Item 4 – Services, Fees and Compensation

Equity Services, Inc. (“ESI”) is a registered broker/dealer, as well as a federally-registered investment adviser, doing business as ESI Financial Advisors (“EFA” or “the Firm”). Equity Services, Inc. was founded in 1968 as an affiliate of National Life Insurance Company (“National Life”), which began doing business in 1848. NLV Financial Corporation is the sole shareholder of Equity Services, Inc., and the National Life Group companies, which include National Life Insurance Company, and Life Insurance Company of the Southwest. EFA provides financial planning/consulting services and asset management services to individuals, corporations, trusts, estates, charitable organizations, and retirement plans including pension and profit sharing plans. EFA has been registered with the SEC since 1992. As of 12/31/2019, the Firm managed approximately $1.2 billion in non-discretionary assets and approximately $183 million in discretionary assets across all of its advisory programs.

Before investing in an advisory program, clients should decide if they are comfortable delegating the day-to-day management of their account(s). Investors in advisory programs typically:

- Desire advice and guidance when making investment decisions;
- When working with a discretionary manager, are at ease with a financial professional making their day-to-day investment decisions;
- Are willing to follow a disciplined investment strategy;
- Are comfortable paying quarterly, asset-based (percentage) fees for investments and advice rather than individual commissions or sales charges.

EFA offers a variety of advisory programs, many of which engage the services of third-party asset managers (“TPAM”) with discretionary trading authority, and some in which the client is required to authorize some or all trading activity in their account. Clients should ensure they understand the nature of their advisory agreement with EFA and any other TPAM they engage to provide asset management and/or financial planning services.

ESI Directions

EFA has established an asset management program, on its ESI Illuminations platform, called ESI Directions. ESI Directions accounts may hold assets such as stocks, bonds, options, mutual funds, exchange-traded funds (“ETFs”), unit investment trusts, certificates of deposit, and structured products. Clients include individuals, pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, or charitable organizations, corporations or other business entities.

Under the ESI Directions program, the client and the Investment Adviser Representative (“advisor” or “IAR”) compile pertinent financial and other information to develop an investment program designed to meet the client’s goals and objectives. The advisor uses a system provided by Envestnet|PMC, Inc. (“Envestnet”), a third party vendor, to analyze the client’s information, and recommends an appropriate strategy and asset allocation, called an “investment model”. The investment model is based on the client’s needs and objectives, investment time horizon, risk tolerance and any other pertinent factors. The advisor then recommends securities that correspond to the recommended investment model. Advisors may make different recommendations for the same investment strategies. Advisors must meet certain minimum qualification standards, established by ESI, before they can recommend ESI Directions as a solution for any client. IARs that qualify to participate in ESI Directions utilize a third-party research service that provides company and fund-specific analysis tools research from third-party providers.

Discretion

ESI Directions accounts established prior to March 30, 2016 did not grant the Firm nor its advisory representatives the authority to exercise investment discretion. However, the owner(s) of such accounts have the ability to grant discretion, under the parameters listed below, by providing written authorization in a form acceptable to the Firm.

ESI Directions accounts established after March 30, 2016 have granted the Firm discretionary trading authority, under the parameters listed below:

The discretionary investment and trading authority given to EFA, meaning the authority to rebalance the existing holdings in a client's account through purchasing and selling securities without first obtaining the client's express permission, is permitted in the circumstances described below:

- Executing transactions in the account for the purpose of rebalancing the portfolio back to within the client's risk tolerance, as determined by the latest Investor Profile Questionnaire on file with the Firm;
- Executing transactions when concerned that a variance may result because an account's risk score has changed;
- Using discretion as to the time the Firm will make a trade in the account and the price paid for securities in accordance with the Firm's obligation to seek best execution.

In no instance do either EFA or the IAR have authority to choose or change the client's investment objective. Additionally, neither EFA nor the IAR are permitted to introduce new holdings to the portfolio without the client's express permission.

The discretionary investment and trading authority given to EFA can be exercised by the Firm and/or the client's IAR at any time and without prior notice to the client. All clients (discretionary and non-discretionary) receive quarterly statements from National Financial Services, LLC ("NFS"), detailing activity in their account(s). Clients should carefully review their statements upon receipt. Questions regarding trading activity should be directed to the client's IAR.

Services

Advisory representatives recommend securities to clients on the basis of the client's individual financial situation. Each client selects the account's investment objective and has the opportunity to impose reasonable restrictions on the recommendations the advisory representative makes to the client. Additionally, clients are offered an investment review by the advisory representative, at least annually. On a quarterly basis, they are reminded to confirm the accuracy of their information, and to determine if there are any changes to their investment objectives or restrictions. The advisory representative is available to answer any questions, and to implement any changes the client requests as a result of changes in their finances, personal circumstances, or the financial markets.

The ESI Directions program provides clients with a range of investment advisory services. EFA, the advisory representative, and Envestnet each provide certain services to the program (Envestnet and EFA are not affiliated). These services include:

- Assessment of the client's investment needs and objectives;
- Recommendation of an investment model;

- Development and recommendation of an asset allocation model designed to meet the client's objectives;
- Evaluation of securities meeting the investment model and allocation criteria;
- Periodic reviews to ensure accounts adhere to policy guidelines and asset allocation;
- Recommendations for account rebalancing, if necessary;
- Online and paper reporting of account performance; and
- Custody services, trade execution, and confirmation and statement generation, through NFS.

Though all of the above-referenced services may be offered, the client can select one or more of the services. EFA does not require the client to utilize all services offered above. However, all ESI Directions assets are custodied at NFS.

Investment recommendations include mutual funds from which ESI (acting in its capacity as broker/dealer) receives compensation through revenue sharing arrangements. Not all mutual funds used on the platform provide the Firm with such additional revenue. Funds that do not pay the Firm additional revenue, and which provide substantially similar market exposure as those that do, are available.

What Clients Should Know About Advisory Accounts

When making the determination of whether a Directions account is appropriate for their needs, clients should bear in mind that fee-based accounts, when compared with commission-based accounts, often result in lower transaction costs during periods when trading activity is heavier, such as the year an account is established. However, during periods when trading activity is lower, fee-based accounts may result in a higher annual cost to the client than a traditional brokerage account. Thus, depending on a number of factors, the total cost under a fee-based account, versus a commission-based account, can vary significantly. Factors which affect the cost of maintaining an account include account size, amount of turnover within the account, type and quantities of securities purchased or sold, commission rates, and the client's tax situation.

In a wrap fee program, such as ESI Directions, internal expenses, trading costs, and other administrative expenses are included in the total fee paid by the client. As such, the advisory fee you negotiate with your advisor may be higher for an account in a wrap fee program than it might be for accounts in other advisory programs that offer similar services, but which do not offer a bundled approach to pricing. Clients should ensure they understand the services and product features being provided for the fee they agree to pay, and are free to accept or decline any program offered by EFA and/or the advisor.

Clients should discuss the program with their advisory representative and read this Appendix 1 carefully, as it explains this program in detail.

Fees and Expenses: NTF vs Non-NTF Funds

When considering the use of no-transaction fee ("NTF") funds, versus non-NTF funds, it is important to understand the associated differences in fees and expenses. Compared to other funds, NTF funds typically have higher internal expenses, (comprised of fees charged by the fund) which are deducted from the funds' assets, based on a percentage of the funds' assets. Accordingly, these expenses reduce the returns of your investment if you purchase these funds. However, by using NTF funds, clients do not pay "transaction fees," which are set fees that are otherwise charged in conjunction with each purchase or sale of mutual fund shares. Your brokerage agreement describes transaction fees in more detail.

Sometimes, but not always, clients could save money by paying transaction fees, rather than using higher-expense NTF funds. Whether or not a client saves money depends on several factors. Factors that increase the internal fund expenses you pay include:

- How much more expensive the NTF fund is compared to a less expensive alternative; and
- The amount of assets held in NTF funds.

Factors that increase the amount the client would pay in ticket charges, but would otherwise avoid by using NTF funds, include:

- How often the manager makes (or recommends) the purchase or sale of shares, such as when rebalancing the account;
- How often funds are deposited into the account, which would be used to purchase additional mutual fund shares, resulting in transaction charges;
- How often withdrawals are requested from the account, which would likely result in the sale of mutual fund shares to generate cash for the withdrawal amount;
- Whether the client changes their investment strategy, which would result in selling current positions to purchase new ones; and/or
- Any other action that results in the purchase and/or the sale of mutual fund shares.

For example: an advisory account funded with $100,000 could purchase NTF funds. If these funds, on average, had higher internal expenses of 0.33% (as compared to available non-NTF share classes of the same fund), the mutual funds in your account would cost you $330 more in fees each year than their cheaper alternative. However, using the less expensive alternative funds would result in the assessment of ticket charges when 1) the funds were initially purchased, 2) the manager rebalances the holdings (or recommends rebalancing) or otherwise changes the funds in their investment model, and 3) funds are sold to make a withdrawal from the account. If the cost of each transaction was $13, and there were 25 transactions in the account in a year, the use of NTF funds would avoid $325 in transaction fees. Accordingly, under this hypothetical scenario, the additional expense of the higher-expense NTF funds is approximately the same as the amount that would be saved by not paying ticket charges.

The example above is strictly intended for illustrative purposes, and does not reflect the experience of any particular client or program offered through EFA. Clients should discuss these issues with their advisor, especially if their account is over $100,000 in value.

Within the Directions program, advisors may recommend the use of NTF funds when building a portfolio. If the client is not comfortable with the fees and expenses associated with NTF, funds versus less expensive alternatives, and would prefer to pay ticket charges, they should instruct their advisor to not recommend NTF funds, and they should not agree to purchase NTF funds.

Program Fees

In ESI Directions accounts, “program fee” refers to the total fee charged to the client, which is comprised of:

- 1) the platform fee;
- 2) EFA’s fee for service, as negotiated between the client and the IAR.

EFA retains the platform fee. Annually, eligible IARs receive a portion of the platform fee that was paid to the Firm, based on the average monthly amount of total client assets they had on the Illuminations platform over the previous year. Specifically, IARs receive payments according to the following schedule:

Average Monthly Balance on ESI Illuminations Platform	Credit
$0 – $4,999,999	0%
$5,000,000 - $25,000,000	0.01%
$25,000,001 - $50,000,000	0.015%
$50,000,001 - $100,000,000	0.02%
$100,000,001 +	0.03%

For illustrative purposes, under this model, an advisor whose average monthly AUM is $10 million would receive $1,000 (or 0.01%) from ESI. This income is paid to the advisor out of the revenue that would otherwise be retained by the Firm, and does not result in an increased fee to your account. However, this incentive creates a conflict of interest in that the advisor receives more compensation for placing assets on the Illuminations platform than they might otherwise receive by using another asset management provider. If you are not comfortable with this, you can select another advisory program offered by ESI that is not on the illuminations platform.

On a quarterly basis, a portion of the fee for service (typically between 50%-85%) is paid to the IAR according to their compensation agreement with EFA. The fee for service charged may not exceed the schedule provided in this Brochure. The fee for service is negotiable and assessed on an individual basis according to methods disclosed to and agreed upon in advance with the client via the Statement of Investment Selection (“SIS”). When determining the fee charged for services provided, the advisory representative considers, among other factors, the complexity of the work performed, time involved, degree of responsibility of the advisory representative, special needs and characteristics of the client, and the types of investments. Program fees are payable quarterly in advance.

All ESI Directions accounts are charged a platform fee, which ranges from 0.12%-0.18%, based on account size, in addition to the fee for service charged by EFA, which can range from 0%–2.00%. The total program fee is provided to the client via the SIS, which is provided to and signed by the client at the time the account is opened. The quarterly program fee for ESI Directions accounts is billed based on the account’s average daily balance over the previous quarter, but billing is in advance. If a client chooses to close their ESI Directions account before the end of a quarter, they will receive a reimbursement of fees paid, prorated for the number of days remaining in the quarter for which asset management services will not be provided.

New accounts opened during the first or second month of the quarter are billed initially for the days from inception to the end of the quarter, based on the initial value. New accounts opened during the last month of the quarter are initially billed for the days from inception to the end of the month, plus the next full quarter. The initial payment will become due in full on the date the account is accepted, and will be based on the account asset value as of that date. Subsequent quarterly program fees will be calculated based upon the account value as of the closing date of the quarter that just ended.

Program fees charged may be more or less than if a client paid separately for investment advice, brokerage and other services, or when compared to other available programs, subject to a number of factors, such as the level of trading in a client’s account, and the cost of services, if provided separately. The advisory representative receives a portion of the fee for service charged to the client, and this compensation may be more or less than the compensation the advisory representative would have received if the client had participated in other programs or paid separately for advice, brokerage, and other services. The remaining portion of the fee for service is retained by EFA and/or the advisory representative's supervisor, depending on the advisory representative's compensation schedule. The advisory representative could have a financial incentive to recommend a wrap fee program over other programs or services.

Fee adjustments for withdrawal of funds in one quarter will be made in the following quarter. If NFS is the custodian of the client's account, cash balances in taxable accounts will be held in Fidelity Prime Fund (FZBXX) and cash balances in retirement accounts will be held in Fidelity Cash Reserves (FDRXX), unless a different election is made by the client.

Any fee owed pursuant to the terms of the SIS will be deducted, by the custodian, from the client's account. All fees paid will be reported to the client on the quarterly statements.

The program fee does not cover certain charges associated with securities transactions in clients' accounts, including: (i) dealer markups, markdowns or spreads charged on transactions in over-the-counter securities; (ii) costs relating to trading in certain foreign securities; (iii) the fees and expenses imposed by mutual funds and closed-end funds, unit investment trusts, exchange-traded funds or real estate investment trusts (such as operating expenses, management fees, redemption fees, 12b-1 fees and other fees and expenses as stated in the fund's prospectus or offering document); (iv) the charge to carry tax lot information on transferred mutual funds or other pooled funds, postage and handling charges, returned check charges, transfer taxes; stock exchange fees or other fees mandated by law, and (v) any brokerage commissions or other charges, including contingent deferred sales charges ("CDSC"), imposed upon the liquidation of "in-kind assets" that are transferred into the program. Liquidation of in-kind assets can result in tax consequences. Clients should consult their tax advisor accordingly.

The program fee does not cover certain fees that are charged to clients by the custodian. Clients generally also pay for specific account services, such as ACAT transfers, electronic fund and wire transfer charges, and for other optional services elected by clients. Accounts with holdings that are not classified as "no-transaction fee" (or "NTF") are subject to transaction-based ticket charges, assessed by the custodian and EFA, for the purchase and sale of non-NTF securities and mutual funds. These transactional costs are borne by the representative(s) on the account. The program fee does not cover certain non-brokerage-related fees such as individual retirement account ("IRA") trustee or custodian fees, tax-qualified retirement plan account fees, and annual or termination fees for retirement accounts (such as IRAs).

Clients often incur redemption fees when the advisory representative and the client determine to sell shares of a security before the expiration of the security's minimum holding period. Depending on the length of the redemption period, the particular investment strategy, and/or market circumstances, the advisory representative and the client may be able to minimize any redemption fees when it is reasonable to allow a client to remain invested in a security until the minimum holding period expires. Please see the specific mutual fund's prospectus for detailed information regarding such fees. Certain applicable fees can be avoided through the selection of mutual fund share classes which are not subject to such applicable fees, if clients are eligible for such reduced fee share classes.

Item 5 – Account Requirements and Types of Clients

The minimum account size to participate in the ESI Directions program is generally $50,000. The minimum account size is subject to increase or decrease at EFA's discretion based upon the circumstances of each client.

Clients include individuals, corporations, trusts, estates and charitable organizations. The Firm reserves the right to prohibit anyone or any account type from investing in any of its advisory programs if it believes the recommended program is not an appropriate investment strategy for the client.

Item 6 – Portfolio Manager Selection and Evaluation

EFA has contracted with Envestnet to provide performance reporting, fee calculation and billing, and to generate suggested rebalancing trades for the client's account. Envestnet generates a Time Weighted Rate of Return ("TWRR"), calculated net of all fees, for each account. This information is included on the client's Quarterly Performance Report. EFA does not calculate investment performance on a uniform basis. EFA does not monitor or review performance data, provided from Envestnet, for accuracy.

Performance-Based Fees and Side-By-Side Management

EFA does not charge any performance-based fees (fees based on a share of capital gains or capital appreciation of the assets of a client).

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

EFA's advisory representatives generally use technical and/or fundamental analysis when analyzing securities. Technical analysis generally involves studying trends and movements in a security's price, trading volume, and other market-related factors in an attempt to discern patterns. Fundamental analysis generally involves assessing a company's or security's value based on factors such as sales, assets, markets, management, products and services, earnings, and financial structure. Sources of information for analysis include research material acquired from outside vendors, financial newspapers and magazines, annual reports, prospectuses, filings with the SEC and company press releases.

Investment strategies used to implement investment advice to clients may include: long term purchases (securities held at least a year), short term purchases (securities sold within a year), trading (securities sold within 30 days), margin transactions, and option writing.

The advisor will utilize certain asset allocation tools and investment research materials prepared by third-party investment advisers in constructing an appropriate asset allocation for a client and in monitoring the performance of the investment portfolio selected.

Investing in securities involves several risks of which clients should be informed, and prepared to bear, prior to investing. The list below explains the various forms of risk associated with investing in securities:

Common stocks may decline significantly in price over short or extended periods of time. Price changes may occur in the market as a whole, or they may occur in only a particular country, company, industry, or sector of the market. In addition, the types of stocks in which a particular fund invests, such as value stocks, growth stocks, large-capitalization stocks, mid-capitalization stocks, small-capitalization stocks and/or micro-capitalization stocks, may underperform the market as a whole. In addition, growth stocks can be more volatile than other types of stocks. Value stocks can continue to be undervalued by the market for long periods of time. Additionally, dividends paid on common stocks can vary significantly over the short-term and long-term. Dividends on common stocks are not fixed, but are declared at the discretion of an issuer's board of directors. There is no guarantee that the issuers of common stocks in which a portfolio invests will declare dividends in the future or that if declared they will remain at current levels or increase over time.

Fixed income risks include credit risk, interest rate risk, and high yield risk.

Credit risk is the risk that an issuer of a debt security will be unable to make interest and principal payments when due and the related risk that the value of a security may decline because of concerns about the issuer's ability to make such payments. Credit risk may be heightened for portfolios that invest in "high yield" securities.

Interest rate risk is the risk that the value of a portfolio will decline because of rising interest rates. Interest rate risk is generally lower for shorter-term investments and higher for longer-term investments. Duration is a common measure of interest rate risk. Duration measures a bond's expected life on a present value basis, taking into account the bond's yield, interest payments and final maturity. The longer the duration of a bond, the greater the bond's price sensitivity to changes in interest rates.

High yield, or below investment grade securities may be more susceptible to real or perceived adviser economic conditions than investment grade securities. In addition, the secondary trading market for below investment grade securities may be less liquid. High yield securities generally have more volatile prices and carry more risk to principal than investment grade securities.

International Investing Risk is the risk associated with investing in securities or issuers in markets other than the United States. Foreign issuers may be subject to risks not typically associated with U.S. companies, such as: currency risk, risks of trading in foreign securities markets, and political and economic risks.

Currency Risk is associated with the trading of securities in currencies other than the U.S. dollar. Because foreign securities generally trade in currencies other than the U.S. dollar, changes in currency exchange rates will affect an account's value, the value of dividends and interest earned, and gains and losses realized on the sale of securities. A strong U.S. dollar relative to these other currencies will adversely affect the value of account.

Foreign Securities Market Risk is the risk that securities of many non-U.S. companies, or U.S. companies with significant non-U.S. operations, may be less liquid, and their prices more volatile, than securities of comparable U.S. companies. Securities of companies traded in many countries outside the U.S., particularly emerging markets countries, may be subject to further risks due to the inexperience of local investment professionals and financial institutions, the possibility of permanent or temporary termination of trading, and greater spreads between bid and asked prices for securities. In addition, non-U.S. stock exchanges and investment professionals are subject to less governmental regulation, and commissions may be higher than in the U. S. Also, there may be delays in the settlement of non-U.S. stock exchange transactions.

Political and Economic Risks are a factor when investing in international companies due to varying levels of stability in political, social, or economic factors in the country of the issuer of a security, the difficulty of predicting international trade patterns, the possibility of the imposition of exchange controls, expropriation, limits on removal of currency or other assets, and nationalization of assets.

Additionally, income from foreign issuers may be subject to non-U.S. withholding taxes. Non-U.S. companies generally are not subject to uniform accounting, auditing, and financial reporting standards or to other regulatory requirements that apply to U.S. companies; therefore, less information may be available to investors about non-U.S. issuers. In addition, some countries restrict foreign investment in their securities markets, which may limit or preclude investment in certain countries or may increase the cost of investing.

The above risks may be particularly significant in emerging markets countries. To the extent an account invests in depositary receipts, it will be subject to the same risks as when investing directly in foreign securities.

Voting Client Securities

As a matter of firm policy and practice, EFA does not have authority to and does not vote proxies on behalf of advisory clients. Clients retain the responsibility for receiving and voting proxies for any and all securities maintained in client portfolios. Upon request of the client, EFA may provide advice to clients regarding the clients' voting of proxies.

Item 7 – Client Information Provided to Portfolio Managers

Not Applicable.

Item 8 – Client Contact with Portfolio Managers

There are no restrictions placed on a client's ability to contact their advisory representative.

Item 9 – Disciplinary Information

Registered investment advisers are required to disclose all material facts regarding any legal or disciplinary events that would be material to an evaluation of EFA or the integrity of EFA's management. ESI is a registered broker/dealer as well as a federally-registered investment adviser doing business as EFA.

- Pursuant to the Securities Exchange Commission's ("SEC") Share Class Selection Disclosure initiative, Equity Services, Inc. ("ESI") self-reported its use of mutual funds that paid fees to ESI pursuant to Rule 12b-1 of the Investment Company Act of 1940, in several of its advisory programs. Subsequently, the SEC alleged that, during the period of January 1, 2014 to July 7, 2017, ESI did not adequately disclose to its clients its receipt of, nor the conflict of interest created by, 12b-1 fee revenue and/or its selection of mutual fund share classes that resulted in 12b-1 revenue to ESI.

Without admitting or denying the findings, ESI agreed to an order from the SEC which imposed the following terms: (1) cease and desist from committing or causing any further violations of Section 206(2) of the Advisors Act of 1940; (2) censure by the SEC; and (3) disgorgement of fees and prejudgment interest to affected clients totaling $587,017.22. The settlement was accepted by the SEC on September 30, 2019.

- The Financial Industry Regulation Authority ("FINRA") alleged, in an amended complaint, that while Equity Services, Inc. ("ESI"), required its registered representatives to maintain anti-virus software on their computers, it failed to adopt written policies and procedures that were reasonably designed to ensure representatives' compliance with the applicable directive.

Without admitting or denying the findings, ESI signed a letter of acceptance, waiver and consent. In accordance with the terms of the settlement, ESI consented to the imposition of a fine in the amount of $20,000. The settlement was accepted by FINRA on December 6, 2012.

- The Financial Industry Regulation Authority ("FINRA") alleged that Equity Services, Inc. ("ESI"), in its capacity as a broker-dealer, made unsuitable sales of an unregistered private placement securities to five non-accredited retail investors. It was also alleged that ESI failed to enforce its written supervisory procedures relating to suitability and the sale of private placements.

Without admitting or denying the findings, ESI signed a letter of acceptance, waiver and consent. In accordance with the terms of the settlement, ESI consented to the imposition of a fine in the amount of $50,000, and it was ordered to pay $163,815 plus interest, in restitution to four customers. The settlement was accepted by FINRA on November 2, 2011.

Item 10 – Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

ESI is registered as a broker-dealer with the SEC, FINRA and all fifty states. ESI devotes a substantial portion of its time and derives a substantial portion of its revenue from its operations as a broker-dealer. As a broker-dealer, ESI offers the following investment and insurance products: mutual funds, unit investment trusts, variable annuities and variable life products, indexed annuity products, direct participation programs, real estate investment trusts, and structured CDs. ESI also acts as the distributor of variable insurance products underwritten and issued by National Life Insurance Company.

EFA is under common control with Sentinel Asset Management, Inc. ("SAM"), a registered investment adviser.

EFA is an affiliate of National Life Insurance Company ("National Life"). Most of EFA's advisory representatives are also life insurance agents of National Life. National Life provides space and certain other services to EFA.

Life Insurance Company of the Southwest ("LSW") is an affiliated insurance company that offers fixed annuity products. Many of EFA's advisory representatives are appointed with LSW to sell fixed products.

EFA and its affiliates receive, in the aggregate, more revenue in connection with the sale of affiliated products than with unaffiliated products. This additional revenue often comes in the form of shared revenue based on assets under management, administrative, distribution, and/or other fees for services provided by affiliates of EFA in support of affiliated products. Thus, EFA has an incentive to offer affiliated products over unaffiliated products. As a result, the Firm faces a conflict of interest to the extent that it has an incentive to promote certain programs which use affiliated products over other programs which don't use affiliated products (or use affiliated products to a lesser extent).

EFA receives payments from firms or persons that offer asset management or separate account products or services which are included in a preferred list of product providers (referred to as "Strategic Partners"). These payments take the form of conference, program, or event attendance; participation or exhibition fees; educational and training fees; or fees linked to program participation or specific marketing initiatives within an existing program. None of these additional payments are paid or directed to any advisory representative who sells these products. Nonetheless, when recommending an asset management program to their clients these marketing payments and educational opportunities present a conflict of interest to the extent that such payments incentivize advisory representatives to recommend Strategic Partners, as opposed to other advisers that do not make such payments. With respect to ESI Directions, Envestnet Portfolio Solutions and Touchstone Advisors are Strategic Partners.

Sale of the Sentinel Mutual Funds to Touchstone

EFA and SAM are affiliates, and owned by the same parent corporation. In October 2017, SAM entered into a purchase agreement with Touchstone Advisors, Inc. (“Touchstone”), whereby SAM sold to Touchstone, among other things, assets related to investment advisory services previously provided to Sentinel Group Funds, Inc. (“SGF.”) This is referred to as the “Purchase Agreement.” In connection with this Purchase Agreement, nine series of SGF investment companies were reorganized into either existing or newly created investment companies advised by Touchstone (the “Touchstone Funds”). This transaction is referred to as the “Merger.” After the Merger, various assets advised by EFA, or for which EFA served as the broker dealer of record, merged into the investment companies managed by Touchstone. These are referred to as the “EFA Assets.”

In connection with the Purchase Agreement, SAM received compensation from Touchstone and agreed to return to Touchstone a portion of the compensation (“Refund Amount”) if the EFA Assets fell below a certain threshold within a specified period of time. That period has since expired. However SAM, EFA’s affiliate, still has a financial incentive to preserve assets which were formerly managed by SAM and are now within the Touchstone Funds. This includes assets managed by EFA, as well as those through other investment advisers. Accordingly, EFA has a conflict of interest in recommending the purchase or continued holding of the Touchstone Funds because its affiliate will benefit financially based on maintaining or increasing assets in Touchstone Funds. An IAR’s compensation is not impacted by SAM’s financial incentive.

Many IARs own and operate their own independent companies separate from EFA. Such IARs provide one or more services through these unaffiliated companies including, but not limited to, accounting/tax services, business consulting, and insurance brokerage services. If a client engages an IAR to provide any such services, these services are offered and performed solely in the IAR’s private and/or professional capacity, and not as a representative of the Firm.

For additional discussion of how the Firm identifies and addresses potential conflicts of interest, please refer to Item 11 (Code of Ethics).

Item 11 – Code of Ethics

EFA has adopted a Code of Ethics (“the Code”) that mandates high standards of business conduct and professionalism. EFA, through its advisers, will provide a copy of its Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

In general, the Code addresses certain groups of persons: Supervised Persons and Access Persons. The term “Supervised Persons” refers to any partner, officer, director, employee, or IAR of the Firm. “Access Persons” represent a subset of this population, and refers specifically to those individuals who have access to (1) nonpublic information regarding any clients’ trading activity, (2) nonpublic information regarding the portfolio holdings of any reportable fund, or (3) those who are involved in making securities recommendations to clients or who have access to such recommendations that are nonpublic.

The Code prohibits EFA's Supervised Persons from purchasing initial public offerings ("IPOs") or trading on material non-public information. Additionally, the Firm's Access Persons are required to report their securities holdings upon initial hire, and again annually. Quarterly reporting of personal securities transactions is also required for Access Persons. EFA's Supervised Persons must acknowledge the terms of the Code annually.

The Code requires that advisory representatives render disinterested and impartial advice and make appropriate recommendations to clients based on an analysis of their needs. Conflicts of interest arise when a recommendation could result in additional compensation to the Firm and/or the advisory representative through the Firm's business relationships or through the execution of commissionable transactions. Such conflicts are a consideration for the Firm's Senior Business Risk Analysts in their review of new accounts and transactions. The Firm addresses conflicts of interest and potential conflicts of interest by periodically reviewing them during EFA's senior management meetings, and through disclosure to its clients, such as that contained in this Brochure.

All Supervised Persons whose activities could encompass the solicitation of government clients are required to pre-clear political contributions to local or state candidates, or candidates for federal office who currently hold a state or municipal office, to state and local political parties, or to political action committees.

Advisory representatives of EFA occasionally buy, hold, or sell securities for their own accounts that are also recommended to, or bought or sold for, their clients at the same time or at different times as clients are trading in these securities. However, neither EFA nor any employee may receive preferential treatment over clients.

It is EFA's policy that the Firm will not effect any principal or agency cross transactions for client accounts. EFA will also not cross trades between client accounts. Principal transactions are generally defined as transactions where an adviser, acting as principal for its own account or the account of an affiliated broker-dealer, buys from or sells any security to any advisory client. An agency cross transaction is defined as a transaction where a person acts as an investment adviser in relation to a transaction in which the investment adviser, or any person controlled by or under common control with the investment adviser, acts as broker for both the advisory client and for another person on the other side of the transaction. Agency cross transactions arise when an adviser is dually registered as a broker-dealer or has an affiliated broker-dealer. Cross trades occur where an adviser causes a client account to sell a security to another client account, whether or not a commission is charged in the transaction.

ESI in its capacity as a broker-dealer often executes securities transactions for its advisory clients, including, but not limited to, transactions in securities distributed or underwritten by an affiliate. ESI has a fully disclosed clearing relationship with NFS for the purpose of offering stock, bond and option trading. ESI is not affiliated with NFS, but receives revenue sharing payments from NFS when NTF mutual funds are used in its proprietary advisory programs (i.e. those on the ESI Illuminations platform, including ESI Directions). EFA and its advisory representatives generally receive compensation, including commissions on transactions for which ESI acts as broker-dealer, in addition to that which is received for the performance of advisory-related services.

Service fees and IRA fees in brokerage accounts associated with the ESI Directions program include a markup, to the actual fee charged by NFS, by EFA.

NFS shares with EFA revenue associated with the use of NTF funds in the ESI Directions program. As such, EFA has an incentive to recommend NTF funds over non-NTF funds in the Directions program. As previously discussed, NTF funds have higher internal expense ratios than non-NTF funds. Please consult with your advisory representative regarding your options for which types of funds and/or share classes are appropriate for your situation.

NFS is an affiliate of Fidelity Investments. ESI has a revenue sharing agreement with NFS through which the Firm receives additional compensation for the use of NTF funds in the ESI Directions program. However, ESI does not receive additional compensation with respect to Fidelity's no-transaction fee funds that are used in these programs. ESI does, however, receive additional compensation based on the average net daily assets held in the Fidelity Money Market Sweep Funds (i.e. Fidelity's Prime Fund, Tax-Exempt Fund, Treasury Fund, and Government Fund). This creates a conflict of interest in that the Firm is incented to favor these Fidelity funds over other funds with respect to which the Firm does not receive additional revenue.

EFA and its affiliates also contribute amounts to various non-cash and cash incentives paid to EFA's advisory representatives based on the achievement of specified sales goals for securities, as described in Item 14 (Client Referrals and other Compensation). Incentive programs are reviewed by the Compliance Department. The review of such programs seeks to ensure that all such incentives adhere to applicable rules. Conflicts of interest are managed through public disclosure to clients and prospective clients, and on the Firm's public website.

Unaffiliated TPAMs occasionally pay travel, meal and other expenses for advisory representatives and others who visit the TPAM's offices or other locations (including hotels and conference centers) to learn about its products and services. This creates a conflict of interest for IARs who may be incented to favor doing business with certain TPAMs over others on the basis of benefits received in conjunction with such visits.

EFA's advisory representatives have an incentive to choose certain programs based on the maximum fee that can be charged given the asset value of the account, as well as whether the advisory representative bears additional program charges. This creates a conflict of interest for the IAR, as they generally retain more of the revenue generated by fees in programs that do not include platform fees (such as SEI) or other administrative fees as part of the overall advisory fee.

The Firm reviews potential conflicts of interest as part of its due diligence review of new and existing programs. The Firm provides disclosure to clients and potential clients of its fee structure and revenue agreements in this Brochure, as well as through the revenue sharing disclosure documents posted on its public website (www.equity-services.com).

Item 13 – Review of Accounts

Each advisory representative and his/her client will individually determine the frequency of reviews for the account(s) governed by an investment advisory agreement between the client and EFA. However, advisory representatives will offer their clients a review on at least an annual basis. Factors triggering such a review will include, but are not limited to: changing circumstances in the client's financial and personal life; the performance of the portfolio in both absolute terms, and relative to the client's goals, objectives and risk tolerance; and at the request of the client. In most cases, the review will be conducted by the advisory representative who performed the initial investment advisory services.

EFA will utilize software tools and/or review either exception reports or statements for accounts on which EFA is advisor, to detect and make recommendations to correct variations from client mandates that are beyond variance tolerances established by the Firm. For discretionary accounts, the Firm and/or the IARs are authorized to rebalance the accounts to address variances that are beyond the Firm's tolerances and the IARs are authorized to do the same if they are concerned that a variance will result because an account's risk score has changed. In addition to review by advisory representatives, client accounts are reviewed by EFA Senior Business Risk Analysts and/or other home office staff members.

Quarterly performance reports are generated and made available to clients with accounts in the ESI Directions program. Also, at least quarterly, NFS provides brokerage statements for ESI Directions program accounts.

Item 14 – Client Referrals and Other Compensation

EFA pays individuals or entities, acting as bona fide solicitors, a portion of the fee for service paid to EFA by the client if the client is referred to EFA by the solicitor. All such solicitor arrangements will conform to the requirements set forth in Rule 206(4)-3 of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

In addition to the revenue sharing payments discussed above, ESI (acting in its capacity as broker/dealer) also receives additional compensation for the sales of securities issued and or distributed by members of its Strategic Partners program. Envestnet Portfolio Solutions and Touchstone Advisors are the only Strategic Partner product distributors in the ESI Directions program. Certain other fund sponsors and/or TPAMs that do not participate in the Strategic Partners program, but whose funds may be used in Directions accounts, make marketing payments to ESI to sponsor certain meetings or events. These include American Funds, BlackRock Funds, Brinker Capital, CLS, Symmetry, and Vanguard. As such, the Firm has an incentive to promote use of these funds, over other available funds, in programs in which the IAR acts as the portfolio manager, such as ESI Directions.

Certain funds available in the ESI Directions program pay additional compensation to ESI, such as 12b-1 (trail) fees. Other funds available in the ESI Directions program do not pay ESI 12b-1 fees. This creates a conflict of interest, because ESI has a financial incentive to recommend mutual funds that generate 12b-1 revenue to the Firm. To mitigate this conflict, effective October 22, 2019, 12b-1 fees charged to accounts in the ESI Directions program are credited back to the customer by the custodian (i.e. NFS). Therefore, ESI no longer receives 12b-1 revenue from accounts on its Directions platform.

EFA and its affiliates also contribute amounts to various non-cash and cash incentives paid to EFA's advisory representatives based on the achievement of specified sales goals for securities, including (1) sponsoring sales contests and/or promotions in which participants receive awards or incentives such as travel, merchandise, computer hardware and/or software; (2) paying for occasional meals, lodging and/or entertainment; (3) making cash payments in lieu of business expense reimbursements; (4) making and forgiving business-related loans; (5) cash bonuses and/or; (6) employee benefits, such as health insurance, Social Security contributions, etc.

Current information regarding EFA's Strategic Partners program may be found at www.Equity-Services.com or by calling (800) 344-7437.

Item 18 – Financial Information

EFA is not aware of any financial condition that is reasonably likely to impair its ability meet its contractual commitments to clients, nor has EFA been the subject of a bankruptcy petition at any time during the past ten years.
