Advisory Business

Sonora Investment Management, LLC (Sonora) is a SEC-registered investment advisory firm, founded in 1986 by H. Bradley Toland, Jr. and Douglas R. Rogers. Timothy D. Wilcox joined the firm in November of 2003, and became the firm's third equal owner in 2007. L. Graham Gaines IV joined the firm in 2010 and Michael H. Arko joined in 2011, who became the firm's fourth and fifth equal owners in January 2017.

Sonora provides investment management to individuals, pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, charitable organizations, and small businesses. Unless otherwise directed by the client, we manage accounts on a fully discretionary basis. Our clients all share the similar objective of achieving favorable investment returns with minimal portfolio risk. We believe our approach to investing is suitable for people seeking capital preservation, income, and growth of principal as objectives. The investment process begins only after the risks involved in our approach have been fully explained and agreed upon.

Our firm is strictly a fee-only investment management firm. Annuities, insurance, stocks or bonds (for a commission), mutual funds, limited partnerships, or other commissioned products are not sold by us.

In addition, Sonora does not act as a custodian of client assets. Assets are held by third-party custodians, such as Charles Schwab & Co., Inc. Sonora is allowed to transact for clients through the custodian under a limited Power of Attorney.

The advisory services we offer generally fall into three categories: financial analysis, asset allocation, and portfolio monitoring. Making the assumption there are only two types of investors, long-term investors and speculators, we concern ourselves almost exclusively with long-term investing. As such, we do not normally trade options, commodities, futures contracts or other securities we deem speculative. We feel, however, there is a place for smaller, growth stocks which can be more volatile – generally not to exceed 10 percent of the assets we manage for a client. We will periodically use some mid-capitalization and small-capitalization company stocks to attempt to improve portfolio performance. These securities can be more volatile. We limit exposure to this category of securities.

Our expertise is active fixed income and equity management. Corporate bonds, convertible bonds and convertible preferred stocks are the primary fixed income securities we invest in. Other fixed income securities might include master limited partnerships, preferred stocks, and real estate investment trusts. Equity securities we purchase are primarily common stocks. All investments we purchase are registered securities that normally can be bought or sold daily.

Fees and Compensation

Sonora bases its fee on a percentage of assets under management. Our assets under management exceed $692,000,000 for 1715 accounts as of January 15, 2018

The fee we charge for our services is specified in our Advisory Service Agreement with each client. It is based on a percentage of the investable assets according to the following annual schedule:

Assets Under Management	Annual Rate
$0 - $2,000,000	1.00%
$2,000,001 - $5,000,000	0.80%
$5,000,001 - $10,000,000	0.50%
All amounts over $10,000,000	0.30%

Fees generally are non-negotiable. Current client relationships may exist where our fee is lower than the fee schedule above.

All investment management fees are billed quarterly, in advance, meaning that we invoice before the three-month billing period has ended. Additionally, Schwab Advisor Network referrals are billed in arrears to the date of inception. Payment in full is expected upon invoice presentation. Fees are usually deducted from a designated client account to facilitate collection. The client must consent in advance to direct fee-withdrawal from their investment account.

Although the Advisory Service Agreement is an ongoing agreement, we, or the client, may terminate our Agreement by written notice to the other party. Upon termination of any account, unearned fees will be promptly refunded. The portfolio value at the completion of the prior billing quarter is used as the basis for the fee computation.

Sonora's fee is exclusive of brokerage commissions, transaction fees, and other related costs the custodian may charge the client. Mutual funds and exchange traded funds also charge internal management fees, which are disclosed in the fund's prospectus. These fees are also exclusive of the fee paid to Sonora. Again, Sonora does not derive revenue from any source besides our quarterly investment management fee.

Performance-Based Fees

Sonora does not use a performance-based fee structure because of the potential conflict of interest. This conflict is that performance-based compensation may cause an adviser to assume more risk than is suitable for the client.

Types of Clients

Sonora generally provides portfolio management to individuals. We also provide our services to pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, or charitable organizations and corporations.

Sonora has a minimum account size for third-party referred accounts of $500,000. However, lesser amounts may be negotiated from time to time depending on circumstances. We reserve the right to refuse to accept proposed management responsibilities or to resign from the management of any individual agreement we have.

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies, and Risk of Loss

Security analysis methods include fundamental analysis and technical analysis. Doug Rogers, Brad Toland, Tim Wilcox,, and Mike Arko all analyze companies – it is a team approach. We must all agree before a prospective investment is included on our buy list.

We own companies with the following characteristics:

- Businesses with competitive and leadership positions
- Good historical financial returns
- Strong balance sheets
- Prudent debt levels
- Younger companies having a competitive advantage we feel will generate good future returns

We research companies in-house. Our primary source of information is from the companies themselves: annual and quarterly reports, SEC filings, and conversations with management. In general, we focus on companies and industries most likely to benefit from the economic, social, and demographic trends dominant or emerging in our society. Individual stock selection is usually in mid-to-large size companies. Other sources of information include various financial publications, research materials prepared by others.

Companies do not increase in value overnight. It normally takes years for a company to materially grow revenues and earnings. For this reason we look at the long-term potential and viability of a company, while ignoring short-term price volatility. We would prefer to own an investment in perpetuity. However, we will sell a holding when we feel the company is overvalued, when the underlying reasons for owning it have changed, if better opportunities come along, or when the position size becomes too large as a percentage of one's overall portfolio. We limit individual positions to approximately 5% upon purchase and 1% to 2% for more speculative positions. We will allow positions to appreciate in excess of 5%.

A benefit of investing in individual stocks and bonds is one has control over when, or whether, to sell stocks and realize capital gains for taxable accounts. In addition, matching gains with losses allows us to better control tax liabilities. Over time, deferring capital gains can add significantly to a portfolio's value. We are mindful of this.

A convertible security is a bond or preferred stock which can be exchanged for the common stock of the issuing company. The conversion privilege usually lasts for the life of the bond or preferred stock. At the option of the convertible holder, the security may be exchanged for a fixed number of shares of common stock. Also important, many convertible bonds have a put feature allowing the holder to exchange the bond for cash, normally $1000 (or par), at set intervals during the life of the bond. These features – convertibility and putability – reduce the long-term interest rate risk when compared to regular bonds.

Two important caveats with regard to the purchase of convertible securities are: 1) convertibles must be carefully selected and monitored and, 2) a portfolio of convertibles requires much more diversification than a portfolio of government or high-grade corporate bonds.

It is our contention that a portfolio of convertible securities can provide a total return over a full market cycle comparable to the return provided by equities, but with less volatility and higher current income. While past performance is no guarantee of future results, we believe that convertibles merit consideration as an appropriate asset class for many investors

All investment programs have certain risks that are borne by the investor. Our investment approach constantly keeps the risk of loss in mind. Investors face the following investment risks:

- Interest-rate Risk: Fluctuations in interest rates may cause investment prices to fluctuate. For example, when interest rates rise, yields on existing bonds become less attractive, causing their market values to decline.
- Market Risk: The price of a security, bond, or mutual fund may drop in reaction to tangible and intangible events and conditions. This type of risk is caused by external factors independent of a security's particular underlying circumstances. For example, political, economic and social conditions may trigger market events.
- Inflation Risk: When any type of inflation is present, a dollar today will not buy as much as a dollar next year, because purchasing power is eroding at the rate of inflation.
- Currency Risk: Overseas investments are subject to fluctuations in the value of the dollar against the currency of the investment's originating country. This is also referred to as exchange rate risk.
- Reinvestment Risk: This is the risk that future proceeds from investments may have to be reinvested at a potentially lower rate of return (i.e. interest rate). This primarily relates to fixed income securities.
- Business Risk: These risks are associated with a particular industry or a particular company within an industry. For example, oil-drilling companies depend on finding oil and then refining it, a lengthy process, before they can generate a profit. They carry a higher risk of profitability than an electric company, which generates its income from a steady stream of customers who buy electricity no matter what the economic environment is like.

- Liquidity Risk: Liquidity is the ability to readily convert an investment into cash. Generally, assets are more liquid if many traders are interested in a standardized product. For example, Treasury Bills are highly liquid, while real estate properties are not. During the period between October of 2008 and March of 2009 the convertible bond market became very illiquid as a result of the financial banking crisis.
- Financial Risk: Excessive borrowing to finance a business' operations increases the risk of profitability, because the company must meet the terms of its obligations in good times and bad. During periods of financial stress, the inability to meet loan obligations may result in bankruptcy and/or a declining market value.

Disciplinary Information

We are proud to say our firm and its employees have not been involved in legal or disciplinary events related to past or present investment clients.

Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

Sonora only receives compensation directly from our clients. We receive no compensation from outside sources.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions, and Personal Trading

The employees of Sonora have committed to a Code of Ethics that is available for review by clients and prospective clients upon request. The code includes provisions relating to the confidentiality of client information, a prohibition on insider trading, and personal securities trading. All supervised persons must acknowledge the terms of the code.

Sonora and its employees may buy or sell securities that are also held by clients. In fact, we encourage this practice. We believe it better aligns our interests with that of our clients – we eat our own cooking. Employees may not knowingly trade their own securities ahead of client trades. Front running, the act of buying a security ahead of our client's large block purchase and subsequently and immediately selling same security for short term gain, is strictly prohibited. From time to time, members of Sonora will purchase securities that we feel might be appropriate for clients sometime in the future – this is not front running. We believe ownership focuses our attention on a company, for research purposes, in a manner like no other. Employees are allowed to buy and sell for their own accounts on a short term basis, but they are not allowed to participate in cross trades with clients effected by the firm.

The Chief Compliance Officer of Sonora is Sara S. Alexander. She reviews all employee transactions before they are made. Her trades are reviewed by one of the members of Sonora. The personal trading reviews ensure that the personal trading of employees does not affect the markets so that clients of the firm receive preferential treatment. Since most employee trades are small in nature, the trades do not materially affect the securities pricing.

Brokerage Practices

Client assets are held with third-party brokerage custodians. We do recommend brokerage custodians to clients when they have no other relationship or preference. Sonora recommends custodians based on the proven integrity and financial responsibility of the firm and the best execution of orders at reasonable commission rates, principally with Charles Schwab.

Sonora does not receive fees or commissions from any of these arrangements.

Sonora reviews the execution of trades at each custodian periodically throughout the year. Trading fees charged by the aforementioned custodians are reasonable to us.

Best execution in regards to the purchase and sale of convertible bonds is achieved by shopping buys and sells at different brokerage firms. Convertible bonds are not as actively traded as treasury bonds and harder to find. On any given day there may only be one seller or buyer. Before purchasing or selling a convertible bond, we check with the custodian for their best price, but also independently check with Value Line's prices to help determine the fairness of prices we accept. Value Line Convertible Survey has been a trusted third party source of convertible bond information for over 40 years. In addition, we request that our clients sign a Prime Brokerage Agreement with their custodian, which allows us to price, and transact with various other brokerage firms, if offering better pricing than the custodian.

Sonora will combine or "batch" orders to obtain best execution when purchasing a security for multiple accounts.

Sonora's allocation policy is to prioritize accounts with the largest amounts of unrestricted cash available and if needed, as a secondary allocation method, will utilize the A to Z, Z to A method.

When deemed appropriate for both parties, Sonora may work with custodians/brokers to effect cross trades on behalf of clients. We do not receive any additional compensation for such trades and the custodian/broker determines the price based on its evaluation of the available bid and offer prices at that time and complies with its internal rules for order execution. Sonora will review cross trades as part of its best execution review. Sonora employees are not permitted to participate in these cross trades. Sonora is not affiliated with the custodians/brokers involved, and is not itself a broker.

Sonora has no formal "soft dollar" arrangements with any brokerage firm. We do receive research from various brokerage firms with whom we do business, but only have alternative relationships to custodian for best execution benefits.

Sonora receives client referrals from Charles Schwab & Co., Inc. ("Schwab") through Sonora's participation in Schwab Advisor Network® ("the Service"). The Service is designed to help investors find an independent investment advisor. Schwab is a broker-dealer independent of and unaffiliated with Sonora. Schwab does not supervise Sonora and has no responsibility for Sonora's management of clients' portfolios or Sonora's other advice or services. Sonora pays Schwab fees to receive client referrals through the Service. Sonora's participation in the Service may raise potential conflicts of interest described below.

Sonora pays Schwab a Participation Fee on all referred clients' accounts that are maintained in custody at Schwab and a Non-Schwab Custody Fee on all accounts that are maintained at, or transferred to, another custodian. The Participation Fee paid by Sonora is a percentage of the fees the client owes to Sonora or a percentage of the value of the assets in the client's account, subject to a minimum Participation Fee. Sonora pays Schwab the Participation Fee for so long as the referred client's account remains in custody at Schwab. The Participation Fee is billed to Sonora quarterly and may be increased, decreased or waived by Schwab from time to time. The Participation Fee is paid by Sonora and not by the client. Sonora has agreed not to charge clients referred through the Service fees or costs greater than the fees or costs Sonora charges clients with similar portfolios who were not referred through the Service.

Sonora generally pays Schwab a Non-Schwab Custody Fee if custody of a referred client's account is not maintained by, or assets in the account are transferred from Schwab. This Fee does not apply if the client was solely responsible for the decision not to maintain custody at Schwab. The Non-Schwab Custody Fee is a one-time payment equal to a percentage of the assets placed with a custodian other than Schwab. The Non-Schwab Custody Fee is higher than the Participation Fees Sonora generally would pay in a single year. Thus, Sonora will have an incentive to recommend that client accounts be held in custody at Schwab.

The Participation and Non-Schwab Custody Fees will be based on assets in accounts of Sonora's clients who were referred by Schwab and those referred clients' family members living in the same household. Thus, Sonora will have incentives to encourage household members of clients referred through the Service to maintain custody of their accounts and execute transactions at Schwab and to instruct Schwab to debit Sonora's fees directly from the accounts.

For accounts of Sonora's clients maintained in custody at Schwab, Schwab will not charge the client separately for custody but will receive compensation from Sonora's clients in the form of commissions or other transaction-related compensation on securities trades executed through Schwab. Schwab also will receive a fee (generally lower than the applicable commission on trades it executes) for clearance and settlement of trades executed through broker-dealers other than Schwab. Schwab's fees for trades executed at other broker-dealers are in addition to the other broker-dealer's fees. Thus, Sonora may have an incentive to cause trades to be executed through Schwab rather than another broker-dealer. Sonora, nevertheless, acknowledges its duty to seek best execution of trades for client accounts. Trades for client accounts held in custody at Schwab may be executed through a different broker-dealer than trades for Sonora's other clients. Thus, trades for accounts custodied at Schwab may be executed at different times and different prices than trades for other accounts that are executed at other broker-dealers.

While Sonora has not entered into this type of agreement with other broker-dealers, we may in the future.

Review of Accounts

Account reviews are performed quarterly by Tim Wilcox, Doug Rogers, Mike Arko, and Brad Toland. They are performed more frequently when market conditions or clients dictate. We do not have a limitation on the number of client accounts assigned to any particular officer, nor is there a precise sequence or review schedule other than quarterly. We monitor the underlying investments we own daily, however.

Our reports are furnished quarterly to all clients. In addition, clients receive monthly statements from their custodian. Clients are encouraged to compare the statements from the custodian to our reports. Our reports include a portfolio statement and rate of return analysis. In general, meetings with clients are held once or twice a year; or more or less frequently, depending on client's circumstances.

Other conditions that may trigger a review are changes in the new investment information and changes in a client's situation.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

Sonora has been fortunate to receive many client referrals over the years. The referrals came from current clients, estate planning attorneys, accountants, employees, personal friends of employees and other similar sources. Generally, we do not compensate referring parties for these referrals. There may be occasions such as the Schwab Advisor Network arrangement described in the Brokerage Practices section above when we will pay a percentage of the fee we receive from accounts that have been referred to us. In such case, the client will receive a separate written disclosure statement explaining the arrangement. Our policy is that if we do pay such referral fee, the fee schedule applicable to that client will be the same as other clients of similar size.

Custody

Sonora does not have custody of client assets. We are deemed to have custody by the Securities and Exchange Commission, however, because we are allowed to debit client accounts for our fee, and because some of our clients have authorized us to affect third party transfers from their accounts pursuant to Standing Letters of Authorization. All clients assets are held at a qualified custodian. This allows clients to see their assets independently of Sonora.

Investment Discretion

Sonora has discretionary authority to manage securities accounts on behalf of our clients. Prior to assuming discretionary authority, clients are provided an Agreement and our current ADV Part 2A and Part 2B. By signing the Agreement, clients grant Sonora discretionary investment authority over their account. Sonora has the authority to determine, without obtaining specific client consent, the securities to be bought or sold, and the amount of the securities to be bought or sold.

Clients do have the ability to place restrictions on their accounts. Common restrictions prohibit us from buying specific companies because of social restrictions.

Voting Client Securities

As part of our fiduciary responsibilities, Sonora will vote all client proxies unless the client directs us not to. In absence of specific voting guidelines from the client, Sonora will vote proxies in the best interest of our clients. Sonora's policy is to vote all proxies from a specific issuer the same way for each client absent restrictions from clients. Clients are permitted to place reasonable restrictions on Sonora's voting authority in the same manner that they may place restrictions on the selection of account securities.

Sonora will generally vote in favor of routine corporate housekeeping proposals.

Sonora will generally vote against proposals that cause board members to become entrenched or cause unequal voting rights.

In reviewing proposals, Sonora will further consider the opinion of management and the effect on management, and the effect on shareholder value and the issuer's business practices.

Sonora will retain copies of all votes. You have the right to request in writing a copy of our full proxy voting procedures and a copy of votes cast.

Financial Information

Sonora does not have any financial impairment that will preclude the firm from meeting contractual commitments to clients. We reserve cash, insure against most contingencies, and hold no debt.

A balance sheet is not required to be provided because Sonora does not serve as a custodian for client funds or securities, and does not require prepayment of fees of more than three months in advance.
