Item 4 – Advisory Business: Emerging Markets Trade Finance

Thank you for your interest in IIG.

Incorporated in 1994 in the State of New Jersey and headquartered in New York City, IIG was founded by its Managing Partners David Hu (Chief Investment Officer) and Martin S Silver (Chief Operating Officer). An SEC-registered investment advisor since 1995, IIG engages in the business of providing investment management and advisory services (investing in a variety of equity and debt instruments) to private investment companies whose investors are comprised of institutional investors and, to a lesser extent, high net worth individuals and family offices. The Firm's core expertise is emerging markets fixed income and trade finance strategies. It specializes primarily in the development and management of investment vehicles (sometimes referred to as "Funds") that are focused on international commodities and trade finance, particularly within emerging markets. IIG is a pioneer in these strategies, which involve the short and medium-term financing of import/export trade, secured by the underlying traded goods or other assets depending on the structure of the transactions. The individual investments may cover one or more components of the trade finance cycle in various forms, including, but not limited to: asset-based lending, pre-export, import, receivable, warehouse, inventory and letters of credit financings. IIG seeks to provide its clients with low volatility and risk adjusted returns. IIG has invested substantially in establishing a strong foundation and infrastructure including in-house operations, technology, compliance, legal and full-scale trade finance deal capacity. Moreover, many of our trade finance investments are sourced, effected and serviced by various affiliates. (See Item 10.) As of December 31, 2012 IIG's assets under management were approximately $533 million. In 2013, IIG is pursuing a strategic expansion of its business, in line with its core competencies.

Item 5 – Management Fees and Compensation

IIG does not utilize a standard fee schedule for its clients. IIG charges its clients a management fee. Generally, IIG's management fees will be paid monthly in arrears based on an annual negotiated rate in the range of 1% to 2% of net assets under management.

Item 6 – Performance-Based Fees

IIG typically charges its qualified clients a quarterly performance-based fee or carried interest. IIG has implemented procedures to mitigate the risk of potential conflicts or incentives which may favor clients that pay performance-based fees. Presently, all IIG accounts are performance-based fee accounts. Performance-based fees will typically be in the range of approximately fifteen to twenty percent of the gain in a client's portfolio, subject to hurdles. In certain cases, performance-based fees may be subject to a more customized formula, as may be the case where IIG is serving as sub-adviser. In the case of potential CLO or CDO clients, carried interest may be, in part, determined based upon relatively complex formulas pursuant to the indentures or other governing documents of that class of investment fund.

Item 7 – Types of Clients

IIG's clients are pooled investment vehicles, referred to herein as Funds. IIG specializes in the development and management of these investment vehicles designed to strategically capitalize upon global investment opportunities with a focus on emerging markets. Among the Firm's key strengths is the experience of its management team in emerging markets fixed income investments as well as global commodity and trade finance. IIG leverages this expertise to achieve risk adjusted returns in unique and innovative alternative investment products targeted to institutional, corporate and high net-worth investors.

Item 8 – Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

IIG seeks to provide clients with investment opportunities in two primary strategies:

Global trade finance strategy. The investments in this strategy may cover one or more components of the global supply chain in various forms including, but not limited to, receivable financing and factoring, asset-based lending, inventory and warehouse financing, transactional equity, import financing, pre-export financing and letter of credit financing. In addition, investments in this strategy may include investments in banking institutions with strong commitments to trade finance; and

Global emerging markets fixed income and equities strategy. The investments covered in this strategy include, but are not limited to, fixed income securities issued by selected emerging markets private and public sector companies, local currency debt obligations issued by the governments of certain emerging markets countries and selected emerging markets private and public sector companies, and private placements of debt obligations of selected emerging markets private and public sector companies.

Our investments expose clients to various types of risk of loss that investors should be prepared to bear. The primary types of risks include credit risk, market risk, liquidity risk, transactional risk, settlement risk, position concentration risk, and country risk. IIG conducts a variety of methods of analysis such as traditional credit, industry and collateral analyses, including on-site visits in the case of trade finance investments. We seek to mitigate risks of loss through a variety of methods including comprehensive due diligence, diversification and structuring.

Credit Risk. Through the use of credit risk analysis, IIG assesses the risk that a counterparty to a financial instrument will fail to discharge an obligation or commitment. IIG conducts due diligence to evaluate each potential investment, issuer (typically, a borrower in the case of a trade finance investment) and off-taker (or end buyer), as applicable, to assess and mitigate this risk. Additionally, the Firm attempts to develop appropriate transaction structures (see also Position Concentration Risk below). Where applicable, structuring methods include, but are not limited to, conservative advance ratios to the market value of underlying assets financed, implementation of third party verifications, and both scheduled and random inspections and spot checks of collateral. Such techniques may also involve a client fund taking title to assets during the financing period as security.

Market Risk: market risk includes currency, price and/or interest rate fluctuation risks. As an example, the scheduled movement of an underlying commodity may be restricted by a country. IIG seeks to minimize this risk by making investments in countries where it has comfort with the rule of law in relation to the underlying assets, and where the assets financed are critical to export/foreign exchange earnings of the country. In addition, we apply diversification requirements including by issuer, investment, off-taker (or end buyer), transaction type, asset type and/or country, as applicable, among others, which aim to dramatically reduce the portfolio concerns associated with market risk. Furthermore, the vast majority of IIG investments are U.S. dollar-based and non-dollar based assets may be hedged as deemed appropriate.

Liquidity Risk: liquidity risk refers to the fact that a significant portion of IIG's investments are privately structured transactions with an insufficient secondary market which may prevent the liquidation of or limit the ability to sell the investments. Our global emerging market fixed income and equity investments are largely in the nature of over-the-counter securities and/or deals which are not considered highly liquid. Moreover, most transactions in which IIG invests will not be rated or listed; particularly IIG's trade finance portfolio investments have never been rated or listed to date. Equity investments in banking institutions are also private transactions in entities that are not publicly traded. Among the methods that may be utilized by IIG to mitigate investment risks, conservative position concentrations coupled with shorter-term transactions (typically in relation to trade finance investments) may lessen the degree of issues associated with liquidity risk. Our trade finance transactions are generally established with small to medium-sized companies that could have minimal access to traditional sources of financing, therefore, the issuers can be heavily reliant on financing provided through IIG including renewals thereof.

Transactional Risk: transactional risk includes risks associated with asset integrity, such as quantity, quality, and control of physical assets within a transaction. Additionally, documentation (especially title and security concerns as well as the legal structure of a transaction), and management matters, are associated with this risk. Asset-related risks are minimized through contracting with internationally recognized issuers of warehouse receipts and other title documentation, facility inspections and inventory spot checks. Documentation risk generally may be minimized by utilizing competent and experienced legal counsel in drafting the initial structure and contracts with respect to a transaction. Management risk is substantially reduced by utilizing a strong operations department that fully understands the transactions, and we are fortunate to have a very competent and experienced operations team as a complement to the experience of our Fund managers and analysts.

Settlement Risk: settlement risk refers to risk of loss due to the failure of an entity to honor its obligations to deliver cash, securities or other assets as contractually agreed. For the vast majority of the Firm's trade finance transactions, the Firm seeks to mitigate this risk through requirements for payment instruction agreements with off-takers as well as the establishment of collateral or collection accounts, to facilitate the control and settlement of loan repayments with the various banks utilized for purposes of these transactions.

Position Concentration Risk: position concentration risk refers to inherent risks associated with significant investment concentrations, such as with an issuer, off-taker, industry or country. IIG seeks to mitigate such risks substantially through diversification at the issuer, off-taker, industry and country levels and continuous monitoring of our client's investment portfolios to ensure that these risks are kept within prescribed limits for each client.

Leverage may be used to enhance client returns and may lead to greater concentration of portfolio positions. Leverage may be in the form of, but not limited to, secured borrowing facilities, repurchase agreements or similar arrangements.

Country Risk: Since IIG, on behalf of its clients, makes investments internationally, especially in countries in Latin America, the possibility of political instability, local macro-economic shocks, confiscatory taxation, and asset seizures by governments (among other things) poses some risk to client portfolios. IIG seeks to mitigate these risks by constantly analyzing political and macro-economic events in the various countries in which it maintains investments on behalf of its clients.

IIG's methods of analysis, investment strategies and risks of loss are discussed in further detail in our clients' offering memoranda (in the case of clients that are investment funds) and investors are urged to review such documentation and any related documentation with respect to any investor's respective Fund.

Item 9 – Disciplinary Information

IIG has no legal or disciplinary events to report.

Item 10 – Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

IIG Capital LLC ("IIG Capital") is a New York limited liability company, wholly-owned by IIG. As noted in Item 4, IIG Capital functions primarily to source, effect and service trade finance transactions for clients of IIG. IIG Capital may also facilitate the sale of, and service, loan participations to non-clients with respect to such trade finance transactions for which it may receive fees.

IIG Trade Finance LLC is a New York limited liability company, and an affiliate of IIG dedicated to meeting the special working capital needs of small- to medium-sized merchants, traders and processors dealing in both the domestic and international markets. IIG's trade finance business was originally conducted through IIG Capital LLC, which financed over $7.5 billion of trade finance transactions since its inception in 1996. Reflecting the company's long standing commitment to trade finance and global trade, the firm rebranded this business as IIG Trade Finance in 2012.

Messrs. Hu and Silver serve in the following directorships. Mr. Hu serves on the supervisory boards of directors of Girobank N.V., a publicly listed bank in Curaçao, and IIG Bank (Malta) Ltd., a Maltese bank, and as a member of the board of directors of The Venezuela Recovery Fund N.V., a Curaçao-based fund and client of the Firm. Mr. Silver serves on the supervisory boards of directors of Girobank and IIG Bank (Malta) Ltd. and serves as a member of the board of directors of IIG Trade Opportunities Fund N.V., a Curaçao-based fund and a client of IIG. In addition to the Firm, each of the foregoing entities has its own policies and procedures in place which manage and mitigate conflicts of interest risks.

Item 11 – Code of Ethics

IIG and its employees have committed to a Code of Ethics that is available for review upon request. The Code sets out various principles to guide the daily conduct of all supervised employees, with particular focus on duties to clients, privacy of client information, conflicts of interest, fraudulent or bad acts and personal trading. The policy provides that all employees will follow the highest level of ethical standards and in keeping with the Firm's fiduciary duties to its clients. All personnel are required to report actual as well as any potential conflicts of interest. Employees are prohibited from accepting gifts from persons or entities doing business with the Firm, aside from de minimis gifts.

Employees are discouraged from engaging in any outside business activities other than uncompensated charitable endeavors. Employees are required to disclose any outside business activities, whether or not compensated. Additionally, the Code provides that IIG shall only recommend investments that it has a reasonable basis for believing are suitable for a client, based upon the client's particular situation and circumstances.

As part of our Code of Ethics policy, employees are required to disclose any personal brokerage accounts and the Firm will also receive and review duplicate confirmations and account statements with respect to such accounts.

As noted in Item 4, IIG will sell and transfer loan participations in client trade finance transactions between clients of IIG and its affiliates subject to and in accordance with each client's particular investment strategy. To mitigate the risk of favoring any client over any other client, such trades are done at book value and client portfolios are continuously monitored to ensure appropriate diversification including allocation of client investments.

On rare occasions, IIG or its related persons may invest in transactions in which IIG's clients are also invested which may create conflicts of interest. In such circumstances, IIG takes all necessary actions to ensure that IIG clients receive no less than equitable treatment with respect to such transactions.

Item 12 – Brokerage Practices

To the extent brokers are used (which, in the case of many of IIG's clients engaged in trade finance, is rare), when selecting specific broker-dealers to execute client securities trades, IIG will be sensitive to the potential perceived conflicts of interest, specifically with regard to soft dollar arrangements, client referrals and IPO allocation. All trade orders entered and/or executed are reviewed and a blotter listing all trading activity for clients is maintained. IIG reviews and reconciles statements, commission listings, confirmations, and other information from broker-dealers on at least a monthly basis.

It is IIG's policy, to the best of its ability, to achieve best execution when it places orders for client trades with broker-dealers. IIG will consider a number of factors when placing a trade for a client with a particular broker-dealer, such as: quality of overall execution services; promptness of execution; dedicated telephone lines; creditworthiness and business reputation; research (if any) provided by the broker-dealer; promptness and accuracy of execution reports; ability and willingness to correct trade errors; access various market centers; repurchase considerations; facilities, including any software or hardware provided to the advisor; market considerations; expertise with executing trades for particular types of securities; current and historical commissions; reliability; access to IPO's; reputation; execution and operational capabilities including clearing firm; and financial condition. To ensure that IIG achieves best execution for its clients, we will review on a quarterly basis the list of broker-dealers used, why they were used, and their execution quality in processing client transactions.

IIG does not currently have any soft dollar arrangements with any broker-dealers and does not anticipate entering into any such arrangements in the foreseeable future; however, IIG does receive research from various broker-dealers.

Item 13 – Review of Accounts

Accounts managed by IIG are continuously monitored by IIG's portfolio managers and Investment Committee(s) members, and supervised by the CIO, David Hu. Portfolios are monitored and their compositions are adjusted according to current and projected conditions, performance and client needs. Various portfolio reports are prepared and reviewed on a daily, weekly and/or monthly basis. In particular, daily reconciliations are performed with respect to advance processing and collections processing activity. IIG will also review each Fund's cash requirements/reconciliations and daily wire transfer logs for accuracy. Banking activity (advances and collections) will be reconciled on a detailed basis from individual bank accounts to IIG's internal records including our advance and collection journals. Client administrators are responsible for maintaining official books and records for IIG's respective client accounts and, accordingly, independently account for, review process and reconcile IIG's respective client transactions and banking activities.

Item 14 – Client Referrals and Other Compensation

IIG has entered into an agreement with one third party marketer which is compensated in the form of a percentage of any management or performance fee collected by IIG. IIG attempts to mitigate conflicts of interest by closely monitoring this arrangement and by revisiting it periodically. IIG may enter into other similar arrangements in the future.

Item 15 – Custody

For certain regulatory reasons, IIG is considered to have custody of client assets. However, IIG does not hold any client assets at its own offices, but rather utilizes the services of "qualified custodians" (usually banks) to custody client cash and securities. At times, client accounts are formally established by client administrators in conjunction with the board of directors of each client, or other governing body, as the case may be. Usually, independent Fund administrators or client representatives receive and review account statements from the qualified custodians on a routine basis on behalf of the investors of each Fund.

Item 16 – Investment Discretion

Generally, IIG exercises full discretion over our client accounts as expressly authorized in client investment advisory agreements which contain power of attorney provisions. As such, IIG ordinarily determines which investments are purchased and sold for client accounts, the amount of such purchases and sales, any brokers or dealers through which transactions may be executed, and the commission rates paid (see also Item 12). In the case of certain clients (where IIG is serving as sub-adviser), discretion may be shared or limited, and certain investment decisions may require the approval of the ultimate adviser or manager prior to investment or trade execution.

Item 17 – Voting Client Securities

Although rare given the nature of our client portfolios, IIG has adopted voting policies to best serve our clients in the event that a vote is necessary relating to any client securities.

IIG will vote proxies related to securities held by any client in a manner solely in the interest of the client. IIG will consider only those factors that relate to the client's investment, including how its vote will economically impact and affect the value of the client's investment. Proxy votes generally will be cast in favor of proposals that maintain or strengthen the shared interests of shareholders and management, increase shareholder value, maintain or increase shareholder influence over the issuer's board of directors and management, and maintain or increase the rights of shareholders; proxy votes generally will be cast against proposals having the opposite effect.

IIG has established a proxy voting committee comprised of several managers of the Firm. In addition, where appropriate, other managers of the Firm, involved in the ongoing management of a relevant client and/or in the unlikely event of any conflict of interest concerns, will be included in the Proxy Committee. The CIO will chair the Committee and be the person responsible for its decisions. Prior to any vote, the authority of the CIO to vote, and any related guidelines issued by the client will be verified.

A copy of the proxy will be retained with the relevant client's records. A copy of the proxy voting policy and procedures of IIG are available to our clients upon request.

Item 18 – Financial Information

In certain circumstances, registered investment advisors are required to provide certain financial information or disclosures about their financial condition in this Item. IIG has no financial condition that impairs its ability to meet contractual and fiduciary commitments to clients and has not been the subject of a bankruptcy proceeding.

Educational Background and Business Experience

Mr. Hu, age 55, co-founded IIG and is the Chief Investment Officer of the firm.

Prior to establishing IIG, Mr. Hu served as Managing Director-Head Trader of Emerging Markets Fixed Income at Smith Barney, Inc. and Nomura Securities International, Inc., and Senior Trader of LDC (less developed country) debt at American Express Bank Ltd. In these capacities, he had significant involvement in the trading of emerging markets debt and related instruments and the management of substantial proprietary portfolios. Mr. Hu also played a significant role in the underwriting of numerous transactions on behalf of corporations, financial institutions, and government entities.

Mr. Hu started his banking career at Mellon Bank N.A., where he structured cross-border trade transactions and served as an analyst in the bank's Metals and Mining Credit Group.

Mr. Hu speaks fluent Spanish and Chinese (Mandarin and Cantonese). He holds a Master of Business Administration degree in International Management from Thunderbird School of Global Management. He also holds an undergraduate degree in civil engineering from Universidad de San Carlos de Guatemala

Outside Business Activities and Disciplinary History

In carrying out the strategies of IIG, Mr. Hu serves in various supervisory roles for affiliates and clients of IIG and related entities, each of which at present on a non-compensated basis. He serves as a Managing Partner of IIG Capital LLC, a wholly-owned subsidiary. He serves on the Board of Directors of The Venezuela Recovery Fund N.V., a firm client. Although he is not involved in the management of the banks, he also sits on the Supervisory Board of Girobank N.V. and the Board of Directors of IIG Bank (Malta) Ltd., which are affiliates of firm client, IIG Trade Opportunities Fund N.V., to represent its interests. Mr. Hu does not have a disciplinary history.

Supervision

As a Managing Partner of IIG, Mr. Hu does not have a direct supervisor. Mr. Hu and Mr. Silver, the firm's other Managing Partner, routinely consult with one another, as well as relevant management and staff of IIG, on matters of key firm business. Mr. Hu renders investment advice strictly as a member of the firm's Investment Committee, at present comprised of Mr. Hu, Mr. Silver, Carlos R. Cano and Daniel Rochmann. Thus, it is the Investment Committee in conjunction with senior members of deal analyst teams (rather than individuals acting independently), which evaluates and approves investment decisions for the firm's clients, including the routine monitoring of the firm's client accounts.
