Risks Associated with ESG -related securities

Market-related events can affect all financial and/or securities industries. In these occurrences, often based on data with global implications, many companies, regardless of its size, structure, and financial condition, can experience swings in market valuation and securities pricing.

Interest-rate changes may cause a swing in security pricing and market valuations. For example, when bond yields increase, increase rates typically decrease. As such, this may make investors less incentivized, or similarly in inverse bond yield conditions, to hold onto certain security types.

Inflation levels, due to an increase in the prices of goods and services, may cause swings in certain securities pricing.

Deflation levels, due to a decrease in the prices of goods and services, may cause swings in certain securities pricing.

Currency fluctuations, due to global micro or macro-economic conditions, can bring added risk to an underlying security. Certain security types may have more or less risk given its ties to a certain currency, especially if a company's operations, taxes or profit margins are dependent on exchange rates.

This level of risk is largely due to the fact that many currencies are pegged against other world currencies.

Credit/Debt changes, due to a company/securities exposure to debt or other related defaults, can cause a swing in equity/market valuations. The ability of a debt holder to pay a debt may be factored into the pricing on the security/investments (e.g. bond, credit based mutual funds).

In addition, the amount of credit available to an underlying company, may factor into its ability to grow, and thus could affect securities/market valuation and earnings.

Commodity risk may occur if/when a security pricing or company is prone to seasonal or cyclical market conditions associated with a certain commodity. For example, a security with that purchases steel, rubber, or other commodities for its underlying companies, may pose an added risk to an investment position.

Industry Specific issues may occur if/when a security or company is prone to seasonal or cyclical market dynamics associated with a certain industry. For example, a company with ties to the retail space may have swings associated with earnings season or a holiday projections.

Equity/Liquidity issues may arise if an investment manager experiences difficulties when attempting to exit a position due to a security within a limited market of buyers and sellers (e.g. illiquid securities, secondary market securities, low float stocks).

Management level risks can occur based on the performance of management. For example, financial mistakes due to management decisions or frequent changes senior level staff (e.g. CEO exits due to improprieties or internal strife) can cause swings in securities/market valuations.

Disclosure: Investing in securities does involve risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. The risks can range from failing to keep pace with inflation to losing some or all of the money you invest.

Item 9 Disciplinary Information

We are required to disclose if there are legal or disciplinary events that are material to a client's or prospective client's evaluation of our business or the integrity of your management.
