Item 4. ADVISORY BUSINESS

Kellner Management, LP (“Kellner Management”) is an SEC registered investment advisor that was founded in 2002. Kellner Management is owned by its general partner, Kellner Capital, LLC, a Delaware LLC majority owned and controlled by George A. Kellner, and its limited partner, George A. Kellner.

Kellner Management provides investment management and sub advisory/advisory services on a discretionary basis to a registered investment company and an affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. The clients may impose restrictions on investing in certain securities or types of securities. Kellner Management does not tailor advisory services to the individual needs of investors in the registered investment company or in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Investment management and sub advisory/advisory services are provided to its clients pursuant to a merger arbitrage strategy.

As of October 31, 2021, Kellner Management had approximately $276 million of client assets under management, all on a discretionary basis. The method for computing the amount of “client assets under management” is identical to the method used to compute “regulatory assets under management” required for Item 5.F in Kellner Management’s Form ADV Part 1A

Item 5. FEES AND COMPENSATION

Kellner Management receives a sub advisory fee from the advisor of the registered investment company based upon the net management fee received by the advisor. The sub advisory fee is accrued daily and payable monthly. Sub advisory fees are negotiated at the time Kellner Management’s sub advisory contract is entered into.

Kellner Management charges its affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle investment management fees ranging from 1% to 1.25% per annum of net assets. Investment management fees are deducted from client accounts on a monthly basis. Additionally, an affiliate of Kellner Management receives a performance allocation ranging from 10% to 15% of the profits allocable to investors in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle (subject to a high-water mark provision). The method of calculating the performance allocation complies with Rule 205-3 under the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 (the “Advisers Act”), to the extent possible.

Kellner Management or its affiliate may waive or reduce the investment management fee or performance allocation with respect to certain investors in its affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle.

In addition to investment management fees/performance allocation based compensation, the registered investment company and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle clients also incur brokerage and other transaction costs. Please refer to Item 12 of this brochure for a discussion of Kellner Management’s brokerage practices. Additionally, the clients may also be subject to other expenses including, but not limited to, administrator expenses, custodian fees, filing fees, research expenses, legal fees, compliance fees, taxes, tax preparation and audit fees. In instances where clients' assets are invested in ETFs, other pooled investment vehicles or other registered investment companies, the clients bear their pro rata share of the investment management fees, performance fees and other expenses of the underlying investments. The registered investment company's daily net asset value reflects the deduction of accrued management fees and other expenses not otherwise waived.

Kellner Management has an arrangement where it pays fees to a third party solicitor who introduces investors to Kellner Management's registered investment company client and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Such fees include a percentage of Kellner Management's management fee/performance allocation earned from assets raised by the third party solicitor. Investors who are introduced by a third party solicitors are not charged any additional fees.

Kellner Management also has an arrangement where it pays fees to an entity under common control whose registered representatives introduce investors to Kellner Management's registered investment company client and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Such fees include a percentage of Kellner Management's management fee/performance allocation earned from assets raised by such registered representatives. Investors who are introduced by these registered representatives are not charged any additional fees.

Receiving compensation for the sale of shares of Kellner Management's registered investment company client and interests in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle creates a conflict of interest as it gives the solicitor incentive to recommend investment products based upon compensation received instead of client needs. Accordingly, paid solicitations are limited to sophisticated institutional investors and financial intermediaries.

Item 6. PERFORMANCE –BASED FEES AND SIDE-BY-SIDE MANAGEMENT

Kellner Management provides investment management and sub advisory/advisory services to a registered investment company and to an affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Kellner Management, or an affiliated entity, is entitled to be paid or allocated performance-based compensation by the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. It also is entitled to be paid a management fee by the registered investment company's advisor and the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. In addition, Kellner Management's investment personnel are typically compensated on a basis that includes a performance-based component. Because the registered investment company and the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle managed by Kellner Management have a similar investment strategy, Kellner Management and certain of its investment personnel have an incentive to favor the account that pays higher fees.

An entity under common control, Kellner Private Fund Management, LP (“Kellner Private”), provides investment management and advisory services to affiliated pooled investment vehicles and to sub accounts of non-affiliated pooled investment vehicles and it, or an affiliated entity, is entitled to be paid or allocated performance-based compensation. In addition, some of Kellner Management’s personnel are also employed by Kellner Private pursuant to an expense sharing agreement. Such personnel are typically compensated on a basis that includes a performance based component. Because the registered investment company and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle clients of Kellner Management and the affiliated pooled investment vehicles and the sub accounts of the non affiliated pooled investment vehicles managed by Kellner Private have similar investment strategies, Kellner Management and Kellner Private along with certain of their investment personnel have an incentive to favor the account that pays the higher fees.

Kellner Management has adopted and implemented policies and procedures intended to address conflicts of interest relating to multiple accounts managed by Kellner Management and Kellner Private that share similar investment strategies and the allocation of investment opportunities. Kellner Management reviews investment decisions for the purpose of ensuring that accounts with similar investment strategies are treated equitably. The performance of similarly managed accounts is compared at least monthly to determine whether there are any unexplained significant discrepancies. In addition, Kellner Management’s procedures relating to the allocation of investment opportunities require that similarly managed accounts participate in investment opportunities on a pro rata basis to the extent that orders are aggregated and that they be done so on an average price basis. Finally, Kellner Management’s procedures also require that objective allocation for limited opportunities to ensure fair and equitable allocation amount accounts.

Item 7. TYPES OF CLIENTS

Kellner Management’s clients are a registered investment company and an affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Underlying investors in the registered investment company and in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle can be individuals, tax exempt entities, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, IRA’s and trusts.

Initial and subsequent investment minimums for shareholders of the registered investment company are disclosed in their prospectuses.

Underlying investors in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle are generally required to be Accredited Investors and Qualified Purchasers. Initial and additional subscription minimums for investors in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle are disclosed in its offering memorandum.

Item 8. METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES AND RISK OF LOSS

Kellner Management provides investment management services to its clients pursuant to a merger arbitrage strategy.

Merger arbitrage involves the purchase and selling of public securities which are the subject of an acquisition attempt, exchange offer, tender offer, recapitalization or other corporate reorganization or liquidation. The strategy seeks profits thru the trading of securities (primarily public equities).

When a proposal for a merger or an exchange offer is publicly announced, Kellner Management will evaluate the proposed transaction and form a judgment as to the probability of its consummation. Kellner Management utilizes a rigorous analytical process with investment decisions based on fundamental analysis, valuation, timing and risk/reward considerations.

If Kellner Management determines that it is probable that the transaction will be consummated, it may purchase shares of the target company. In order to hedge against the risk of market fluctuation in the securities to be received, Kellner Management may sell securities of the acquiring company short (transactions in listed stock options are also used to hedge long and short positions).

In this activity, when Kellner Management determines that it is probable that a transaction will be consummated, Kellner Management will purchase securities at prices often only slightly below the anticipated value to be paid or exchanged for such securities in the merger, exchange offer or cash tender offer (and substantially above the prices at which such securities traded immediately prior to the announcement of the merger, exchange offer or cash tender offer). If the proposed merger, exchange offer or cash tender offer appears likely not to be consummated or in fact is not consummated or is delayed, the market price of the security to be tendered or exchanged will usually decline sharply by more than the difference between the purchase price and the anticipated consideration to be paid (the anticipated profit). In addition, where a security to be issued in a merger or exchange offer has been sold short in the expectation that the short position will be covered by delivery of such security when issued, failure of the merger or exchange offer to be consummated may force Kellner Management to cover its short position in the market at a higher price than its short sale, with a resulting loss.

In addition, Kellner Management may determine that the offer price for a security which is the subject of a tender offer is likely to be increased, either by the original bidder or by another party. In those circumstances, Kellner Management may purchase securities above the offer price, thereby exposing the merger portfolio to an even greater degree of risk.

Where Kellner Management determines that it is probable that a transaction will not be consummated, Kellner Management may sell the securities of the target company short, at times significantly below the announced price for the securities in the transaction. If the transaction (or another transaction, such as a “defensive” merger or a “friendly” tender offer) is consummated at the announced price or a higher price, Kellner Management may be forced to cover the short position in the market at a higher price than the short sale price, with a resulting loss.

The consummation of mergers, exchange offers and cash tender offers can be prevented or delayed by a variety of factors. An exchange offer or a cash tender offer by one company for the securities of another will often be opposed by the management or shareholders of the target company on the grounds that the consideration offered is inadequate or for a variety of other reasons. This opposition will often result in litigation in which it may be alleged, among other things, that the offering material supplied by the offeror contains inadequate, false or misleading disclosures, that the offeror has, by its activities in connection with the offer, violated federal and/or state securities or takeover laws, or that the proposed acquisition would violate federal antitrust laws, margin regulations or other statutes or regulations. The same allegations may be made in litigation brought by federal or state regulatory agencies or authorities to prevent or delay the proposed acquisition, including litigation brought by the SEC, the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice or the Federal Trade Commission. Depending on the industry involved in a particular transaction, the consummation of the transaction may require the approval or non-action of other regulatory bodies, such as the Federal Reserve Board, the Department of Transportation, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Office of Thrift Supervision or the Federal Communications Commission. In addition, management of a target company may seek a “defensive” merger with, or a “friendly” tender offer by, a company other than the offeror, or propose its own recapitalization plan, although such action would not usually result in a loss.

The consummation of a transaction may be delayed for compliance with the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976 which requires certain waiting periods before the transaction may be completed, waiting periods required under state takeover laws, and, with respect to mergers, exchange offers and recapitalization plans in which securities are to be offered, the need to register the offered securities under the Securities Act.

Offerors in tender or exchange offers customarily reserve the right to cancel such offers in the above and a variety of other circumstances, including an insufficient response from shareholders of the target company. Even if the defensive activities of a target company or the actions of regulatory authorities fail to defeat an acquisition, they may result in significant delays, during which the merger portfolio’s capital will be committed to the transaction and interest charges on funds borrowed to finance its arbitrage activities in connection with the transaction may be incurred.

Where a merger, an exchange offer or a cash tender offer has been agreed upon by the management of the two companies involved, its consummation may be prevented by intervention of a government regulatory agency (as described above), a shareholder’s suit to enjoin the proposed transaction or, in the case of a merger, the failure of the shareholders of the company to be acquired, and, where necessary, the acquiring company, to approve the merger, market conditions resulting in material changes in securities prices, and a variety of other circumstances, including, but not limited to, the failure to meet certain conditions customarily specified in acquisition agreements.

Cash tender offers by corporations, or their controlling shareholders, management or other affiliates, for the shares of such corporations, made with the intent of “going private”, are often opposed by minority shareholders alleging that the proposed transaction is financially inadequate or inherently unlawful, and such transactions have on occasion been enjoined. Certain rules of the SEC require especially complicated disclosures relating to such transactions concerning, among other things, the fairness of such transactions to public shareholders. Such rules can be expected to generate grounds for additional litigation by shareholders or the SEC.

An exchange offer or a cash tender offer will often be made for less than all of the outstanding securities of an issuer, with the provision that, if a greater number is tendered, securities will be accepted pro rata. Thus, after the completion of a tender offer, and at a time when the market price of the securities has declined below its cost, Kellner Management may have returned to it, and be forced to sell at a loss, a portion of the securities it tendered.

Kellner Management will attempt to assess all of the foregoing risk factors, and others, in determining the extent of the position it will take in the relevant securities and the price it is willing to pay for such securities. However, many risks, such as the outcome of pending or threatened litigation, cannot be quantified.

Moreover, it is likely that many of the merger arbitrage portfolio’s positions will be in securities the then current market for which consists primarily of other merger arbitrage firms and partnerships. Consequently, it is likely that adverse developments of a kind which may trigger a determination to dispose of a position may require Kellner Management to sell into a limited market which is crowded with other significant sellers.

Short-term fluctuations in the level of interest rates generally will affect the operating results of merger arbitrage portfolios, not only with respect to its own borrowing costs, but also with respect to their effect on the market value of target company securities and the cost of money to bidders therefore.

Changing market and economic conditions (including fluctuations in the credit markets), and other factors such as changes in U.S. federal or state tax laws, U.S. federal or state securities laws or accounting standards, may make corporate acquisitions less desirable or may make merger arbitrage less profitable or unprofitable. For example, an increase in the prices of equity securities generally might diminish the number of such transactions. In addition, legislation is proposed from time to time which would limit or prohibit certain transactions. Similarly, rule making, adjudicatory or other activities of the SEC, FINRA, or any securities exchange may make the merger arbitrage trading activities less feasible, less profitable or both.

The investment process for merger arbitrage investing involves the continuous screening of the universe of available opportunities to optimize investment selection, maximize total returns, and manage risk. Kellner Management utilizes a rigorous analytical process with investment decisions based on fundamental analysis, quantitative analysis, technical analysis, qualitative analysis, valuation, timing and risk/reward considerations.

Fundamental analysis attempts to measure the intrinsic value of a security by looking at economic and financial factors (including the overall economy, industry conditions, and the financial condition and management of the company itself). In merger arbitrage investing it is primarily used to gauge the amount at risk if a transaction does not consummate and to determine if an offer for a company is at a fair premium or might be subject to higher bids.

Technical analysis attempts to analyze past market movements and apply that analysis to the present to supplement fundamental research and in an attempt to recognize recurring patterns of investor behavior and potentially predict future price movement. Technical analysis does not consider the underlying financial condition of a company. This presents a risk that a poorly managed or financially unsound company may underperform regardless of market movement. Technical analysis is often used to supplement fundamental analysis and is not typically relied on exclusively.

Quantitative analysis uses mathematical models in an attempt to obtain accurate measurements of a company's quantifiable data such as the value of a share price or earnings per share. A risk of using quantitative analysis is that the models used may be based upon assumptions that may be proved to be incorrect.

Qualitative analysis subjectively evaluates non-quantifiable factors such as the quality of management, labor relations, and strength of research and development factors not readily subject to measurement in an attempt to predict changes to a securities price based on that data. A risk of using qualitative analysis is that Kellner Management's subjective judgment may prove to be incorrect.

The securities analysis methods used by Kellner Management rely on the assumption that the companies whose securities Kellner Management purchases and sells, the rating agencies that review these securities and other publicly available sources of information about these securities are providing accurate and unbiased data. While Kellner Management is alert to indications that data may be incorrect, there is always a risk that Kellner Management's analysis may be compromised by inaccurate or misleading information.

Merger arbitrage portfolios may be constructed of both long securities and securities sold short. Positions may be financed through the use of leverage. Kellner Management may also purchase or sell options on the underlying equity securities or other derivative securities in order to enhance returns or reduce risk. Derivative instruments are subject to a number of risks, including the risk of changes in the market price of the underlying securities, credit risk with respect to the counterparty, risk of loss due to changes in interest rates and liquidity risk. The use of certain derivatives may also have a leveraging effect, which may increase volatility and reduce returns.

To obtain exposure to long and short positions in securities, Kellner Management expects to enter into swap agreements. Swap agreements are two party contracts for periods ranging from a few days or weeks to more than one year. In a standard “swap” transaction, two parties agree to exchange the returns which might be earned or realized on particular investments or instruments or a basket of investments or instruments. The parties do not actually invest in or own the underlying securities or instruments that are the subject of the swap contract. Under such a swap agreement, Kellner Management’s registered investment company and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle pays the other party to the agreement (a “swap counterparty”) fees plus an amount equal to any negative total returns from the underlying investments specified in the swap agreement. In exchange, the counterparty pays Kellner Management’s registered investment company and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle an amount equal to any positive total returns from the stipulated underlying investments.

Kellner Management may invest in foreign (non-U.S.) securities. Such investments may result in more rapid and extreme changes in value than an investment exclusively in securities of U.S. companies due to smaller markets, differing reporting, accounting and auditing standards, nationalization, expropriation or confiscatory taxation, foreign currency fluctuations, currency blockage, political changes or diplomatic developments.

Investments and trades are made without regard to portfolio turnover considerations, and therefore annual portfolio turnover rate may be high. Such frequent trading affects investment performance through increased brokerage and transaction costs and the realization of taxable gains and losses.

Kellner Management may, from time to time, employ various hedging techniques to reduce the risk of speculative investments in securities and currency fluctuations in foreign denominated securities. There remains a substantial risk, however, that hedging techniques may not always be effective in limiting losses. If the portfolio manager analyzes market conditions incorrectly or employs a strategy that does not correlate well with the portfolio’s investments, the hedging techniques could result in a loss, regardless of whether the intent was to reduce risk or increase return. These hedging techniques may also increase the volatility of results, involve a small investment of cash relative to the magnitude of risk assumed, or result in a loss if the other party to the transaction does not perform as promised.

Kellner Management’s objective is to invest its capital in those situations which the portfolio manager believes will offer the greatest risk-adjusted returns. Although Kellner Management will follow a general policy of seeking to spread risk among a number of investments, its client’s portfolio may, at certain times, hold a few relatively large (in relation to its capital) securities positions, with the result that a loss in any such position could have a material adverse impact on the portfolio’s capital.

Since Kellner Management will increase the number and/or size of its investment positions through the use of leverage (i.e., purchasing securities by putting up only a portion of the instrument’s value and in effect borrowing the remainder), the possibilities for profit and the risk of loss will be increased. As the result of the use of leverage, fluctuations in the market value of the portfolio may therefore have a disproportionately large effect on the value of its capital. Leveraged investments may result in losses in excess of the amounts invested. In addition, short-term fluctuations in the level of interest rates generally will affect the operating results of the portfolio, with respect to its own borrowing costs and rebates received on short sales.

Kellner Management may engage in short selling. Selling securities short runs the risk of losing an amount greater than the amount invested. Short selling is subject to unlimited risk of loss because there is no limit on how much the price of the stock might appreciate before the short position is closed. A short sale may result in a sudden and substantial loss if, for example, an acquisition proposal is made for the subject company at a substantial premium over market price.

At various times, the markets for securities purchased or sold by Kellner Management, although organized and active, may nevertheless be “thin” or illiquid, making the purchase or sale of securities at desired prices or in desired quantities difficult or impossible. For example, many securities exchanges have authority to suspend trading in a particular security without notice. Further, the lack of an established secondary market may make it more difficult to value illiquid securities, and as a result such valuations may vary materially from the amount realized at time of disposition.

If Kellner Management buys an option (either to sell or purchase a security), it may pay a premium representing the market value of the option. If the option is not exercised and the security underlying the option at expiration is less than the exercise price, the portfolio may lose the entire amount of the premium. Conversely, if Kellner Management sells an option (either to sell or purchase a security), it will be credited with the premium but will have to deposit margin or collateral due to its contingent liability to take or deliver the securities underlying the option in the event the option is exercised. Traders who sell options are subject to the entire loss occurring with respect to the underlying security (less any premium received). The writing or purchasing of an option runs the risk of losing the entire investment or substantially more than the entire investment, thereby causing significant losses in a relatively short period of time. The ability to trade in or exercise options also may be restricted in the event that trading in the underlying security becomes restricted. Options trading may also be illiquid in the event the portfolio manager invests in contracts with extended expirations.

These methods, strategies and investments involve risk of loss to clients and clients and investors in the registered investment company and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle must be prepared to bear the loss of their entire investment.

The securities markets are speculative; prices are volatile; and market movements are difficult to predict. Supply and demand for securities change rapidly and are affected by a variety of factors, including interest rates and general trends in the overall economy or particular industrial or other economic sectors. Government actions, especially those of the Federal Reserve Board, have a profound effect on interest rates, which, in turn, affect the price of securities and potential profit opportunities on securities involved in corporate transactions. In addition, a variety of other factors which are inherently difficult to predict, such as domestic and international political developments, governmental trade and fiscal policies, patterns of trade and war or other military conflict can also have significant effects on such markets. Kellner Management may have only limited ability to vary the investment portfolio in response to changing economic, financial and investment conditions. No assurance can be given as to when or whether adverse events might occur which could cause significant and immediate loss in the value of the portfolio. Even in the absence of such events, investing and trading securities can quickly lead to large losses. Because of the inherently speculative nature of these activities, results may be expected to fluctuate from month to month and from period to period.

Global markets are interconnected, and events like hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, forest fires and similar natural disturbances, terrorism or threats of terrorism, civil disorder, public health crises, and similar “Act of God” events have led, and may in the future lead, to increased short-term market volatility and may have adverse long-term and widespread effects on world economies and markets generally. Clients may have exposure to countries and markets impacted by such natural and unavoidable events, which could result in material losses.

Operational risk is the risk of loss arising from shortcomings or failures in internal processes or systems of Kellner Management, external events impacting those systems, and human error. Operational risk can arise from many factors ranging from routine processing errors to potentially costly incidents such as major system failures. While Kellner Management will make every effort to mitigate operational risk, there can be no assurance that Kellner Management or its clients will avoid losses due to operational risk.

Kellner Management has become increasingly dependent on devices, services and applications that connect to the internet such as smartphones, email, social media, and cloud computing services. While these services increase efficiencies and revenues, this dependence increases our chances of being targeted by cyberattacks. For these reasons, we have instituted a cyber-security policy to help in identifying, mitigating and protecting against cyber-security threats. Password updates, software updates, firewall protections, physical barriers to entry and limited access to sensitive client data are several protections put in place to mitigate cyber related threats. However, security threats can never be completely eliminated and clients remain subject to cyber related risks.

On occasion, errors may occur with respect to trades executed on behalf of a client. Trade errors frequently result in losses but may, occasionally, result in gains. In the event a third party was responsible for the error, Kellner Management will seek to have that party make the client whole. Kellner Management generally will reimburse losses suffered by a client as a result of a trade error Kellner Management caused. In addition, Kellner Management will not correct a trade error made for one client by causing another client to buy or sell the securities. In the event a trading error occurs in a client account, Kellner Management will restore the account to the position it should have been in had the trading error not occurred. Depending on the circumstances, corrective actions may include canceling the trade, adjusting an allocation, and/or reimbursing the account.

There can be no assurance that Kellner Private or its clients or any of their respective affiliates will avoid regulatory examination or enforcement actions. Even if an investigation or proceeding does not result in a sanction being imposed against Kellner Private or its clients or any of their respective affiliates or such sanction is small in monetary amount, Kellner Private, its clients and/or their respective affiliates may be subject to adverse publicity relating to the investigation, proceeding or imposition of such sanctions. There is also a risk that regulatory agencies in the United States and abroad will continue to adopt, change or enhance new or existing laws or regulations, which may result in additional regulatory scrutiny.

Terrorist activities, anti-terrorist efforts, armed conflicts involving the United States or its interests abroad and natural disasters may adversely affect the United States, its financial markets and global economies and markets and could prevent Kellner Management and its clients from meeting their respective investment objectives and other obligations. The potential for future terrorist attacks, the national and international response to terrorist attacks, acts of war or hostility and recent natural disasters have created many economic and political uncertainties, which may adversely affect the United States and world financial markets and Kellner Management's Clients for the short or long-term in ways that cannot presently be predicted.

Item 9. DISCIPLINARY INFORMATION

Registered investment advisers are required to disclose whether there are any legal or disciplinary events that would be material to a client's or prospective client's evaluation of Kellner Management. Neither Kellner Management nor any of its management personnel have been involved in a domestic or foreign criminal or civil action, or in any action in military court. Neither Kellner Management nor any management personnel have been involved in a proceeding with a self-regulatory organization.

Item 10. OTHER FINANCIAL INDUSTRY ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

Kellner Management has entered into an investment sub advisory agreement with a series trust on behalf of its registered investment company client.

Kellner Management has entered into investment management agreements with its affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle which offer equity investments to its clients. Kellner Group, LLC, is the sponsor of this affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle.

Kellner Management has entered into a sub advisory agreement with Castle Light Partners LP, an entity controlled by Christopher Pultz, Portfolio Manager of Kellner Management, to provide non-discretionary investment advice with respect to the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle's assets.

Kellner Management has entered into an expense sharing agreement with Kellner Private, a SEC registered investment advisor under common control and with HitherLane Partners, LLC, a SEC registered broker dealer under common control. Pursuant to these agreements Kellner Private and HitherLane Partners, LLC will reimburse Kellner Management for the costs of certain shared personnel and facilities. Several of Kellner Management's management persons are registered representatives of HitherLane Partners, LLC.

Item 11. CODE OF ETHICS, PARTICIPATION OR INTEREST IN CLIENT TRANSACTIONS AND PERSONAL TRADING

Kellner Management has adopted a Code of Ethics (the "Code") that obligates it and its supervised persons to put the interest of Kellner Management's clients before their own interests and to act honestly and fairly in all respects in their dealings with clients. All of Kellner Management's personnel are also required to comply with applicable federal securities laws. Clients or prospective clients may obtain a copy of the Code by contacting Glen M. Friedman, Chief Financial and Compliance Officer by email at gfriedman@kellnercap.com, or by telephone at 212-350-0260.

Kellner Management requires all personnel to obtain permission of a principal prior to opening a personal trading account with a broker-dealer. Copies of all confirmations and statements of such account must be furnished to Kellner Management directly from the broker-dealer. In addition, all personal trading activity is required to be approved by a principal of Kellner Management before being placed with a broker. No trading in any principal, employee or related person's account will be permitted if such transaction would adversely affect any of Kellner Management's client accounts.

To monitor this process, pre-approval requests are compared to broker confirmations. In addition, transaction activity in each principal, employee or related person's account is reviewed periodically for compliance with Kellner Management's policy.

Shares of its registered investment company client are solicited to investors pursuant to a prospectus.

Interests in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle sponsored by Kellner Group, LLC are solicited to investors pursuant to private placement transactions exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933. All such investors receive a copy of the appropriate private placement memorandum which discloses among other things certain conflicts of interest which may arise.

Pursuant to investment management and advisory/sub advisory agreements, Kellner Management and Kellner Private regularly effect securities transactions for client accounts. Trading portfolios of clients with similar investment strategies are generally managed on a pari-passu basis. As a result, conflicts of interest may arise between the trading accounts managed for Kellner Management and Kellner Private's clients.

Investment decisions are made for the Kellner Management and Kellner Private's clients in a fair and equitable manner in light of the relevant investment considerations. Kellner Management considers participation by clients with similar investment objectives in each transaction unless Kellner Management makes specific determination that the transaction is not suitable for a particular client. In addition, legal and structural differences between Kellner Management and Kellner Private's clients may result in different trade execution.

In certain instances, simultaneous transactions will occur for Kellner Management and Kellner Private's clients. Purchases and sales are then allocated between the clients so that no party will be treated less favorably than the other. While in some cases this could have a detrimental effect upon the price or value of a security for one of the parties or upon its ability to complete an entire order, in other cases coordination and the ability to participate in volume transactions will be beneficial to parties. In general, purchases and sales that are deemed appropriate for the clients are allocated pro rata in accordance with relative assets under management or buying power (subject to rounding), after taking into account relative liquidity of each party and the security in question.

Item 12. BROKERAGE PRACTICES

As a general matter in executing portfolio transactions, Kellner Management may deal with such brokers or dealers as may, in Kellner Management's best judgment, provide prompt and reliable execution of the transaction at favorable security prices and reasonable commission rates. In selecting brokers or dealers, Kellner Management will consider all relevant factors, including the price (net of applicable brokerage commissions or dealer spread), size of the order, nature of the market for the security, timing of the transaction, the reputation, experience and financial stability of the broker or dealer, the quality of service, difficulty of execution and operation facilities of the firm involved.

In allocating brokerage, Kellner Management may take into consideration the receipt of research services even though such broker-dealers may charge commissions which exceed those other broker-dealers may have charged for the same transaction, if in Kellner Management's view the commissions are reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage and/or research services provided by the broker-dealer, viewed in terms of either the particular transaction or Kellner Management's overall responsibilities with respect to the client as to which it exercises investment discretion. Thus, a client may be deemed to be paying for research, brokerage or other services provided by the broker-dealer which are included in the commission rate.

When appropriate under its discretion, Kellner Management may direct transactions for its client to broker dealers who provide Kellner Management with research and brokerage products and services either directly or thru client commission arrangements. The brokerage commissions used to acquire research and brokerage products and services are known as “soft dollars”. Although Kellner Management will use the research and services in making investment decisions for its client, it will generally pay more than the lowest available commissions for execution of these transactions. Kellner Management may enter into “soft dollar” arrangements to cover client expenses to the extent such arrangements are permitted by law.

All commissions paid by Kellner Management clients fall within the SEC’s “safe harbor” provisions (section 28(e) of the US Securities Act of 1934, as amended) which allows an investment adviser to pay for research and brokerage services with the “soft dollars” generated by client account transactions. In determining whether a service or product qualifies as research or brokerage, Kellner Management evaluates whether the service or product provides lawful and appropriate assistance to Kellner Management in carrying out its investment decision-making responsibilities. Research and other services provided by brokers may include economic and market information, technical data, recommendations and market data services.

Kellner Management’s authority to use “soft dollar” credits generated by the client’s securities transactions to pay for expenses that might otherwise have been borne by Kellner Management raises conflicts of interest as it may give Kellner Management an incentive to select brokers or dealers for client transactions, or to negotiate commission rates or other execution terms, in a manner that takes into account the soft dollar benefits received by Kellner Management rather than giving exclusive consideration to the interests of the clients.

Kellner Management’s Chief Compliance Officer periodically reviews and evaluates Kellner Management’s soft dollar practices to determine in good faith whether, with respect to any research or other products or services received from a broker-dealer, the commissions used to obtain those products and services were reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage, research or other products or services provided by the broker-dealer. This determination will be viewed in terms of either the specific transactions or Kellner Management’s overall responsibilities to the portfolios over which Kellner Management exercises investment discretion.

Kellner Management believes that its client benefit from the services obtained with “soft dollars” generated by trades for the accounts of its client. However, services received by Kellner Management and Kellner Private will not be used for the exclusive benefit of any one client, and may not be distributed on a pro rata basis.

During Kellner Management’s last fiscal year, and as a result of client brokerage commissions (or markups or markdowns), Kellner Management and Kellner Private received research reports, attended conferences, and held discussions with research analysts, among other things. In each case the product or service received met the eligibility criteria of the SEC’s “safe harbor” provisions.

When appropriate, Kellner Management and Kellner Private aggregate client orders for the purchase or sale of the same security submitted contemporaneously for execution using the same executing broker to achieve more efficient execution or to provide for equitable treatment among client accounts. Clients participating in aggregated trades are allocated securities based on the average price achieved for such trades. Such aggregation may enable Kellner Management to obtain for clients a more favorable price or better commission rate based upon the volume of a particular transaction. However, brokerage commission rates are not necessarily reduced as a result of such aggregation. In some instances, average pricing may result in higher or lower prices than otherwise obtainable by a single client. Kellner Management and Kellner Private allocate the securities purchased or proceeds of a sale pro rata among the participant accounts, based on the purchase or sale order.

Item 13. REVIEW OF THE ACCOUNTS

Analysis of market conditions and positions within an account occur continuously by Kellner Management's principals, portfolio managers and investment professionals. Trading strategies and portfolio positions for each account are discussed and reviewed at "morning meetings" which are held before the opening of the U.S. markets and are regularly attended by Kellner Management's principals, portfolio managers and investment professionals.

In addition, Kellner Management's principals, portfolio managers, investment professionals and other relevant personnel attend regularly scheduled weekly and monthly meetings to review account performance, market conditions, specific securities held, account portfolios and the risks inherent in such portfolios.

Investors in the registered investment company receive quarterly statements, and annual and semi-annual reports which describe among other things returns, portfolio holdings, expenses, and risks.

Investors in the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle receive monthly performance estimates, fact sheets, and statements and quarterly reports describing account performance and prevailing market conditions. Annually, they receive tax return information and audited financials. They may also receive supplemental reports, data or other information upon request.

Item 14. CLIENT REFERRALS AND OTHER COMPENSATION

Kellner Management may allocate brokerage to broker-dealers which provide it with research even though such broker-dealers may charge commissions which exceed those other broker dealers may have charged for the same transaction, if in Kellner Management's view the commissions are reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage and/or research services provided by the broker-dealer, viewed in terms of either the particular transaction or Kellner Management's overall responsibilities with respect to the account as to which it exercises investment discretion. Please see Item 12 for further information on Kellner Management's brokerage practices.

Kellner Management has arrangements where it may pay fees to a third party solicitor and an entity under common control who introduce investors to Kellner Management's registered investment company client and affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle. Such fees may include an annual retainer and a percentage of Kellner Management's management fee/performance allocation earned from assets raised by the third party solicitor and/or an entity under common control.

Item 16. INVESTMENT DISCRETION

Kellner Management provides investment management services on a discretionary basis to a registered investment company pursuant to an investment sub advisory agreement. Subject to certain limitations, restrictions and objectives set forth in the governing documents of the registered investment company, Kellner Management has been granted complete discretion in the investment and reinvestment of client assets, is authorized to purchase and/or sell securities and other financial instruments and to determine the broker to be used for each securities transaction, subject to the requirements of best price and execution.

The investment sub advisory agreement of the registered investment company client provides Kellner Management with the power to supervise investments subject to the investment objectives, policies and restrictions as set forth in the affiliate investment company's and its Trust's governing documents, including, without limitation, the Trusts Agreement and Declaration of Trust and By-Laws; the registered investment company's prospectus, statement of additional information and undertakings and such other limitations, policies and procedures as the Trustees may impose from time to time.

Kellner Management provides investment management services on a discretionary basis to its affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle pursuant to a grant of authority in the investment management agreement. Subject to certain limitations, restrictions and objectives set forth in the governing documents of the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle, Kellner Management has been granted complete discretion in the investment and reinvestment of client assets, is authorized to purchase and/or sell securities and other financial instruments and to determine the broker to be used for each securities transaction, subject to the requirements of best price and execution.

The investment management agreements of the affiliated master/feeder pooled investment vehicle provides Kellner Private discretionary authority over the pools' investments subject to the limitations, restrictions and objectives set forth in the pool's Confidential Private Offering Memorandum and the Limited Partnership Agreement.

Item 17. VOTING CLIENT SECURITIES

Kellner Management has adopted a written statement of Proxy Voting Policies, Procedures and Guidelines to assure that client securities over which Kellner Management has voting discretion are voted in the best interests of the client and to resolve any material conflicts that may arise between the clients' interest and the interest of Kellner Management. In general, the portfolio manager will exercise discretion to vote securities held for client accounts in a manner consistent with achieving the investment objectives that have been established for the client's account. Any material conflicts of interest that may arise will be disclosed to, and direction will be sought from, the client and, in the absence of direction, Kellner Management will abstain from voting the clients securities.

Kellner Management's authority to vote proxies or act with respect to other shareholder actions is established through the delegation of discretionary authority under the investment management or sub advisory/advisory agreements with clients. Therefore, unless a client specifically reserves the right, in writing, to vote its own proxies or to take shareholder action with respect to other corporate actions requiring shareholder actions, Kellner Management will vote all proxies and act on all other actions in a timely manner as part of its full discretionary authority over client assets.

Clients may obtain information on how their securities were voted or a copy of Kellner Management's Proxy Voting Policies, Procedures and Guidelines by written request addressed to Kellner Management.
