The investment objective of SGF is to generate high risk adjusted returns from global investment strategies with an Asia tilt over the long-term with better liquidity, transparency and flexibility, moderate volatility and low correlation with traditional equity and fixed-income markets globally.

The investment objective of SGMNMF is to generate high risk adjusted returns with low correlation to market directionality applying a global market neutral approach.

The investment objective of SAMNMF is to generate high risk adjusted returns with low correlation to market directionality applying an Asia market neutral approach.

SMAs are managed according to the respective investment objective.

Investment Strategies

Synergy Asia Master Fund and Synergy Global Fund will invest in portfolio funds that employ strategies including long/short equities, convertible bond arbitrage, distressed securities, fixed income arbitrage, opportunistic/macro and other alternative investment strategies, such as opportunistic long only.

Synergy Global Market Neutral Master Fund and Synergy Asia Market Neutral Master Fund will invest in portfolio funds that employ strategies including market neutral, equity long/short with low net exposures, relative value and multi strategy.

Investment Process

The investment process of the Funds has several components including top-down asset allocation, portfolio construction bases on top-down asset allocation calls and bottom-up portfolio fund selection, combining rigorous risk management and portfolio monitoring process. Potential investments will be evaluated and to be dynamically allocated on an on-going basis based on market environment, risk-adjusted opportunity set in different strategy, qualitative, quantitative and due diligence criteria, as well as the macro-outlook, financial markets and trends.

The investment process of the SMAs starts with the assessment of macro-economic and political conditions in the target market and globally and definition of the strategic asset allocation for the portfolios. The Firm is then responsible for sourcing and due diligence on funds and other asset classes apt to express the investment views in an optimal risk adjusted format and make recommendations to the investors of the SMAs. Once the investment is made, the Firm will monitor the portfolios and report to the investors of SMAs on monthly basis or more often if required.

Portfolio Fund and Portfolio Manager Selection

The Firm (“Investment Adviser”) will utilize its extensive network with portfolio managers locally and globally and the broader base of contacts to identify prospective portfolio funds and assess their abilities to execute a defined investment strategy, adapt to changing market conditions and use various risk management tools necessary to hedge its portfolio. Initial review also includes assessment of the fund’s infrastructure to ensure there are the necessary financial controls and support to execute the strategy. After the initial review, the Firm will conduct investment due diligence, using its proprietary analytical and risk management tools to evaluate the prospective fund’s portfolio and the underlying risks. Operation due diligence will also be conducted, including review of formation documents, management agreements and subscription agreements as well as operation control processes and reference check. The prospective funds and the prospective portfolio managers which have successfully passed the stringent due diligence process will undergo a final review and approval by the Investment Committee.

Portfolio Construction and Monitoring

Portfolio construction is based on top-down asset allocation calls on various opportunity sets across all strategies and combined with the fundamental analysis of various economic and market indicators overlaid with quantitative techniques to estimate the sensitivity of individual investment strategies to its risk factors. After the assessment of the risk and return targets and expectations along with each individual strategy and overall Funds’ profiles, an optimal allocation to each strategy is generated by a proprietary model to account for relative risk and returns.

The Firm will select funds for individual investment strategy based on the asset allocation recommendation, and will rebalance the Funds’ investment portfolios as necessary to take advantage of opportunities arising from its constant review of the markets and global economy.

Portfolio monitoring is conducted on an on-going basis with the level of monitoring depending on factors relating to individual funds and their portfolio managers. The Firm will identify and mitigate potential risks that may arise; and will regularly contact each portfolio manager to monitor its adherence to its individual investment strategy and process and the risks associated.

Direct Investments

The Funds may if needed, trade directly generally for hedging or risk management purposes and may invest in mutual and money market funds and other investment entities.

Leverage

The Funds generally do not intend to employ leverage in its investment activities but the Investment Adviser may leverage the investment of each Fund by borrowing up to 15% of the Fund’s net asset value to offset the inherent opportunity costs of combining non-correlated strategies.

Risk Factors

Investing in securities involves risk of loss that investors should be prepared to bear. An investment in the Funds is speculative and involves substantial risks. There can be no assurance that the investment objective of the Funds will be achieved. Because of the risks involved, investment in the Funds is only suitable for sophisticated investors who are able to bear the loss of a substantial portion or even all of the money they invest in the Funds. The following risks are non-exhaustive and should be carefully evaluated before making an investment in the Funds.

- Investment Risk: the profitability of the Funds' investment program depends on correct assessments by underlying fund managers of future price movements of securities and other instruments. There can be no assurance that the underlying fund managers will be able to accurately predict or follow these price movements. The securities markets have in recent years been characterized by significant volatility and unpredictability. In addition to particular market risks, there is an increased level of unpredictability as to changes in general economic conditions which may affect the profitability of the Funds' investment programs. The Funds are subject to market risk, emerging market risk, strategy risk, management risk, fund structure risk, and tax risk.
- Market Risk: the success of any investment activity is affected by the general economic conditions which affect the level and volatility of prices as well as the liquidity of markets. The prices of many securities and derivative instruments are highly volatile. The price movements of many of the instruments in which the underlying funds trade are influenced by, among other things, interest rates, changing supply and demand relationships, the trade, fiscal, monetary and exchange control programs and policies of governments, and national and international political and economic events. Governments intervene, directly and by regulation, in certain markets, particularly those in currencies and interest rates, disrupting strategies focusing on these sectors. On the other hand, certain strategies are "long" volatility, and their profit potential is severely diminished or eliminated in settled market conditions. Unexpected changes (in either direction) in the volatility or illiquidity of the markets in which underlying fund managers hold positions could cause significant losses.
- Strategy Related Risk: strategy risk relates to the deterioration of the economic viability of an entire strategy. Strategy-specific losses can result from excessive concentration by multiple underlying fund managers in the same investment approach or general economic events that adversely affect particular strategies.
- Currency risk: The value of currencies may fluctuate. In certain countries, the conversion of foreign currencies is based on rates set by the relevant central bank. Any significant changes in central bank policy or revaluation of the currency in such countries may materially and adversely affect a portfolio fund's cash flows, revenues, earnings and financial position, and the value of, and any dividends payable to, the Funds. The exchange rates of currencies, particularly in developing economies, can be highly volatile, and the value may decline suddenly and materially because of political events, market disruptions, natural catastrophes, or terrorist activities.

The Firm has not been subject to any disciplinary action, whether criminal, civil or administrative (including regulatory) in any jurisdiction. Likewise, no persons involved in the management of the Firm have been subject to such action.
