The proposed amendments, which apply to funds relying on certain exemptive rules, are designed to enhance the independence and effectiveness of fund boards and to improve their ability to protect the interests of the funds and fund shareholders they serve.

DATES: Comments must be received on or before March 10, 2004.

I. Background

Investment companies typically are formed as corporations or business trusts under state law and, like other business organizations, must be operated for the benefit of their shareholders. Under the Investment Company Act, each fund must have a board of directors, which is elected by shareholders to represent their interests. Fund boards are fully empowered with authority to manage all of the fund’s affairs, although most delegate management responsibility to the fund adviser over whom they retain oversight responsibility.

In 2001, we recognized the need to improve governance standards and adopted rules to improve the effectiveness of the independent directors 3 and their ability to deal with fund managers. 4 These rules, which apply to funds relying on certain of our exemptive rules, require that boards have a majority of independent directors, that independent directors select and nominate independent directors, and that independent directors, when they hire counsel, hire only counsel that does not have substantial ties to fund managers. 5 The rules required funds to make modest improvements to their governance practices.

Recent events, however, suggest we need to revisit the governance of funds. We and state regulators have brought a number of enforcement actions involving late trading, inappropriate marketing timing activities and misuse of nonpublic information about fund portfolios. 6 These enforcement actions reflect a serious breakdown in management controls in more than just a few mutual fund complexes. In each case, the fund was used for the benefit of fund insiders rather than fund shareholders. In this respect, the enforcement cases bear a striking similarity to the abuses that led to the enactment of the Investment Company Act. 7

The Investment Company Act relies heavily on fund boards of directors to manage conflicts of interest that are

See, e.g. rule 12b–1(c) [17 CFR 270.12b–1(c)].

See, e.g., in the Matter of Alliance Capital Management, L.P., Investment Company Act Release No. 26312 (Dec. 30, 2003) (“Alliance Capital Management”) (finding that an investment adviser violated its fiduciary duty to the fund by failing to disclose agreements, and making special accommodations, to permit select investors to engage in market timing transactions in exchange for the maintenance of "sticky assets," and finding that the investment adviser divulged material nonpublic information about fund information about fund shareholders); In the Matter of Putnam Investment Management, Investment Company Act Release No. 26322 (Nov. 13, 2003) (“Putnam Investment Management”) (finding that an investment adviser failed to disclose potentially self-dealing transactions in shares of funds managed by several of its employees, failed to have procedures reasonably designed to prevent misuse of material nonpublic information, and failed to reasonably supervise the employees who committed violations); in the Matter of Connelly, Investment Company Act Release No. 26209 (Oct. 16, 2003) (finding that a former executive of an investment adviser to a fund complex approved agreements that permitted select investors to engage in market timing transactions in certain funds in the complex, in exchange for the maintenance of "sticky assets"); In the Matter of Markowitz, Investment Company Act Release No. 26201 (Oct. 2, 2003) (finding that a former fund trader violated the federal securities laws and defrauded investors by engaging in late trading of mutual fund shares).

See Sen. Rep. No. 76–1775, at 6 (1940) ("[I]nvestments of the securities of [investment companies] offer manifold opportunities for exploitation by the unscrupulous managements of some companies. fund adviser inevitably has with the fund. The effectiveness of a fund board and the influence of its independent directors depend on both the quality of the directors and the governance practices they adopt. Our concern is that in many fund groups, including some of the fund complexes that have been the subject of our enforcement cases, the fund adviser exerts a dominant influence over the board. Because of its monopoly over information about the fund and its frequent ability to control the board’s agenda, the adviser is in a position to attempt to impede directors from exercising their oversight role. In some cases, boards may have abdicated their responsibilities, or failed to ask the tough questions of advisers; in other cases, boards may have lacked the information or organizational structure necessary to play their proper role.

II. Discussion

The Commission is proposing to amend ten of our exemptive rules to require any fund that relies on any of them to adopt certain fund governance standards, which we discuss below, in addition to those adopted by the Commission in 2001. Each of these rules, which we have listed in the margin below, (i) exempts funds or their affiliated persons from a provision of the Act, and (ii) has as a condition the approval or oversight of independent directors. For convenience, we will refer to these rules as the “Exemptive Rules.”

The Exemptive Rules typically relieve funds from statutory prohibitions that preclude certain types of transactions or arrangements that would involve serious conflicts of interest. We are also proposing to require that funds retain, for our examination, copies of written materials that the board considers when approving the fund’s advisory contract.

In proposing these rules, we recognize that there is a tension between the role

The Investment Company Act places specific responsibilities on fund boards and the independent directors. In evaluating and approving a fund’s advisory contract (sections 15(a) and 15(c) [15 U.S.C. 80a–15(a) and 80a–15(c)], approving the fund’s principal underwriting contract (section 12(d)(1) [15 U.S.C. 80a–20(a)(1)]), and valuing certain securities held by the fund (section 2(a)(11) [15 U.S.C. 80a–2(a)(11)]), in addition, state law generally places responsibility on directors to oversee all operations of a fund. See Jean Gleason Stromberg, Governance of Investment Companies, in The Investment fund management and compliance controls evidenced by our enforcement cases raises troubling questions about the ability of many fund boards, as presently constituted, to effectively oversee the management of funds. The failure of a board to play its proper role can result, in addition to serious compliance breakdowns, in excessive fees and brokerage commissions, less than forthright disclosure, mispricing of securities, and inferior investment performance.

We believe that a fund board must be “an independent force in [fund] affairs rather than a passive affiliate of management.” Its independent directors must bring to the boardroom “a high degree of rigor and skeptical objectivity to the evaluation of [fund] management and its plans and proposals,” particularly when evaluating conflicts of interest. To empower independent directors to better serve as an effective check on fund management, we are proposing to require funds to adopt better governance practices. Funds and other companies now are required by exchange listing standards to have similar practices in place. Many have been adopted voluntarily by some fund complexes.

Company Regulation Deskbook §§ 4.1–2 (Amy L. Goodman ed., 1997). Many of our exemptive rules rely heavily on independent directors to approve transactions and review practices involving conflicts of interest that otherwise would be prohibited by the Act.

In some cases, fund boards appear to have been deceived, misled or not informed as to the existence of serious compliance lapses. Our new compliance rule, which requires each fund to designate a chief compliance officer reporting directly to the fund’s board, should get boards the information they need about compliance matters. See Compliance Adopting Release, supra note 9.

The best example here is the mutual fund industry, where conflicts of interests are commonplace and traditional checks and balances are often absent, such as vigorous shareholder voting and hostile tender offers do not exist.”) Id. at 814.

We recently approved amendments to the corporate governance listing standards of the New York Stock Exchange (“NYSE”) and NASD. Although many closed-end funds are listed on the NYSE, several of the corporate governance listing standards recently adopted are applicable to closed-end funds. See Securities Exchange Act Release No. 48745 (Nov. 4, 2003) [68 FR 64154 (Nov. 12, 2003)]. We also approved proposed changes to the corporate governance standards of the NYSE itself. Securities Exchange Act Release No. 48764 (Nov. 7, 2003) [68 FR 64380 (Nov. 13, 2003)].

16 The rules proposed to be amended are: Rule 10b–3 (permissively fund to purchase securities in a primary offering when an affiliated broker-dealer is a member of the underscoring syndicate); Rule 12b–1 (permissively fund to use fund assets to pay distribution expenses); Rule 15a–4(b)(2) (permissively fund boards to approve inter-advisory contracts without shareholder approval where the adviser or a controlling person receives a benefit in connection with the assignment of the prior contract); Rule 17a–7 (permitting securities transactions between a fund and another client of the fund investment adviser); Rule 17a–8 (permissively mergers between certain affiliated funds); Rule 17d–1(a)(7) (permitting funds and their affiliates to purchase joint liability insurance policies); Rule 17e–1 (specifying conditions under which funds may pay commissions to affiliated brokers in connection with the sale of securities on an exchange); Rule 17g–4(i) (permitting funds to maintain joint insured bonds); Rule 18f–3 (permitting funds to issue multiple classes of voting stock); and Rule 23c–1 (permitting the operation of interval funds by enabling closed-end funds to repurchase their shares from investors).

Last October we proposed a new exemptive rule, rule 15a–5, that would also be conditioned on meeting the fund governance standards that are currently included in these ten exemptive rules. See Exemption from Shareholder Approval for Certain Subadvisory Contracts, Investment Company Act Release No. 26299 (Dec. 17, 2003) [68 FR 64152 (Oct. 23, 2003)]. If we adopt the fund governance standards proposed in the current Release, we also intend to adopt those standards as a condition of rule 15a–5. of the board and that of the investment adviser, and that our rules need to strike the proper balance between management and oversight. Funds meet the investment needs and fulfill the expectations of their shareholders because of the efforts and skill of their investment advisers. Investors do not generally invest in a fund because of the skill or reputation of its board of directors. Nonetheless, the ultimate responsibility for the fund lies with its board of directors, whose oversight is critical because of the unique set of conflicts that an investment adviser has with the fund. We ask commenters to address whether our proposals strike the proper balance.

A. Board Composition

We propose to require that any fund relying on any of the Exemptive Rules have a board of directors whose independent directors constitute at least seventy-five percent of the board.17 The Investment Company Act currently requires that at least forty percent of the board be independent,18 and our 2001 amendments to the Exemptive Rules require that a majority of the board be independent.19 These 2001 amendments largely codified current mutual fund practices at the time we adopted them.20 When we proposed the 2001 amendments, we considered requiring that independent directors comprise a supermajority of the fund boards, and observed that such a requirement “could change the dynamics of board decision making in favor of the interests of investors.”22 Commenters supporting amendments to the Exemptive Rules 17 have a board of directors whose independent directors constitute at least seventy-five percent of the board.23 The Investment Company Act currently requires that at least forty percent of the board be independent,19 and our 2001 amendments to the Exemptive Rules require that a majority of the board be independent.20 These 2001 amendments largely codified current mutual fund practices at the time we adopted them.21 When we proposed the 2001 amendments, we considered requiring that independent directors comprise a supermajority of the fund boards, and observed that such a requirement “could change the dynamics of board decision making in favor of the interests of investors.”22 Commenters supporting

We request comment on the proposed seventy-five percent requirement. Is any change from the current requirement necessary? Should the requirement be higher? Should it be lower? Should it be phrased in terms other than a fraction or percentage, e.g., that all directors, or all directors but one, must be independent? We also request comment on the appropriate period of time over which, if we adopt the new requirement, it should be phased in.24 Would eighteen months be sufficient?25

B. Independent Chairman of the Board

We propose to require that the chairman of the fund board be an independent director.26 The Investment Company Act and state law are silent on who will fill this important role on fund boards. Today, a director who is also an officer of the fund’s investment adviser serves as chairman of most, but not all, fund boards. In many cases, he (or she) also is the chief executive officer of the adviser. This practice may contribute to the adviser’s ability to dominate the actions of the board of directors.

The chairman of a fund board can largely control the board’s agenda, which may include matters not welcomed by the adviser. The board is required to consider some matters annually in connection with the renewal of the advisory contract, but other matters the board considers at its discretion, such as termination of service providers, including the adviser.27 Perhaps more important, the chairman of the board can have a substantial influence on the fund boardroom’s culture. The boardroom culture can foster (or suppress) the type of meaningful dialogue between fund management and independent directors that is critical for healthy fund governance. It can support (or diminish) the role of the independent directors in the continuous, active engagement of fund management necessary for them to fulfill their duties.

recommends that independent directors constitute at least two-thirds of the fund board. The ICI’s Board of Governors endorsed these best practices in 1999. ICI Advisory Group Report, supra note 15.

Proposed rule 0-1(a)(7) would include the requirement that currently appears in the Exemptive Rules, that the fund’s independent directors must select and nominate other independent directors. See proposed rule 0-1(a)(7)(ii).

25 See 2001 Adopting Release, supra note 4, at Section III.B (permitting funds 18 months to comply with fund governance amendments to Exemptive Rules).

26 See proposed rule 0-1(a)(7)(iii).

27 Under section 15(a)(3) of the Act [15 U.S.C. 80a–15(a)(3)], the advisory contract must permit the fund board to terminate the advisory contract on no more than 60 days’ notice.
A boardroom culture conducive to decisions favoring the long-term interest of fund shareholders may be more likely to prevail when the board chairman does not have the conflicts of interest inherent in his role as an executive of the fund adviser.\textsuperscript{29} Moreover, a fund board may be more effective when negotiating with the fund adviser over matters such as the advisory fee if it were not at the same time led by an executive of the adviser with whom it is negotiating.\textsuperscript{29} If such negotiation leads to lower advisory and other fees, shareholders would stand to benefit substantially.\textsuperscript{30}

We request comment on this proposed amendment. Would it strike the correct balance between management of the fund and the proper role of independent directors? Could it improve the boardroom culture we discussed above? Would it reduce the ability of the fund adviser to dominate the board? Or, as some have asserted, would an independent board chairman actually weaken fund governance because an independent director could not effectively lead the board through a discussion of a detailed and, in some respects, complex agenda?\textsuperscript{31} Comment is specifically requested on this point from members of those fund boards currently chaired by independent directors.

Are there alternatives that would serve the same or similar purposes? For example, should we instead require independent directors to appoint a lead director, who would chair separate meetings of the independent directors, act as their spokesperson and interact with their independent legal counsel?\textsuperscript{32} Should the chairman of all board committees, or certain board committees, also be required to be an independent director? Should we require instead that the chairman—whether or not independent—be elected annually by both a majority of the board as a whole and by a majority of the independent directors? Is a requirement mandating an independent chairman necessary if the Commission adopts a supermajority requirement, as discussed in Section II.A, supra, since a majority may empower the independent directors to select the appropriate person to serve as chairman, whether or not independent? Similarly, is a requirement mandating an independent chairman even necessary under current standards that generally mandate a majority of independent directors?

(“Executive Summary”) (2003) (prepared testimony of Jane F. Schenecker, Vice President, Capital Research and Management Company, and Chairman, Investment Company Institute) (http://financialservices.house.gov/media/pdf/061803jps.pdf) (proposing not appropriate to require mutual funds to have an independent chairman of the board. In many cases, a person needs to be intimately familiar with the operations of a company in order to be an effective chairman, and a management representative is often in the best position to do this.

Similar criticisms also have been raised of proposals to split the roles of the chairman and the chief executive officer of operating companies. See, e.g., The Conference Board, The Commission on Public Trust and Private Enterprise: Findings and Recommendations 2003 (“Conference Board Recommendations”) at 1.35 (dissenting opinion of John H. Biggs) (http://www.conference-board.org/knowledge/governCommission.cfm)” (“[I]f [organization of the board meeting] is done in a perfunctory way, say the day before the meeting, it is probably irrelevant. However, to do this competently, [the chairman] would have to devote substantial effort to examining the company’s operations, discussing with the CEO and others in senior management the issues currently confronting the company, and probably ‘rehearsing’ the meeting to be sure those issues can be discussed neatly.”)

\textsuperscript{32} See ICI Advisory Group Report, supra note 15, at 25 (recommending as a best practice that the independent directors of a fund appoint a lead independent director).

C. Annual Self-Assessment

We also propose to require fund directors to perform an evaluation, at least once annually, of the effectiveness of the board and its committees.\textsuperscript{33} The self-assessment process is designed to improve fund performance by strengthening directors’ understanding of their role and fostering better communications and greater cohesiveness.\textsuperscript{34} It gives directors an opportunity to step back and review their own performance, so that they can best consider any changes in their governance practices.\textsuperscript{35}

The self-evaluation should focus on both substantive and procedural aspects of the board’s operations. Our proposed rule would leave for the directors to decide those aspects of board operations they should address in their evaluation, except for two procedural matters. First, we propose to require the directors to consider the effectiveness of the board’s committee structure. Fund boards, like corporate boards, often designate board committees to which they delegate certain functions and activities.\textsuperscript{36} The proposed requirement is designed to focus the board’s attention on the need to create, consolidate or revise the various board committees, such as the audit, nominating, or pricing committees. The requirement also is designed to facilitate a critical assessment of the current board committees.\textsuperscript{37}

Second, we would have the directors carefully evaluate whether they have taken on the responsibility for overseeing too many funds.\textsuperscript{38} Directors often serve on a large number of fund boards within a fund complex.\textsuperscript{39} This \textsuperscript{34} See Katherine McG. Sullivan and Holly J. Gregory, Creating a Board Self-Evaluation Methodology, The Metropolitan Corporate Counsel, Mar. 1996, at 1, 12.

\textsuperscript{37} We would expect that the minutes of the board of directors would reflect the substance of the matters discussed during the board’s annual self-assessment.

\textsuperscript{38} See proposed rule 0–1(a)(7)(iv).

\textsuperscript{39} See, e.g., Tufano and Sevick, supra note 22, at 333–334 (for the 50 largest funds sampled, the average number of boards on which a director serves is 16, with the highest being 151); Raj Varma, An Empirical Examination of Sponsor Influence Over the Board of Directors, 38 Fin. Rev. 55 (2003) practice has over the years generated some criticism that directors are unable to pay adequate attention to their obligations to each fund.40 Others, however, strongly support the practice as a necessary recognition that many issues facing a particular fund in a fund group are common to all of the funds, and argue that it may actually give directors greater leverage when dealing with the common adviser. 41 It would be difficult to determine the optimum number of funds that a particular director or group of directors can serve, which should depend upon a number of factors.42 We are, however, sufficiently concerned that we are proposing to ask directors to evaluate each year this aspect of their service on fund boards.

We request comment on our proposed self-evaluation requirement. Should we require boards to make written reports of their self-assessment? We also request comment on whether we should ask directors to evaluate their committee structures and the number of boards on which they serve. Should we require that boards form committees to address certain matters? Should we restrict the number of fund boards on which a director serves? Should we specify what should be the maximum number of fund directorships any individual should hold? Alternatively, should boards be required to adopt policies on the number of other boards that directors may serve? Should service on non-fund boards factor into any limitation? Should we require that boards also consider how frequently they meet, in light of the number of funds that they oversee?

D. Separate Sessions

We propose that independent directors be required to meet at least once quarterly in a separate session at which no interested persons of the fund are present.43 Such meetings, which we understand are held by many fund boards, would afford independent directors the opportunity for a frank and candid discussion among themselves regarding the management of the fund, including its strengths and weaknesses. Regularly required sessions would prevent any “negative inferences from attaching to the calling of such executive sessions.”44 The requirement is also designed to help strengthen the collegiality and cohesiveness of the independent directors. We request comment on this proposed amendment. Should separate sessions be held more or less frequently than quarterly?

E. Independent Director Staff

We are proposing that any fund relying on any Exemptive Rule explicitly authorize the independent directors to hire employees and others to help the independent directors fulfill their fiduciary duties.45 Use of staff and experts may be important to help independent directors deal with matters that are beyond the level of their expertise, or help give them an understanding of better practices among mutual funds.46

We request comment on this proposed amendment. If independent directors receive this explicit authority, are they likely to hire their own staff? Should the rule require independent directors to hire their own staff?47 If so, should such a requirement be limited to funds with a certain minimum amount of assets under management? Should the staff be employed by the fund rather than the fund’s adviser? Should we also require that committees of the board be explicitly authorized to hire their own staff or experts?48

We also request comment on whether we ought to require that independent directors have an independent legal counsel. In 2001, we began to require that independent directors, if they retain counsel, retain “independent legal counsel,” i.e., counsel who the independent directors determine at least annually is free of significant conflicts.

40 See, e.g., Mutual Funds: Trading Practices and Abuses That Harm Investors: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Financial Management, the Budget, and International Security of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, 108th Cong., 1st Sess. (2003) (statement of Senator Susan M. Collins) [webcast: http://govt-aff.senate.gov/index.cfm?Fuseaction=Hearings_Details&HearingID=1241] (“There are, in fact, plenty of fund family directors who serve on the boards for 80 or even 90 different funds, which seems too many to me. The chairman of Bank of America’s Nations Fund sits on the boards of 85 funds. The chairman at Janus sits on 113 funds. Now, I realize that many of the funds have similar structures and approaches so there might be some economies of scale, if you will. But it’s hard for me to see how anyone, one director could effectively monitor the activities of so many different entities.”); Tufano and Sevick, supra note 22, at 329 (“The potential for conflicts of interest may be compounded when the independent directors serve on multiple boards for a single fund sponsor.”) * * By seeking to protect the current and future stream of compensation from existing and new board membership, an independent director’s interests could become more closely aligned with fund sponsor than with the shareholders of the fund, leading to less vigilant oversight and higher fees.”); Varma, supra note 39 (“A more important factor that can weaken director independence is multiple board service for the sponsor.”); Geoffrey Smith, Mutual Funds: Investors Are Still in the Dark, Bus. Wk., Apr. 29, 2002, at 90 (“the independent directors are often on the boards of so many of the funds in the same family that it’s hard to distinguish them from full-time employees.”); Anna Robaton, et al., Is There a Cashier Part-Time Job? Board Stiffs: Pay Swell for Fund Directors, Investment News, Feb. 22, 1999, at 1 (quoting Barry Barbash, “What troubles me more is the number of fund boards on which a director serves.”).

41 See ICI Advisory Group Report, supra note 15, at 28 (“Service on multiple boards can provide the independent directors of those boards with an opportunity to obtain better familiarity with the many aspects of fund operations that are complex in nature. In so doing, the independent directors can gain greater access to the fund’s adviser and greater influence with the adviser than they would have if there were a separate board for each fund in the complex.”).

42 Funds must disclose to shareholders in their statements of additional information and proxy statements the number of fund boards on which each director serves. See 17 CFR 247.11A [requiring disclosure of the number of portfolios in the fund complex overseen by each director]; Schedule 14A, Item 7 [17 CFR 240.14a–101 (Item 7)]; 17 CFR 229.401 [Item 401(a)(i)].
of interest that might affect their legal advice. At that time, we did not require that independent directors retain independent legal counsel. We noted, however, that the likely result of our rule amendments would be that many fund directors would seek independent legal counsel. We also cited with approval an American Bar Association Report stating that “[t]he complexities of the Investment Company Act, the nature of the separate responsibilities of independent directors and the inherent conflicts of interest between a mutual fund and its managers effectively require that independent directors seek the advice of counsel in understanding and discharging their special responsibilities.” Should we take the next step and require independent legal counsel?

F. Recordkeeping for Approval of Advisory Contracts

Finally, we propose to amend rule 31a–2, the fund recordkeeping rule, to require retain copies of the written materials that directors consider in approving an advisory contract under section 15 of the Investment Company Act. Section 15 requires that fund directors, including a majority of independent directors, approve the fund’s advisory contract each year. It also requires that the directors first obtain from the adviser the information reasonably necessary to evaluate the contract. The information request requirement in section 15 provides fund directors, including independent directors, a tool for obtaining the information they need to represent shareholder interests. Careful consideration of the information enables them to better negotiate the amount of the advisory fee.

Conversely, the failure of a board to acquire information sufficient to scrutinize the advisory fee and other fund expenses can suggest an inability or lack of interest on the part of the board in negotiating on behalf of the fund. In this regard, the Mutual Fund Directors Forum, an independent organization that advises fund directors, is preparing best practices recommendations for directors on the types of information that they should request and consider when reviewing advisory contracts.

As part of our examinations of funds, our staff has reviewed the materials that directors considered in approving the advisory contract, if the materials were available. Our examiners have found that the nature and quality of these materials vary widely among funds. Some fund boards have failed to request the materials they need to make an informed assessment of the advisory contract. In one case, we brought an enforcement action against directors who neglected to request and evaluate sufficient information under section 15(c).

Our compliance examiners also have reported that often they are unable to determine whether the requirements of section 15 of the Act were met, in part because the funds did not retain the materials that the board considered in approving the advisory contract. We propose to address this problem by amending our recordkeeping rules. Funds would retain the materials on which the board relied in approving the advisory contract, for at least six years, the first two years in an easily accessible place.

We request comment on the proposed amendment to our fund recordkeeping rule. Are there any reasons why a fund would not be able to keep some or all of the required documents? Are there additional documents that funds should maintain that are relevant to the directors’ consideration of the advisory contract? Should we require that funds maintain the records for a period shorter or longer than six years? We also specifically request comment, as required by section 31a(2) of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a–30(a)(2)], that commenters address whether there are feasible alternatives to the proposed amendment that would minimize the recordkeeping burdens, the necessity of these records in facilitating the examinations carried out by our staff, the costs of maintaining the required records, and any effects that the proposed recordkeeping requirements would have on the nature of firms’ internal compliance policies and procedures.

III. General Request for Comments

The Commission requests comment on the rule amendments proposed in this Release, suggestions for additional provisions or changes to existing rules, and comments on other matters that might have an effect on the proposals in this Release. We note that comments that are of greatest assistance are those that are accompanied by supporting data and analysis of the issues addressed in those comments.

IV. Paperwork Reduction Act

Certain provisions of the proposals contain “collection of information” requirements within the meaning of the Persons wishing to submit comments on the collection of information requirements of the proposed amendments should direct them to the Office of Management and Budget, Attention Desk Officer of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Room 10102, New Executive Office Building, Washington, DC 20503, and should send a copy to Jonathan G. Katz, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 Fifth Street, NW., Washington, DC 20549–0609, with reference to File No. S7–03–04. OMB is required to make a decision concerning the collection of information between 30 and 60 days after publication of this Release; therefore a comment to OMB is best assured of having its full effect if OMB receives it within 30 days after publication of this Release. Requests for materials submitted to OMB by the Commission with regard to this collection of information should be in writing, refer to File No. S7–03–04, and be submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission, Records Management, Office of Filings and Information Services.

V. Cost-Benefit Analysis

We are sensitive to the costs and benefits imposed by our rules. As discussed in section II above, we are proposing to require that funds relying on any of the Exemptive Rules adopt certain governance practices that are designed to enhance the independence and effectiveness of fund boards. We also are proposing to require that funds maintain materials considered by a fund board when approving an advisory contract.

A. Benefits

We believe that funds and fund shareholders are likely to benefit from the proposals, which are designed to strengthen the role of independent directors so that fund boards can more effectively manage conflicts of interest, monitor service providers, and protect the interests of fund shareholders. The proposed amendments are designed to enhance the independence and effectiveness of independent directors, who are charged with overseeing the fund’s activities and transactions under the Exemptive Rules. Boards that meet these conditions should be more effective at exerting an independent influence over fund management. Their independent directors should be more likely to have their primary loyalty to the fund’s shareholders rather than the advisor.

A board of directors whose independent directors constitute at least seventy-five percent of the board may help strengthen the hand of the independent directors when dealing with fund management, and may help assure that independent directors maintain control of the board in the event of the illness or absence of other independent directors. Requiring fund boards to be chaired by an independent director should provide similar benefits. The chairman of a fund board can have a substantial influence on the fund boardroom’s culture, which can foster (or suppress) meaningful dialogue between fund management and independent directors and can support (or diminish) the role of the independent directors in fund management. We expect that the opportunity for frank and candid discussions among independent directors will increase their effectiveness.

Requiring funds to explicitly authorize the independent directors to hire employees should help independent directors fulfill their fiduciary duties. Use of staff and experts may be particularly important to help independent directors address complex matters or provide an understanding of the practices of other mutual funds. This requirement should provide substantial benefits to shareholders by helping to ensure that independent directors are better able to fulfill their role of representing shareholder interests.

Finally, the proposed annual self-assessment of the effectiveness of the fund and its committees is intended to improve fund performance by strengthening directors’ understanding of their role and fostering better communications and greater cohesiveness. Moreover, the self-assessment could help identify potential weaknesses and deficiencies.

The proposed recordkeeping amendment is designed to improve the documentation of a fund board’s basis for approving an advisory contract, which would assist our examination staff in determining whether fund directors are fulfilling their fiduciary duties when approving advisory contracts. The proposed amendment to rule 31a–2 would underscore the importance of the information requests that precede the directors’ consideration of the advisory contract. Further, it may encourage independent directors to request more information, and this information may enable them to obtain more favorable terms in advisory contracts. These amendments would benefit both shareholders and the Commission by enabling the Commission’s staff to monitor the independent directors’ determination of whether their counsel is independent.

The proposed amendments seek to promote strong fund boards that effectively perform their oversight role. By increasing the independence of fund boards, the amendments are designed to improve the quality of the oversight of the process for the benefit of fund shareholders. Vigilant and informed oversight by strong, effective and independent fund board may help to prevent problems such as late trading and market timing. These benefits may increase investor confidence in fund management. While these benefits are not easily quantifiable in terms of dollars, we believe they are real, and that the proposed amendments will strengthen the hand of independent directors to the advantage of shareholders.

B. Costs

The proposals would impose additional costs on funds that rely on an Exemptive Rule by requiring them to satisfy the fund governance standards in proposed rule 0–1a(7). The proposals would require that independent directors constitute at least seventy-five percent of the fund board. Our staff estimates that nearly sixty percent of all funds currently meet this requirement. Therefore, this proposal would impose costs on funds that do not already meet this standard. A fund could comply with this requirement in one of three ways: (i) Decrease the size of its board and allow some inside directors to resign; (ii) maintain the current size of its board and replace some inside directors with independent directors; or (iii) increase the size of its board and elect new independent directors. If a fund were to hold a shareholder election, it would incur costs to prepare proxy statements and hold the shareholder meeting. A fund also would incur costs of finding qualified candidates and compensating those new independent directors. We have no reliable basis for determining the costs associated with electing independent directors, however, because we have no reliable basis for determining how funds would choose to satisfy this requirement. We request comment on the manner in which funds would likely choose to satisfy a seventy-five percent independence requirement.

The proposals also would require: (i) An independent director to be chairman of the board; (ii) directors to perform an evaluation of the board and its committees, at least once annually; (iii) independent directors to meet in an executive session at which no interested person of the fund is present, at least once quarterly; and (iv) independent directors to be given specific authority to hire employees. We are not aware of any out-of-pocket costs that would result from the first three items because these requirements could be performed at a regularly scheduled board meeting. We are not aware of any costs associated with the fourth item because boards typically have this authority under state law, and the rule would not require them to hire employees. We request comment on the costs of the first three items, and on whether boards would choose to hire employees.

The proposal that funds retain copies of materials considered by the board in approving advisory contracts would result in increased recordkeeping costs. Our staff anticipates that the cost increases will be limited, however, because many if not most funds already maintain the documents that the proposed amendment would require them to keep. Even for firms that do not already maintain such records, our staff anticipates that the costs of the proposed amendment will be limited. This recordkeeping proposal merely requires the retention of documents already prepared. Further, as with other records, funds would be able to maintain the required records electronically. For purposes of the Paperwork Reduction Act, our staff estimates that each fund would spend a total of 0.5 hours annually and a total of $9.46 for clerical time to comply with this proposal, and that all fund would spend a total of 2,562 hours annually and a total of $48,473.04 annually to comply with this proposal. We request comment on the number of funds that already retain these materials, and on the costs of retaining such materials. We also request comment on whether directors, as a result of the proposed amendment, are likely to request more written materials from investment advisers.

C. Request for Comments

We request comment on the potential costs and benefits of the proposals. We encourage commenters to identify, discuss, analyze, and supply relevant data regarding any additional costs and benefits. For purposes of the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Act of 1996, we also request information regarding the potential impact of the proposals on the U.S. economy on an annual basis. Commenters are requested to provide data to support their views.

VI. Initial Regulatory Flexibility Analysis

This Initial Regulatory Flexibility Analysis ("IRFA") has been prepared in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 603. It relates to the proposed amendments to the Commission’s rules relating to independent directors of investment companies.

A. Reasons for the Proposed Action

As described more fully in Section I of this Release, the reasons for the proposed amendments are that the Investment Company Act relies heavily on fund boards of directors to manage conflicts of interest that the fund adviser inevitably has with the fund, and the breakdown in fund management and compliance controls evidenced by our enforcement cases raises troubling questions about the ability of many fund boards, as presently constituted, to effectively oversee the management of funds.

B. Objectives of the Proposed Action

As described more fully in Section II of this Release, the objectives of the proposed amendments, which would apply to funds relying on any of the Exemptive Rules, are to enhance the independence and effectiveness of fund boards and to improve their ability to protect the interests of the funds and fund shareholders they serve.

C. Legal Basis

The proposed amendment to rule 0–1 and proposed amendments to the Exemptive Rules are proposed pursuant to the authority set forth in sections 6(c), 10(f), 12(b), 17(d), 17(g), 23(c), and 38(a) of the Investment Company Act. The proposed amendment to rule 31a–2 is proposed pursuant to the authority set forth in sections 12(b) and 31(a).69

D. Small Entities Subject to the Proposed Rule and Amendments

A small business or small organization (collectively, “small entity”) for purposes of the Regulatory Flexibility Act is a fund that, together with other funds in the same group of related investment companies, has net assets of $50 million or less as of the end of its most recent fiscal year.70 Of approximately 5,124 registered investment companies, approximately 204 are small entities.71 As discussed above, the proposed amendments would require funds relying on an Exemptive Rule to comply with proposed rule 0–1(a)(7) and all funds to retain records under proposed rule 31a–2. Whether these proposed amendments to the Exemptive Rules would affect small entities would depend on whether the small entities rely on an Exemptive Rule.72 Under proposed rule 31a–2, all small entities would be required to maintain records of materials consulted by a fund board when approving an advisory contract. We request comment on the effects and costs of these proposed amendments on small entities.

E. Reporting, Recordkeeping, and Other Compliance Requirements

The proposals do not introduce any new mandatory reporting requirements. The proposals contain mandatory recordkeeping requirements. Any fund, regardless of size, would be required to maintain records of written materials that directors consider to approve an advisory contract. The proposed amendments also would introduce new compliance requirements for any fund that relies on an Exemptive Rule. Any fund that relies on an Exemptive Rule would be required to satisfy the fund governance standards in proposed rule 0–1(a)(7), including having: (i) A board of directors whose independent directors constitute seventy-five percent of the board; (ii) an independent director be chairman of the board; (iii) directors perform an evaluation of the board and its committees, at least once annually; (iv) independent directors meet in an executive session at which no interested person of the fund is present, at least once quarterly; and (v) independent directors be given specific authority to hire employees and others for the independent directors.

F. Duplicative, Overlapping, or Conflicting Federal Rules

We have not identified any federal rules that duplicate, overlap, or conflict with the proposed amendments.

G. Significant Alternatives

The Regulatory Flexibility Act directs us to consider significant alternatives that would accomplish the stated objective, while minimizing any significant adverse impact on small entities. Alternatives in this category would include: (i) Establishing different compliance or reporting standards that take into account the resources available to small entities; (ii) clarifying, consolidating, or simplifying the compliance requirements under the rule for small entities; (iii) using performance rather than design standards; and (iv) exempting small entities from coverage of the rule, or any part of the rule.

With respect to the establishment of special compliance requirements or timetables under the proposals for small entities, we do not presently think this is feasible or necessary. The proposals arise from enforcement actions and settlements that underscore the need to strengthen the role of independent directors so that fund boards can more effectively manage conflicts of interest, monitor service providers, and protect the interests of fund shareholders. Exempting small entities from the proposed amendments could disadvantage fund shareholders of small entities and compromise the effectiveness of the proposed amendments.

H. Solicitation of Comments

We encourage the submission of comments with respect to any aspect of this IRFA. Comment is specifically requested on the number of small entities that would be affected by the proposed amendments, and the likely impact of the proposals on small entities. Commenters are asked to describe the nature of any impact and provide empirical data supporting the extent of the impact. These comments will be considered in connection with the adoption of the proposed rule and amendments, and reflected in the Final Regulatory Flexibility Analysis.

Comments should be submitted in triplicate to Jonathan G. Katz, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 Fifth Street NW., Washington, DC 20549–0609. Comments also may be submitted electronically to the following E-mail address: rule-comment@sec.gov. All comment letters should refer to File No. S7–03–04; this file number should be included on the subject line if E-mail is used.73

VII. Efficiency, Competition and Capital Formation

Section 2(c) of the Investment Company Act requires the Commission, when engaging in rulemaking that requires it to consider or determine whether an action is necessary or appropriate in the public interest, to consider whether the action will promote efficiency, competition, and capital formation. The proposal to require that funds maintain materials considered by a fund board when approving an advisory contract is designed to improve the documentation of a fund board’s basis for approving an advisory contract, which would assist our examinations staff in determining whether fund directors are fulfilling their fiduciary duties when approving advisory contracts. We do not anticipate that these proposals will have a significant effect on efficiency, competition and capital formation with regard to funds because the costs associated with the proposals are minimal and many funds have already adopted some of the proposed practices. To the extent that these proposals do affect competition and capital formation, we believe that the effect will be positive because the proposals would likely reduce the risk of securities law violations such as late trading in mutual funds and market timing violations, and thus increase investor confidence in mutual funds.

We request comments on whether the proposed rule amendments, if adopted, would promote efficiency, competition, and capital formation. Will the proposed amendments or their resulting costs materially affect the efficiency, competition, and capital formation of funds? Comments will be considered by the Commission in satisfying its responsibilities under section 2(c) of the Investment Company Act. Commenters are requested to provide empirical data and other factual support for their views to the extent possible.

Statutory Authority

We are proposing amendments to rule 0–1(a) and the Exemptive Rules pursuant to the authority set forth in sections 6(c), 10(f), 12(b), 17(d), 17(g), 23(c), and 38(a) of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a–6(c), 80a–10(f), 80a–12(b), 80a–17(d), 80a–17(g), 80a–23(c), and 80a–37(a)]. We are proposing amendments to rule 31a–2 under the Investment Company Act pursuant to the authority set forth in sections 12(b) and 31(a) [80a–12(b) and 80a–31(a)].
