conflicts of interest between transactions entered into on behalf of our clients and transactions entered into on behalf of or by our employees. If such conflicts do arise, the Code ensures that we effect transactions for clients in a manner that is consistent with our fiduciary duty to our clients and applicable law. Our employees who wish to buy or sell securities of the types purchased for our clients may do so only in a manner consistent with the Firm's fiduciary obligations. We do not buy or sell for client accounts securities in which our Firm or a related person has a material financial interest.

Clients and prospective clients may request a copy of our Code of Ethics.

Brokerage Practices

We are given authority by our clients to make the following determinations: (i) which securities to buy or sell; (ii) the amount of securities to buy or sell; (iii) the broker-dealer through which the securities are to be bought or sold; and (iv) the commission rates and prices at which securities transactions are effected.

Unless otherwise directed in writing, the Firm arranges for the execution of securities transactions for clients' accounts through those brokers or dealers that, in our reasonable judgment, are capable of providing best execution. In determining the ability of a broker-dealer to provide best execution, we consider a number of factors such as:

- Quality of execution including speed, efficiency and potential ability to obtain price improvement
- Competitiveness of commissions
- Reliability
- Responsiveness to the Firm's needs
- Reputation and integrity
- Trade error history
- Research/Access to information
- Ability to provide liquidity
- Confidentiality
- Clearance and settlement capabilities
- Knowledge of and access to markets.

One broker-dealer, with which the Firm regularly trades, employs the son of one of the Firm's principals, while another such broker-dealer employs a nephew of one of the Firm's principals. Furthermore, one of the Firm's clients is an executive officer of a broker-dealer to whom we direct business. We seek to mitigate this conflict of interest through our account review process.

Research and Other Soft Dollar Benefits

Consistent with obtaining best execution, at times we direct brokerage commissions on a client's portfolio transactions to brokers and dealers in recognition of research services furnished by them, as well as for services rendered in the execution of orders by such brokers and dealers. Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Section 28(e)") permits an investment adviser, under certain circumstances, to cause its clients to pay a broker-dealer a commission for effecting a transaction in excess of the amount of commission another broker-dealer would have charged in recognition of the value of brokerage and research services provided by the broker-dealer. We must determine that the commission is reasonable in relation to the value of brokerage and research services received. In reaching such determination, we are not required to place or attempt to place a specific dollar value on the brokerage or research services provided by such broker. When we use a broker who provides research or other products and services rather than a broker who could execute a transaction at a lower commission rate, we receive a benefit because we are receiving such research or services without having to pay hard dollars. This may cause us to select a broker-dealer providing such research and services as opposed to one that may be able to provide more favorable execution.

Research products are in written form or through direct contact with individuals and may include information on companies and securities as well as market and economic conditions that assist in the valuation and pricing of investments. Examples of research-oriented services we pay for using soft dollars include portfolio management software, research reports, access to industry conferences and company managements, proprietary equity data, market commentary, economic forecasts, and other information on the economy, industries, sectors, groups of securities, individual companies, statistical information, political developments, technical market action, pricing and appraisal services, credit analysis, risk measurement analysis, performance and other analysis.

Brokerage and research services are employed for the benefit of all of our clients. However, each and every service may not be used for the benefit of all client accounts. We do not seek to allocate soft dollar benefits proportionately to the soft dollar credits that the account generates.

We generally consider the amount and nature of research, execution and other services provided by brokers and dealers as well as the extent to which such services are relied on, and attempt to allocate a portion of each client's brokerage on the basis of these considerations. A broker-dealer is not precluded from receiving business because it does not provide brokerage or research services. We believe that such an allocation of brokerage business will help us to obtain valuable research and execution capabilities and will provide other benefits to our clients.

We are required to monitor these arrangements to identify where a research product or service has a mixed use (research and non-research) and make a reasonable allocation of the cost of the product according to its use. The portion that assists us in the investment decision making process is paid for by commission dollars, while those services that provide administrative or other non-research assistance are outside the safe harbor of Section 28(e) and must be paid for using our own funds. We have a conflict of interest in making this research/non-research determination; we deal with this conflict through disclosure in this brochure. We maintain records concerning mixed-use allocations and make a good faith review of these determinations.

When deciding to direct client transactions to a particular broker-dealer in return for soft dollar benefits received, we consider a number of factors such as:

- Research/Access to information
- The percentage of companies in which we invest covered by the broker-dealer's research and trading departments
- Responsiveness to our needs
- Reliability, both historically and as an ongoing matter
- The broker-dealer's reputation and integrity.

Brokerage for Client Referrals

In selecting a broker-dealer, Peter B. Cannell & Co., Inc. does not consider whether we or a related person of our Firm receives client referrals from such broker-dealer.

Directed Brokerage

A few clients have directed us to use a specific broker-dealer through which we must execute securities transactions for their account(s), and have negotiated their own commission rates. Where a client has directed the use of a particular broker-dealer, the client should consider the following information: (i) we may have limited or no ability to negotiate commissions for the client; (ii) we are unable to negotiate volume discounts; (iii) disparity in commission charges may exist among clients; (iv) conflicts of interest sometimes arise from such non-brokerage referrals; (v) such brokerage referral trades are usually executed after non-brokerage referral trades; and (vi) such client may not be able to obtain any of the benefits of block trades that we may enter into for clients who have not directed us to use a particular broker-dealer.

We often purchase or sell securities for several client accounts at approximately the same time. At times we will combine or “batch” these orders to facilitate obtaining best execution, to negotiate more favorable commission rates and/or to allocate equitably among such clients the effects of any market fluctuations that might have otherwise occurred had such orders been placed independently. Under this procedure, the transactions are averaged as to price and allocated as to amount according to the daily purchase and sale orders actually placed for each client account.

Transactions that are to be effected through a particular broker-dealer, pursuant to a client direction, may not be combined or batched for execution with orders for the same securities for other managed accounts, except to the extent that such broker-dealer is the executing broker-dealer for the combined or batched order. Where the above exception is not applicable, trades that are to be effected through a particular broker-dealer pursuant to a client direction are usually placed after batched trading activity for a particular security. Accordingly, such trades may be subject to price movements, particularly in volatile markets, that may result in the client receiving a price that is less favorable than the price obtained for the batched order. The direction by a client of a particular broker-dealer to execute trades sometimes results in higher commissions, greater spreads, or less favorable net prices than might be the case if we were empowered to negotiate commission rates or spreads freely, or to select brokers or dealers based on best execution.

Review of Accounts

All clients’ accounts receive close and regular review. We meet with or otherwise communicate with our clients on a periodic basis to ensure that the financial goals of each client have not changed.

Each quarter, clients are provided with an evaluation of their accounts. Annually, clients are provided with their account performance as well as a capital gains/losses statement. These reports are available to clients in hard copy or in the password-protected section of the Firm's website for those clients who have elected to receive their statements electronically.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

The Firm does not compensate any third parties for client referrals, nor do we receive any payments from third parties in connection with giving advice to clients.

Custody

Our clients' assets are held by qualified custodians as defined by §275.206(4)-2(d)(6) under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 ("the Act"). At least quarterly, clients receive account statements from their custodian. Such statements should be carefully reviewed and compared to the account statements received from us.

Investment Discretion

Pursuant to our investment advisory agreement with each client, we have full discretion to manage our clients' investment accounts. On occasion, a client may notify us of a limitation on investments we can make for their account. An example is no purchase of "sin stocks".

Voting Client Securities

We have adopted a policy and implemented procedures which we believe are reasonably designed to ensure that proxies are voted in the best interest of our clients, in accordance with our fiduciary duties and SEC Rule 275.206(4)-6 under the Act. The following is a summary of our proxy voting policy and procedures:

We have formed a committee to administer and oversee the proxy voting process. We have also developed guidelines designed to assist in this process. In general, we will follow the voting guidelines except in cases where a material conflict of interest exists. The policy and procedures contain several methods by which a proxy will be voted in a manner that avoids a material conflict of interest.

We vote clients' proxies except when it is determined that the effect on our clients' economic interest of the value of the holding is insignificant, or when the cost of voting the proxies outweighs the benefit. We will not vote proxies for those securities in certain clients' custodian accounts that are "unsupervised" and appear under the heading "Special Holdings" on their quarterly statements. We do not receive a fee on, assume no responsibility for, and make no proxy voting or investment decisions regarding such securities. Any proxies received with respect to such securities are forwarded to the clients.

Clients may request a copy of our proxy voting policy and procedures. Clients may also request information as to how proxies were voted on their behalf.

Financial Information

We do not require or solicit prepayment of our fees. We are not aware of any financial condition that is reasonably likely to impair our ability to meet our contractual commitments to our clients, nor have we ever been the subject of a bankruptcy petition.
