A. G. Bisset & Co., Inc. was founded in 1981 to provide currency hedging advice to corporations, institutional investors and professional money managers around the world. The company began to manage active currency hedging programs for institutional investors in 1988 and it initiated management currency alpha programs for institutional investors in 2002.

A. G. Bisset Associates, LLC assumed by application A. G. Bisset & Co., Inc.’s registration as a Commodity Trading Advisor (CTA) with the National Futures Association (NFA) as of October 1, 2011.

A. G. Bisset also provides an Advisory Service that provides investment advice and timing advice on currencies, interest rates, equity markets and selected spot commodity prices based on models A. G. Bisset & Co., Inc. developed in 1983 and which A. G. Bisset now owns and operates.

The currency hedging and currency alpha programs are implemented by A. G. Bisset acting as a client’s Agent using foreign exchange trading lines and credit provided by counterparties to clients in their name and risk. Investment Management Agreements tailored to each client’s needs, objectives and risk appetite determine the scope of each currency mandate.

Currency positions are implemented in the name and risk of clients using currency spot and currency forward contracts in the global currency market. There is no use of options or futures.

All currency programs are managed with the company’s proprietary models that were designed to identify price-trends in currencies typically lasting a few weeks to a few months in duration. The output of the models is used to place and remove currency hedges while it is used in the currency alpha programs to buy and sell currencies to generate a profit.

A. G. Bisset Associates, LLC – Form ADV Part 2

TYPES OF CLIENTS

A. G. Bisset clients are public pension funds, pension plans, endowments, foundations, trusts, hedge funds, investment managers and High Net-Worth Individuals.

The required minimum for a managed currency account is $1 million.

METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES, AND RISK OF LOSS

A. G. Bisset applies proprietary models to identify price-trends and directional changes in price-trends that typically have durations of a few weeks up to a few months, averaging approximately 2-4 months in duration.

The models utilize price-momentum to identify when a price is “over-bought” or “over-sold” in the short-term of 2-4 months within longer-term price-trends of a year or longer. The models rely on mean-reversion in those short-term trends to generate signals to buy and sell.

The models were developed in 1983 and have been applied to manage active currency hedging programs since 1988 and currency alpha programs since 2002.

The investment strategy and philosophy can be categorized as technical or quantitative.

The output of the models is applied systematically in a highly disciplined and rules-based process in A. G. Bisset’s active currency hedging programs to place and remove hedges on underlying currency exposures that are associated with clients’ investment portfolios. The objective of these active hedging programs is to reduce the risk of loss from currency translation losses when currencies decline in value, while permitting clients’ underlying investment portfolios to benefit from gains in underlying currency exposures when currencies rise in value.

Likewise, the output of the models is applied systematically in a highly disciplined and rules-based process in A. G. Bisset’s currency alpha programs coupled with rules that actively manages the leverage when an alpha program includes the use of leverage. The objective of the alpha program is to generate gains from buying and selling currencies, with or without the use of leverage as agreed with each client.

A. G. Bisset Associates, LLC – Form ADV Part 2

All strategies are implemented using currency spot and currency forward contracts in the global currency market utilizing credit lines established by clients with counterparties for the purpose of A. G. Bisset acting and an Agent trading on their name and risk.

Investing in a managed currency program (hedging and/or alpha) involves risks. There are material risks of loss at any time and prospective clients should not invest in any investment product unless they are willing to bear the risk of losing their entire investment.

Risks that are specific to managed currency programs managed by A. G. Bisset include:

Market Risk: This is the risk that the positions taken by the manager will not benefit from the market environment. This specifically includes being long a currency when the currency declines in value; being short a currency when it appreciates in value; or not being short in a currency when it declines in value.

Cash Flow Risk: Since currency positions are initiated with counterparties using currency forward contracts for specific value dates and these contracts are closed by an offsetting currency spot or currency forward contract for the same value dates, gains and losses must be settled with cash. The settlement of a loss involves a client paying the loss to the counterparty on the value date. As a result, a client may have to liquidate a portion or all of an underlying investment to raise cash with which to pay a loss.

Interest Rate Risk: The price of a currency forward contract is determined by the spot price adjusted by the forward premium or discount, which reflects the approximate difference in interest rates between currencies. In an environment when the market does not move, or interest rates are changing, the forward premium or discount can result in a loss.

Operational Risk: This is the manager level risk that results from the inability to implement the investment program. These risks could be related to but are not limited to failures in the manager's infrastructure, technology, natural disasters or inability or omission to follow client guidelines or will full malfeasance.

Counterparty Risk: This is the risk that a counterparty (credit provider, i.e. trading bank or institution) will be unable to continue to provide credit or executed trades. In this event, a client could become unable to establish or exit currency positions resulting in the potential for substantial losses. Additionally, counterparties may fail or suspend trading for various reasons.

Sovereign Risk: This is the risk that currency exchange controls could be enacted when a manager has a position in a certain currency. Sovereign actions such as preventing the convertibility of a currency can create a situation where a client cannot deliver to or receive currency from counterparties or may have to settle a gain or a loss in an unfavorable manner.
