

and retaining business for Willbros Group and its subsidiaries. These employees and officers have since resigned or were terminated as employees and include the former President of the company's subsidiary Willbros International ("Former President of Willbros International") and Jason Steph, a former general manager of one of the company's Nigerian subsidiaries. In Nigeria, the scheme entailed authorizing the payment of over $6 million in bribes to various officials to obtain at least two significant contracts. From these two contracts, Willbros Group realized approximately $8.9 million in net profits.

3. Similarly, in Ecuador, the Former President of Willbros International orchestrated, in violation of the FCPA, a promise to pay $300,000 in bribes to officials of PetroEcuador, an oil and gas company wholly-owned by the government of Ecuador, and its subsidiary, PetroComercial. The bribes were made to influence the awarding of a contract that ultimately generated total revenues exceeding $3 million.

4. In addition, certain former employees of Willbros' subsidiaries employed a long-running fraudulent scheme to use the company's petty cash accounts in Nigeria to make a variety of corrupt payments to Nigerian tax and court officials. Through this scheme, the employees and officers caused Willbros Group to violate the FCPA, and the books and records and internal control provisions of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"). In turn, Steph and Jansen aided and abetted violations of the FCPA and the books and records and internal controls provisions of the Exchange Act. Biggers, through his part in the scheme, aided and abetted violations of the FCPA and the books and records provisions of the Exchange Act.

5. Separately, Willbros Group, through certain of its former employees, including the Former President of Willbros International and Galvez, engaged in a fraudulent scheme to minimize the tax obligations of its subsidiary operating in Bolivia. This scheme involved the acquisition and use of falsified invoices that allowed the company to claim inflated offsets to its “value-added taxes” (“VAT”) obligation. This scheme resulted in material misstatements in the financial statements Willbros Group included within certain Commission filings. As a result of these material misrepresentations, Willbros Group violated Section 17(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 (“Securities Act”) and Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder, along with the books and records, internal controls and reporting provisions of the Exchange Act. Galvez, through his contributions to the scheme, illegally falsified books and records and aided and abetted Willbros Group’s violations of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and the books and records, internal controls and reporting provisions of the Exchange Act.

6. The Commission, in the interest of protecting the public from any further illegal activity, brings this action against the Defendants seeking permanent injunctive relief to prevent future violations of the federal securities laws and, with regard to Defendants Steph, Jansen and Galvez, civil monetary penalties.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

7. This court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to Exchange Act Sections 21(d)(3) and 27 [15 U.S.C. §§ 78u(d)(3) and 78aa]. Defendants, directly and indirectly, made use of the mails and of the means and instrumentalities of interstate commerce in connection with the acts, practices and courses of business described in this Complaint. Venue is proper because many of the transactions, acts, practices and courses of business described below occurred within the jurisdiction of the Southern District of Texas.

DEFENDANTS

8. Willbros Group, Inc., an international oil and gas pipeline company, is a corporation organized under the laws of the Republic of Panama. Until 2000, it had its administrative headquarters in Tulsa, Oklahoma; in 2000, it moved its administrative headquarters to its current location, Houston, Texas. Willbros Group, which became a public company in 1996, has a class of securities registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act and its shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange and is therefore an “issuer” as that term is used in the FCPA (15 U.S.C. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Willbros and Its Operation in Nigeria, Ecuador, and Bolivia

13. During the relevant time period, Willbros Group conducted its operations outside of North America through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Willbros International, Inc. Like Willbros Group, Willbros International is incorporated in Panama and maintained its administrative headquarters in Tulsa until 2000, when it moved to Houston.

14. Until it sold its Nigerian assets in February 2007, the company had conducted business in Nigeria for over 40 years – primarily through three affiliates: Willbros West Africa, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Willbros International; Willbros Nigeria, Ltd., a majority-owned subsidiary of Willbros West Africa; and Willbros Offshore Nigeria, Inc., a majority-owned subsidiary of Willbros West Africa. Before the sale of Nigerian assets in 2007, the company’s operations in Nigeria frequently represented a sizable percentage of the company’s global revenues. In 2004, for example, the Nigerian operations produced roughly 25% of the company’s global revenue.

15. During the relevant time period, Willbros Group conducted business in Ecuador through a subsidiary of Willbros International, known as Willbros Servicios Obras y Sistemas S.A. (“Willbros Ecuador”). In 2004, the company, through Willbros Ecuador, undertook a project called the Proyecto Santo Domingo. The client on this project was PetroComercial, a subsidiary of PetroEcuador. PetroEcuador is Ecuador’s state-owned oil and gas company.

16. During the relevant time period, Willbros Group conducted business in Bolivia through a subsidiary of Willbros International, known as Willbros Transandina. In late 2001, the company, through Willbros Transandina’s participation in a joint venture, obtained a 59 million dollar contract with a foreign consortium to construct a pipeline in Bolivia (the “Yacuiba-Rio Grande project”). Work on this project commenced in 2002 and was substantially complete by 2003. Contract resolution and settlement of contract variations were not finalized until 2004.

Bribery Scheme in Nigeria

17. Beginning in at least 2003, Willbros Group, acting through the Former President of Willbros International, Steph and others, designed and implemented schemes to help Willbros Group and its affiliates obtain at least two significant contracts in Nigeria: an onshore project known as the the Eastern Gas Gathering Systems project (“EGGS” project) and a separate offshore contract (“the Nigerian Offshore Contract”). These projects were to be completed on behalf of two different joint ventures. Each joint venture was majority-owned by Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (“NNPC”), an arm of the Nigerian government, and each had an operator that was a subsidiary of a major multi-national oil company.

18. The EGGS and Nigerian Offshore Contract projects generated cumulative revenue to Willbros Group of approximately 487 million dollars and net profits of approximately $8,910,000.

19. To pursue certain projects in Nigeria, Willbros West Africa formed a joint venture consortium with a Nigerian subsidiary of a German engineering and construction company (“the Willbros Nigeria Consortium”). In December 2003, the Willbros Nigeria Consortium submitted a commercial proposal seeking to be awarded some or all of the EGGS project, a natural gas pipeline system. The project contemplated two primary phases, referred to as EGGS Phase 1 and EGGS Phase 2. EGGS Phase 1 involved engineering, procurement and construction (“EPC”) of a pipeline and included an optional scope of work for the application of a coating to the pipeline (“EGGS Coating”). EGGS Phase 2 was another optional scope of work within the EGGS Phase 1 proposal involving the construction of a second pipeline.

20. The commercial proposal was submitted to the operator of a joint venture that is controlled by NNPC, an arm of the Nigerian government, and its subsidiary, the National Petroleum Investment Management Services (“NAPIMS”). In this complaint, the joint venture client related to the EGGS project will be referred to as the “Nigeria Joint Venture;” the operator of Nigerian Joint Venture will be referred to as “Joint Venture Operator;” and the employees, agents, and officials of the Joint Venture Operator, the Nigerian Joint Venture, NNPC, and NAPIMS will be referred to collectively as “Nigerian officials.”

21. In July 2004, after approval by NNPC and NAPIMS, the Willbros Nigeria Consortium and the Joint Venture Operator (acting on behalf of the Nigeria Joint Venture) executed the EGGS Phase 1 contract. The contract included the consortium’s offer to perform the EGGS Coating and EGGS Phase 2 optional scopes of work. In August 2004, again after approval from NAPIMS and NNPC, the Nigeria Joint Venture awarded the EGGS Coating work to the Willbros Nigeria Consortium. The Willbros Nigeria Consortium, ultimately, did not obtain the EGGS Phase 2 optional scope of work, despite efforts in late 2004 and early 2005 to procure it.

22. In roughly late 2003, prior to and during the EGGS project bidding process, the Former President of Willbros International and Steph, acting on behalf of Willbros Group, plotted with certain employees of Willbros West Africa’s joint venture partner in the Willbros Nigerian Consortium, to make more than $6 million in payments to Nigerian officials, a Nigerian political party and an official in the executive branch of Nigeria’s federal government. These payments were intended to help the Willbros Nigeria Consortium obtain some or all of the EGGS business.

23. To implement this scheme, the former President of Willbros International caused Willbros West Africa to enter into sham “consultancy agreements” with an outside consultant in Nigeria (“Consultant #1), whose company invoiced Willbros West Africa for purported “consulting” services. The “consultancy agreements” called for the payment, in exchange for purportedly legitimate consulting services, of 3% of the contract revenue for certain projects, including the EGGS project. The invoices were submitted by Jansen and others to the company's administrative office in Houston for payment by wire transfer to a foreign bank, as directed by the invoices.

24. The wired money was purportedly for the legitimate consulting services provided to Willbros affiliates, but, in fact, some or all of that money was intended for corrupt payments. Steph and Willbros Group, through the conduct of the Former President of Willbros International, Steph and others, knew that Consultant #1, and others working with him, were engaged, on behalf of the consortium, in corrupt negotiations with Nigerian officials who had influence over the EGGS business. They further knew that that Consultant #1, and others working with him, were using and intended to use some or all of the funds paid, out of a Willbros Group bank account in Houston, to Consultant #1 to make corrupt payments to Nigerian officials to cause those officials to award the EGGS project and its optional scopes of work to the Willbros Nigeria Consortium.

25. The money disbursed to the Consultant #1 was improperly recorded in Willbros Group's books and records as legitimate consulting expenses or other business expenses. Through this scheme, a portion of these so-called "commitments" had been paid by late 2004. Additional "commitments" of millions of dollars remained to be paid later. These payments would be funded as the consortium received future EGGS contract revenue, with 3% of that revenue going to Consultant #1 or those working with him and with subsequent transfer of some or all of that money to the Nigerian officials.

26. In January 2005, Willbros Group announced that the Former President of Willbros International had resigned and that the company's audit committee had commenced an internal investigation into allegations of tax improprieties concerning Willbros Transandina, a subsidiary operating in Bolivia under the management of the Former President of Willbros International. The internal investigation expanded in scope to include activities in Nigeria.

27. As a result of the company's internal investigation, the "consulting" agreements with Consultant #1's companies were terminated and further payments to Consultant #1 ceased. During this time, Steph and other Willbros personnel in Nigeria, including former Willbros employee J.B. Brown ("Brown"), learned of demands from Nigerian officials for continued payment of the "commitments" related to the EGGS project. As a result, they became concerned that failure to pay the "commitments" would result in, among other consequences, interference with Willbros International's business operations and the potential loss of the EGGS Phase 2 contract (which had not yet been awarded).

28. In or around February 2005, Brown and Steph, in concert with employees of their joint venture partner, met with a Nigerian consultant ("Consultant #2") and determined to resume the payments. At that meeting, Brown and Steph agreed to pay $1,850,000 toward the outstanding "commitments." Because they could no longer generate money by submitting invoices from Consultant #1's companies, Steph and others engaged in the scheme sought alternative sources. They agreed on several potential funding sources: (1) a loan from principals of a Nigerian oil and gas company ("Company 1") to one of Willbros's Nigerian subsidiaries; (2) a loan from the company's Willbros Nigeria Consortium partner to one of Willbros's Nigerian subsidiaries; and (3) petty cash from a local account maintained by one of Willbros's Nigerian subsidiaries.

29. Shortly thereafter, Brown, on behalf of Willbros West Africa, agreed to borrow, pursuant to a written loan agreement, $1 million from the company's partner in the Willbros Nigeria Consortium. He then "loaned" the money to Consultant #2, for delivery to Nigerian officials. Steph participated in the plan to fund the “commitments” and knew of Brown’s actions.

30. To further help procure the $1,850,000, Steph borrowed, in Nigerian currency, the equivalent of roughly $500,000 from another individual, working through a Nigerian oil and gas company. He then delivered that money to Consultant #2 to be transferred to Nigerian officials.

31. In February or March 2005, Steph directed that the equivalent of approximately $350,000 be procured from a Willbros cash account in Nigeria; Steph requested this money to transfer it to Consultant #2 for delivery to Nigerian officials. This money was accumulated using fictitious invoices to falsely inflate weekly funding requests transmitted to Willbros Group’s Houston administrative headquarters. Once he obtained the $350,000, Steph transferred it to Consultant #2 for delivery to the Nigerian officials.

32. In or around August 2004, Willbros West Africa executed contracts for an offshore Nigerian project that involved offshore pipeline work in Nigeria and which the company expected to generate substantial revenue.

33. As with the scheme associated with the EGGG project described above, Willbros Group, again through the conduct of the Former President of Willbros International and others, agreed to make improper payments in excess of $5 million to, among others, officials of NNPC, NAPIMS, a senior official in the executive branch of the Nigerian federal government, and a Nigerian political party to assist in obtaining the offshore Nigeria contract business. At least some of these payments had been made by the end of October 2004.

34. Further, from at least the early 1990's through 2005, employees of Willbros Group or its affiliates in Nigeria abused petty cash accounts to, among other things, make repeated bribes to Nigerian tax and court officials.

35. For example, Willbros Group's affiliates, in order to maintain operations in Nigeria, must pay taxes administered by various Nigerian states, including a Pay-As-You-Earn ("PAYE") tax, based on employee earnings, which Willbros deducts from its workers' salaries. In order to reduce this tax obligation, employees of Willbros affiliates bribed auditors responsible for determining the amount of tax owed.

36. During this same time period, Willbros International employees in Nigeria paid clerks and other officials within the Nigerian judicial system in exchange for favorable treatment in pending cases. These payments to court and tax officials were disguised within the company's petty cash processes in Nigeria. Certain employees of Willbros Group's subsidiaries requisitioned excess petty cash funds by submitting fictitious invoices from non-existent vendors. For example, Jansen and Biggers inflated the cash needed by obtaining fictitious invoices, typically for fuel, freight or catering expenses, from non-existent vendors. Jansen used these fictitious invoices to inflate the anticipated expenditures that he projected in weekly forecasts that he prepared or that were created under his direction. These artificially inflated reports were used to obtain cash (ultimately over $6 million) from the company's offices in Houston. At least $300,000 of this money was used to make payments to Nigerian tax and court officials. The Former President of Willbros International knew of these schemes and approved them, either explicitly or implicitly.

37. As part of this scheme, Jansen routinely approved for payment invoices he knew were false. He also knowingly submitted false cash requests and forecasts, knowing that those false reports would generate funds that would at least in part be used to bribe Nigerian court and tax officials. Biggers knowingly procured invoices he knew to be false and that he knew would be used to procure funds that would be used to bribe Nigerian court and tax officials. Finally, Steph knew about this conduct and approved it, both tacitly and on some occasions explicitly.

Bribery Scheme in Ecuador

38. In late 2003, the Former President of Willbros International instructed an Ecuador-based, individual ("the Ecuador employee") to pursue business prospects in Ecuador on behalf of Willbros Group and Willbros Ecuador. During this time period, Brown was helping supervise the company's business in Ecuador. The Ecuador employee telephoned Brown and informed him that the company could obtain a $3 million contract to modify a pipeline running from Santo Domingo to El Beaterio, Ecuador ("the Santa Domingo Project"), if the company would agree to pay $300,000 (10% of the contract value) to certain officials of PetroEcuador, an oil-and-gas company wholly-owned by the government of Ecuador, and its subsidiary, PetroComercial (collectively, "PetroEcuador"). The scheme called for $150,000 to be paid up front, with the remaining $150,000 to be paid upon completion of the project. With approval from the Former President of Willbros International, Brown and the Ecuador employee agreed to make, on behalf of Willbros Group and its affiliates, the payments. In March 2004 the company announced that it had received a letter of intent for the Santo Domingo Project.

39. Between the January and June 2004 time period, the Former President of Willbros International, on the company's behalf, communicated by e-mail and telephone with Brown to arrange the transfer of $150,000 to employees of Willbros Ecuador so that they could deliver the money to PetroEcuador officials. One or more of these e-mail communications were sent from Brown in South America through Willbros Group's server located in Houston, Texas.

40. In June 2004, the Former President of Willbros International directed an outside consultant to wire $150,000 to the bank account of a second Willbros Ecuador employee, so that the money could be then be used to make the payments to the PetroEcuador officials. The Ecuador employee confirmed to Brown that he had received and would deliver it to the PetroEcuador officials.

41. While the Santo Domingo Project was underway, the PetroEcuador officials involved in the scheme were replaced. The former officials, however, insisted on receiving the second installment, while the newly installed officials also insisted on receiving payments. To resolve this problem, acting on the approval of the Former President of Willbros International, Brown attended a meeting at which the Ecuador employee met with both former and current officials. Brown attended this meeting to ensure that the PetroEcuador officials understood that the Ecuador employee had the full backing of the company. Ultimately, acting on authorization from Brown and the Former President of Willbros International, the Ecuador employee brokered a deal to pay the former officials an additional $90,000 and the new officials $165,000. In return for this agreement, Willbros would retain the Santo Domingo project and would be awarded a second project. The money for these payments was transferred to the private bank accounts of Willbros Ecuador employees and their family members. These disbursements were falsely recorded in the company's books and records as "consulting" expenses, "platform expenses," or as "prepaid expenses."

42. The company ultimately performed the Santa Domingo project, which generated revenues of roughly 3.4 million dollars. When the bribes pertaining to the second project were discovered in 2005, the company relinquished the project.

Fraudulent Tax Scheme in Bolivia

43. Willbros conducted business in Bolivia through Willbros Transandina, S.A., a subsidiary of Willbros International. In late 2001, Willbros Transandina, as part of a joint venture, was awarded a contract to complete a pipeline in Bolivia. By at least 2002, the Former President of Willbros International began supervising this project.

44. In Bolivia, Willbros Transandina was required to pay 13% of its receipts to taxing authorities in satisfaction of what is commonly referred to as a "value added tax" ("VAT"). Bolivian based companies then add the 13% VAT when they bill their Bolivian customers. If the VAT a company collects from its customers is greater than the VAT it pays to its vendors, the company must remit the difference to the taxing authority. In contrast, if a company pays more than it collects, it does not owe a payment. In short, if a company's purchases (and therefore the VAT paid to its vendors) exceeds the VAT it collects from its own customers, a company can, in essence, "offset" its VAT payment obligations.

45. Willbros Group, through the actions of others, including the Former President of Willbros International and a United States citizen serving as an outside consultant (the "outside consultant"), devised and implemented a scheme to minimize Willbros Transandina's VAT obligation by using fabricated invoices to Bolivian vendors as "offsets." This was accomplished by acquiring invoices that reflected fictitious transactions; these invoices were then used to support tax returns that fraudulently claimed unearned VAT tax offsets.

46. In many cases, the outside consultant procured the fictitious invoices. Galvez, as the in-country accountant and administrator for Willbros Transandina, acting under the direction of the Former President of Willbros International, used the fictitious invoices to further the scheme by, among other things, preparing false returns and related records.

47. As part of this scheme, the outside consultant submitted invoices for payment by Willbros Group for purported consulting services. Willbros Group, acting through the Former President of Willbros International, paid these invoices by wire transfer from Houston to foreign accounts designated on the invoices. Rather than funding consulting services, however, these funds were spent, at least in part, to procure the fictitious invoices and to otherwise support the fraudulent tax minimization strategy. In 2004 alone, Willbros Group paid more than $500,000 to the outside consultant.

48. As a result of this scheme, the contract costs and the VAT liabilities to the Bolivian government for fiscal years 2002, 2003 and 2004 were materially understated; the scheme effectively inflated Willbros Group's net income by approximately 6.4% in fiscal year 2003 and inflated earnings per share by approximately $.03 for both fiscal year 2003 and the first three quarters of 2004.

49. In addition to VAT, the Bolivian government levies an income tax on foreign companies doing business in Bolivia through a 12.5% withholding tax ("Foreign Withholding Tax"). Willbros Group, primarily through conduct by the Former President of Willbros International, materially understated its Foreign Withholding Tax liabilities during fiscal years 2002, 2003, and 2004. Specifically, in 2002, the Former President of Willbros International directed accounting personnel to reduce the Foreign Withholding Tax liabilities in Willbros Group's books and records for purported tax savings. In 2003 and 2004, again at the direction of the Former President of Willbros International, accounting personnel eliminated the Foreign Withholding Tax liabilities from Willbros Group's books and records, by reducing the tax liability account to offset cash disbursements made to the outside consultant and others. In reality, there was no legitimate tax saving strategy. Instead the funds were merely used to benefit the purported outside consultant and others. These actions and the resulting false records caused the tax liability to be understated. As a result, for fiscal year 2003, these understatements caused Willbros Group's net income to be inflated by approximately 6.4%.

50. During 2003 and 2004, Willbros Group offered and sold securities pursuant to registration statements on Form S-8 and filed resale shelf registration statements on Form S-3. These registration statements incorporated by reference the company's periodic filings that contained the material misrepresentations discussed in the paragraphs above.

EIGHTH CLAIM
Aiding and Abetting Violations of Sections 13(b)(2)(A) and (B) of the Exchange Act

75. Paragraphs 1 through 74 are realleged and incorporated by reference.

78m(b)(2)(A) and 78m(b)(2)(B)]. Defendants Steph, Jansen, Galvez and Biggers knowingly provided substantial assistance to Willbros Group in its inaccurate recording of these payments in its books and records.
