Plaintiff Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") alleges the following against defendant Edward Durante ("Durante"):

SUMMARY

1. From 2012 to 2014, Durante, a recidivist securities law violator, defrauded at least 50 relatively unsophisticated investors out of at least $11 million through the sale of securities of VGTel, Inc. ("VGTel"), a shell company he controlled. Durante sold approximately six million shares of VGTel stock to investors using a fictitious name to hide his criminal past and lying to investors regarding the use of stock sale proceeds. Durante also bribed two financial industry workers, Individual 1 and Individual 2, who advised their clients to purchase VGTel stock without disclosing to their clients that they had been bribed. Durante also engaged in matched trading of VGTel stock with a stockbroker, Individual 3, to artificially control the stock's market price. Durante's associates, Individual 4 and Individual 5, aided and abetted Durante in his fraudulent sales, and Individual 4 coordinated matched trading with Individual 3.

2. By this action, the Commission seeks injunctive relief, disgorgement of ill-gotten gains and civil penalties.

VIOLATIONS

3. Based on the conduct alleged in this Complaint, Durante is liable for violations of Sections 17(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act") [15 U.S.C. §§ 77q(a)], and Sections 9(a)(1) and 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") [15 U.S.C. §§ 78i(a)(1) and 78j(b)] and Rule 10b-5 [17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5].

NATURE OF THE PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF SOUGHT

4. The Commission brings this action pursuant to authority conferred by Section 20(b) of the Securities Act [15 U.S.C. § 77t(b)], and Section 21(d)(1) of the Exchange Act [15 U.S.C. § 78u(d)(1)], seeking to permanently enjoin Durante from engaging in the acts, practices, transactions and courses of business alleged herein. The Commission also seeks a final judgment: (i) prohibiting Durante from soliciting transactions in any security; (ii) ordering Durante to disgorge his ill-gotten gains and to pay prejudgment interest thereon; and (iii) imposing civil money penalties pursuant to Section 20(d) of the Securities Act [15 U.S.C. § 77t(d)], and Section 21(d)(3) of the Exchange Act [15 U.S.C. § 78u(d)(3)].

A substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims herein occurred in the Southern District of New York. For instance, Durante maintained an office and numerous nominee banks accounts in this district, and Durante was a resident of this district.

In connection with the conduct alleged in this complaint, Durante, directly or indirectly, have made use of the means or instruments of transportation or communication in, and the means or instrumentalities of, interstate commerce, or of the mails, or of the facilities of a national securities exchange.

DEFENDANT

8. Durante (aka “Edward Wise,” “Ted Wise,” “Efran Eisenberg,” and “Anthony Walsh”), age 67, is a recidivist securities law violator. He was convicted of violating the federal securities laws, and in September 2003, he was sentenced to 121 months imprisonment followed by three years supervised release. U.S. v. Durante, 1:01-cr-1020 (S.D.N.Y.). He was released from prison in June 2009 and was on probation until November 2012. In SEC v. Wamex Holdings, Inc. et al., No. 01-Civ-9056 Durante was held liable for securities fraud and was ordered to pay $33,783,565.26 in disgorgement together with pre-judgment interest in the amount of $6,097,115.60. This judgment remains outstanding.

RELEVANT PERSONS AND ENTITY

9. Individual 3 has been associated with several registered broker-dealers between July 2012 and present.

10. Individual 1 was an associated person of a dually-registered investment adviser and broker-dealer between May 2002 and December 2013.

11. Individual 2 owned and operated Entity 1 during the relevant period.

12. Individual 4 has since August 2010 worked for Durante as his assistant on proposed deals involving VGTel and by placing stock trades at Durante's direction.

13. Individual 5 worked as nominee for Durante's control over New Market Enterprises, Inc. ("New Market") and Zenith Estates, Inc. ("Zenith").

14. Entity 1 is an investment adviser owned by Individual 2 that was registered from 2011 through 2015.

FACTS

A. Background

15. While serving his ten-year prison term for a securities fraud conviction, Durante began laying the groundwork for his next stock fraud. While still in prison, Durante used the fictitious name "Anthony Walsh" to negotiate the acquisition of VGTel as a shell company. As a result of the purchase, Durante came to control almost all of the issued shares of VGTel. Durante assigned VGTel certificates to several entities he apparently controlled in order to disguise the fact that he controlled most of the outstanding stock of VGTel. Durante also formed his private companies, New Market and Zenith.

16. After his release from prison, Durante moved to New York City and conducted his business activities at Zenith's and New Market's offices in Manhattan. In 2010, Durante hired Individual 4 to help him develop VGTel's business. Durante was unsuccessful in obtaining financing because potential investors had concerns about his criminal history, and therefore, VGTel never had any ongoing business operations. In 2012, Durante told Individual 4 he was going to use a fictitious name to sell VGTel securities and asked Individual 4 what he thought about Durante using the name “Efran Eisenberg.” Shortly thereafter, to avoid investor concerns about his criminal history, Durante began using the fictitious names Ted Wise and Efran Eisenberg in addition to occasionally using Anthony Walsh as he had previously.

17. In 2009, Durante hired Individual 5 to nominally control Zenith’s and New Market’s bank accounts and to process the transfer of funds to Durante. At Durante’s direction, Individual 5 withdrew cash from these accounts for, among other things, paying kickbacks to Individual 2 and Individual 3. Individual 5 also obtained debit cards in his name for the New Market and Zenith accounts and gave them to Durante for Durante’s personal use.

B. New England Investors

18. Between 2012 and 2013, Durante sold approximately $1.2 million worth of worthless VGTel stock to Investor A, who lives in the New England area, and at least thirty of his friends and family members. When soliciting stock sales, Durante identified himself as Ted Wise whenever communicating with Investor A. Durante’s false identity prevented Investor A and other investors from learning about Durante’s criminal history.

19. Durante told Investor A that VGTel was a publicly traded company that could expand quickly. Durante told Investor A that he had done several major deals and that he had obtained large investments for VGTel. Both of these statements were false. Durante also told Investor A that, although he was not a VGTel officer or board member, he nonetheless controlled the company.

20. Based on these conversations, Investor A introduced Durante to at least 30 friends and/or family members who ultimately became VGTel investors.

21. In early 2013, Durante traveled to, and held approximately four sales meetings in, Tewksbury, Massachusetts. During these meetings, Durante continued to represent himself as Ted Wise. Durante told these investors that the stock sale proceeds would be used by VGTel to fund its operations (as opposed to being paid to the stock seller, in this case Durante).

22. Durante also told investors that VGTel's stock price would increase significantly, and at one point predicted a $50 per share price.

23. In total, Investor A and his friends and family members purchased approximately $1.2 million of VGTel stock from Durante, and as Durante directed, investors sent their funds to either Zenith or New Market.

24. Durante explained to Investor A that there was only a limited amount of shares of VGTel, and that by having friendly investors purchase the majority of the shares, Durante could ensure the stability of the market. Durante said that this type of control made the investments in VGTel safe. Based on these representations, Investor A also recommended that his family and friends purchase VGTel stock in the public market.

C. Individual 1's Clients

25. Individual 1, while working as an associated person of a dually-registered investment adviser and broker-dealer, had approximately 30 clients, mostly conservative, older investors, who owned annuities.

26. In 2012, Durante contacted Individual 1 using the fictitious name Ted Wise and offered to pay Individual 1 in exchange for transferring her clients to him. In 2013, Individual 1 sold her business to Durante for $377,500 and agreed to continue working with her clients at Durante's direction.

27. Although Individual 1 informed her clients that she was associating with Durante (Ted Wise), she never informed them about the $377,500 payment she received from Durante.

28. At Durante's direction, Individual 1 advised at least 20 of her clients to sell their annuities, often incurring penalties, and then Individual 1 solicited the clients to purchase VGTel stock.

29. Also at Durante's direction, Individual 1 arranged for at least 20 of her clients to open brokerage accounts using Individual 3 as the account representative.

30. Individual 1 invited Durante to solicit sales of VGTel stock directly to her clients. At one sales meeting in San Diego in September 2013, Durante (posing as Ted Wise) told investors that VGTel would be a profitable investment.

31. Individual 1 vouched for Durante's predictions, promising that investors would double or triple their money by investing in VGTel. As a result, at least 20 Individual 1 clients invested a total of approximately $2 million by making purchases in trading accounts Individual 1 helped them to open.

32. In addition, several of Individual 1's clients purchased VGTel stock directly from Durante by writing checks to Zenith or New Market.

33. Beginning in 2014, Durante caused Individual 1 to be paid at least $110,000 in kickbacks for soliciting VGTel stock sales, which Individual 1 never disclosed to her clients.

34. In November 2013, Individual 1 repeatedly called one of her client's stockbroker, impersonating the client, and directing the sale of existing investments to finance the purchase of VGTel stock. Shortly thereafter, in November and December 2013, again impersonating the client, Individual 1 placed orders to purchase approximately $1,000,000 of VGTel stock.

35. In July 2013 Individual 1 purchased VGTel stock in another client's account without authorization when Individual 1 knew that the client was away on vacation.

D. Individual 2's Investment Adviser Clients

36. In approximately 2010, Individual 2 entered into a consulting agreement with Durante's company, New Market. Pursuant to this agreement, Durante caused Individual 5 to pay Individual 2 $200,000 in exchange for Individual 2 inducing six of his clients to purchase approximately $2 million worth of VGTel stock.

37. On another occasion, Durante directed Individual 5 to send Individual 2 three cash payments of $9,500 each as a commission for causing another client to purchase approximately $150,000 of VGTel stock from New Market.

38. Individual 2 invited some of his clients to attend a sales presentation regarding VGTel conducted by Durante, who introduced himself to investors as Edward Wise. Individual 2 took no steps to learn anything about the assets or revenues of VGTel, did not review its balance sheet, never met with an officer or director of the company, and never performed any due diligence regarding VGTel other than talking to Durante. Nonetheless, in 2012 and 2013, Individual 2 recommended investments in VGTel to his clients.

39. When recommending VGTel to his clients, Individual 2 made no disclosure of any compensation from Durante, either the $200,000 "consulting" payment from Durante, the $28,500 cash kickback from Individual 5, or anything about Individual 2's financial relationship with Durante or New Market.

40. Individual 2 also did not disclose to his clients that Durante used a fictitious name or that Durante had a criminal history.

E. Matched Trading in VGTel Stock

41. Individual 4 introduced Durante to Individual 3 for the purpose of Durante maintaining artificial control of the publicly traded stock price of VGTel.

42. Individual 3 and Durante engaged in matched trades of VGTel stock in accounts maintained by Durante and Individual 5 at the broker-dealer where Individual 3 worked. Durante paid Individual 3 secret cash payments of at least $30,000.

43. Durante caused at least 23 customer accounts to be set up at a clearing firm to trade VGTel stock. Beginning in August 2013, these accounts, which were comprised of a mixture of Individual 1's clients, Individual 2's clients, and accounts in the name of New Market and Zenith, were opened with Individual 3 acting as the trader for the accounts.

44. None of the investors' accounts provided for third-party trading authority for Durante.

45. Individual 4 assisted Durante in coordinating the trading with Individual 3, and Individual 4 placed matched trades with Individual 3 at Durante's direction.

46. Individual 3 was in frequent communication with Durante. During these communications, Durante explicitly discussed his desire to manipulate and control VGTel's stock price. For example, on August 12, 2013, Individual 3 and Durante (using an alias) were discussing via email opening a trading account for one of Individual 1's clients. Durante wrote to Individual 3 and asked him to control bidding at approximately $1.04 per share: "Please set these accounts up for [an Individual 1 client]. Ted [Wise] will be out of office until the afternoon. He will call you when available. Please keep bids in the 1.04/05 range and he will give you further details."

47. Durante's and Individual 3's manipulative trading caused VGTel's share price to steadily increase from $0.25 in April 2013 to $1.90 in October 2013.

48. At times, Durante placed matched VGTel stock purchase and sell orders during the course of one telephone call to Individual 3. For example, during the same call, Durante would place a VGTel stock sell order on behalf of New Market or Zenith to be matched at the same price and share amount against a VGTel stock purchase order on behalf of one of Individual 1's or Individual 2's clients.

49. The trading proceeds and funds sent to New Market or Zenith by investors were transferred to Durante, or made available for Durante's personal use, by Individual 5, who opened bank accounts and trading accounts to facilitate Durante's fraudulent conduct.
